'Inflation still big foe'

Budget hits out at jobless benefits

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald announced tougher unemployment insurance rules Tuesday night in a budget that otherwise breaks no new ground in taxation or economic management.

Inflation remains the main enemy, the 44-year-old minister told the Commons in his first budget. And there are to be no drastic policy shifts despite the country's high rate of unemployment.

"I'd rather be seen as unimaginative rather than foolhardy," Macdonald told reporters who quizzed him about the absence of major new measures.

The budget includes only minor changes affecting individual taxpayers. But the total take from personal income tax is forecast to increase by about 26 per cent this fiscal year to $16 billion because of rising taxable incomes.

There are tax breaks for companies, including small business, and an end to a current dividend freeze in October.

A projected budget deficit of about $5 billion—roughly the same as last year—on total spending in excess of $41 billion, will have a "mildly stimulative" impact on the economy, Macdonald said.

Proposed changes to the operation of the unemployment insurance program will stretch the qualifying period for benefits to 12 weeks work from the present eight weeks. The changes require legislation before taking effect.

As an energy-conservation measure, the budget will extend a special excise tax currently levied against heavier automobiles to lighter vehicles. The proposal will add an extra tax ranging from $70 to $1,020, depending on weight, to anything bigger than a compact car by 1979.

Child - care tax allowances for working women and single-parent fathers are doubled to $30 a week per child or $1,000 a year, to a total maximum per family of $4,000. The change is effective for the 1976 tax year.

Unemployment, which touched a 15-year high of 7.4 per cent of the work force in April—761,000 jobless—is being monitored closely, Macdonald said.

But an estimated 250,000 new jobs will be created this year as the economy grows at a real rate of five per cent and the jobless rate will gradually decline.

The government believes its goal of reducing the annual inflation rate to eight per cent from nine by year-end is within reach. And it does not want to risk a return to double-digit inflation by introducing spending measures to reduce unemployment, the minister said.

The budget includes measures to tighten price controls under the eight-month-old anti-inflation program. The changes aim to prevent some companies from justifying price raises simply by showing that costs have risen.

In future, all companies regulated by the anti-inflation board will be limited by law to yearly profits equal to 85 per cent of those during previous years. This is down from 95 per cent previously allowed.

● Full budget coverage, Pages 6, 7, and 9.

At the same time, companies now may measure profit margins either on the previous five-year average or on 1975 levels, whichever benefits them most.

Over-all, these changes, effective in July, should make the controls apply more effectively against business, the finance minister said. He denied the changes were included to seek labor support for controls.

Government spending is projected at about $42.15 billion, up from $37.23 billion in the financial year ended March 31. The deficit on all operations—cash needs—is expected to be about $4.5 billion, a slight decline from last year, when all transactions are calculated.

Macdonald said federal spending this year will be up by about 14 per cent from last year—less than first projected because 1975-76 spending was higher than predicted. The rate of increase should be held to 11 per cent in the financial year starting April 1, 1977, he said.

Extending to 12 weeks the work qualifying period for receiving unemployment benefits will save up to $300 million a year in costs, Macdonald estimated. Unemployment benefits last year totalled $3.4 billion and they are projected to reach $3.78 billion this year.

About 330,000 people now eligible to receive benefit payments after eight to 11 weeks' work would be affected by the change when introduced in legislation. Macdonald said an effort will be made to grant longer benefit payments to claimants in high-unemployment regions. Operations of the manpower department and the unemployment insurance commission will be integrated in the interests of efficiency.

Among the corporate tax breaks announced in the budget is removal of the 12-per-cent federal sales tax on energy-saving equipment such as windpowered electrical generating gear.

The present two-year fast write-off on capital equipment is extended to include machinery bought between now and 1980 that uses industrial or municipal waste as a fuel source.

These were part of a package to encourage energy conservation. Macdonald also said all companies that embark on new exploration between now and July 1, 1979, will be permitted to write off costs at 100 per cent against taxes. Previously, companies whose principal business was not exploration could claim only up to 30 per cent annually.

The tax changes to promote conservation included the special excise tax on cars and a $100 tax on vehicle air conditioners.

For small business, the budget raised by 50 per cent to $150,000 the limit on annual profits they may earn to qualify for a reduced 20-per-cent tax rate.

Capital-cost allowances, under which companies can write off equipment purchases against taxable income, were raised to 30 per cent from 20

Highlights from budget

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

- Tighter rules proposed for unemployment insurance, including a qualifying work period of 12 weeks instead of eight.
- Some tax breaks provided for corporations, especially small businesses, and current freeze on corporate dividends ends in October.
- Minor changes in personal income tax include doubled allowances for child-care costs and increased limits for tax-free retirement investments.
- Current tariff cuts extended another year on imports of drugs, sugar, some fresh vegetables and applied temporarily on fresh pork, ham and macaroni.
- Special energy conservation tax on heavy cars increased and extended to smaller vehicles, along with new $100 tax on automobile air-conditioners.
- Anti-inflation rules governing prices and profits altered to block loopholes.
- Eight-per-cent air transportation tax applied in Canada extended to 2.3 million travellers buying tickets outside Canada.
- New registration rules ordered for charities to maintain tax-free status.
- Inflation remains the prime enemy in economic planning but high unemployment will be monitored carefully.
- Total government outlays to exceed $41 billion in 1976-77, with $5 billion deficit up slightly from last year.

Retirement savings aid brings cheer in Victoria

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

The retirement industry, a major one in Victoria, appeared to be somewhat cheered about Tuesday's latest budget proposals, particularly with regard to retirement income.

"Boy, that's a big one," enthused Alan Aldous, manager of Royal Trust, when told about the proposal to end the freeze on dividend income as of Oct. 15, limiting an increase in dividend payments to 8 per cent.

"There's nothing wrong with that limit," Aldous said. "It puts it on a par with wages and that's fair.

"You know that kind of income is important here. People, however, still seem to think that investors are people in high silk hats, but they're not. They're everybody these days."

The increase that is to be allowed in registered retirement savings plans contributions was also greeted warmly by the Royal Trust manager. They go from a limit of $4,000 to $5,500 and those in company pension plans can increase their RRSP contribution to $3,500 from $2,500.

"Many of our clients, I'd say easily more than half, have been demanding this kind of thing," he said.

"Anything that will encourage thrift and deter spending these days is welcome," Aldous added.

The trust company manager went on to say that the Registered Home Owner Savings Plan (RHOSP) changes don't mean all that much, although he could see why they might be needed.

"Our experience with them is that they're more of a tax-saving thing rather than a retirement item," he said.

Taking a slightly different tack on the subject of dividends was James Bassett, manager of Midland-Doherty investment brokers. Speaking as the retiring chairman of the Victoria Investment Dealers Association, he said it was "unfortunate" that the dividend increases were to be limited to 8 per cent.

"You have to consider that inflation could be running at more than 10 per cent. We (the association) had been trying to get this," he said.

Bassett added that other investment dealers were bound to be as disappointed as he was that there was no mention in the budget speech of government adopting their recommendation with regard to accounting for inflation.

"But they're recognizing the effects of inflation by allowing a wider scope in RRSPs," Bassett said. "That and widening the scope of qualified investments is bound to enhance the raising of capital for investment purposes."

Victim couldn't even thank his rescuers

LITTLESTONE, England (CP)—Victor Haisell found himself in a most embarrassing situation when he swallowed his false teeth while out in his dinghy.

A fishing boat rescued him and took him ashore to a waiting ambulance. A coast guard spokesman said: "He couldn't say a word."

B.C. ferries still in sea of troubles

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Transport Minister Jack Davis and ferry workers appeared to be sailing on different seas Tuesday as a continuing labor dispute kept the B.C. Ferries fleet an hour and a half to two hours behind schedule.

While Davis was telling the Legislature he had no knowledge of layoff orders being rescinded, a union spokesman was claiming that almost half the 420 orders were being withdrawn.

The slowdown has come as a result of the decision to cut staff and services June 1 as a means of reducing the fleet's deficit.

A major meeting of both licensed and unlicensed ship personnel was scheduled for Victoria this morning to plot the next move, which the union says could be an attempt to re-open discussions with the Public Service Commission.

Meanwhile, strike votes were beginning to "trickle in" Tuesday and a count was to be made Thursday.

But the prospect of a full-scale walkout early in June seemed highly unlikely. Both Davis and Labor Minister Allan Williams have indicated special legislation would be used to block any such action and union leaders say they don't want to give the government the opportunity to make the move.

The most likely avenue appeared to be continued delaying tactics by the union.

The work-to-rule campaign started Friday by the licensed officers at the beginning of the Victoria Day weekend was continued Saturday and Sunday, but lifted Monday to allow holidayers a chance to arrive home on time.

It began again Tuesday in what the B.C. Government Employees' Union says is an ongoing basis. It involves head counts of passengers in accordance with the Canada Steamship Act, and in some cases, single-lane loading of vehicles.

By 8:30 p.m. Tuesday ferries on the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay route were up to two hours late and an hour and a half behind schedule between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen.

There was one cancellation involving the 8 p.m. sailing from Horseshoe Bay to Langdale on the Sunshine Coast.

Davis was asked in the Legislature by Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) if he was considering a union proposal that layoffs be held in abeyance until September.

Davis repeated an earlier statement that overtime was the crux of the problem and

Tel Aviv bomb kills two

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A woman security guard and an arriving passenger were killed at Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion airport Tuesday when the passenger's suitcase blew up while being examined.

Ten other persons in the crowded arrival hall were injured.

A second suitcase accompanying the passenger, who arrived on an Austrian Airlines flight from Vienna, exploded harmlessly as security guards dragged it with a rope from the terminal building.

The blast shattered windows, sending shards of glass flying across the building like shrapnel. Hundreds of persons fled the building in terror.

Authorities said the suspicious passenger, carrying a Dutch passport in the name of Bigfoot's victim?

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — Cherie Darvell, 23, of Redding, Calif., reported abducted in rugged mountains by a hairy, ape-like creature known as Bigfoot, has shown up screaming outside a rural resort, but apparently unhurt.

"She's not in too bad a shape," Humboldt County Sheriff Gene Cox said, adding he believed the whole affair was a hoax.

Miss Darvell's friends said she was an unemployed beautician who also used the name Cherie Nelson.

She was one of five members of an independent film crew trying to photograph Bigfoot.

Hays admits Ray 'relationship'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressman Wayne Hays admitted in an emotional house speech Tuesday that he had "a relationship" with Elizabeth Ray, the woman who claims Hays maintained her as his mistress on the congressional payroll.

But Hays, addressing some 300 colleagues in the hushed house chamber, said he had broken off the relationship and said "My conscience is now clear."

"My first reaction was to protect my marriage," the recently-wed 64-year-old Ohio Democrat said. "I have committed the grievous error of not telling all the facts."

Hours before the confessional speech, Hays again denied having an affair with Miss Ray, a 33-year-old blonde who made $14,000 a year until Hays fired her Monday from the house subcommittee staff position he obtained for her, and demanded the house ethics committee clear his name by investigation.

"Six weeks ago I married the woman I love more than anyone else," he said in his floor speech. "Prior to that time I had a relationship with Elizabeth Ray."

"I was then legally separated and single and it was voluntary on her part and on mine," said Hays, a divorcee who married Patricia Peak, a secretary in his Ohio congressional district office, in mid-April.

"I have been called more names in the press and elsewhere than any member of this house. I have been called arrogant, ruthless, cold-blooded, vicious, tempermental and mean. I am also capable of emotion and error and I have erred," said Hays.

"My conscience," he said, "is now clear."

Some members came up and shook his hand and patted his shoulder. Others just sat quietly, then left the chamber.

Hays said he still denies he hired Miss Ray in his capacity as chairman of the house administration committee just so she could serve as his mistress — as she claimed in the account carried in Sunday's Washington Post. She said her only duties were to have dinner and sex about once a week with Hays.

The justice department has ordered the FBI to investigate Miss Ray's allegations and determine whether federal funds were misused.

Hays told his colleagues Miss Ray had been hired for per cent for computers and to 100 per cent for so-called software like computer programs. But the rate was reduced to 25 per cent from 40 per cent for aircraft.

At the same time, Macdonald announced that charitable organizations qualifying for tax advantages in future will be required to pay out at least 80 per cent of the funds for which they have issued receipts for tax purposes. This change follows a study initiated after the last budget.

There were small changes to encourage personal saving and raise pension plan contribution limits.

The maximum contribution available to reduce taxable income for registered pension plans is raised to $3,500 from $2,500 for 1976 and after.

Changes will be made to let owners of registered home ownership savings plans to freely transfer them between institutions to get the highest rate of return.

Tariff changes to remove or reduce rates applied against about $100 million of food and drug imports, mainly from the United States, were extended to June 30, 1977. Finance department officials said the savings are to be passed on to consumers.

Macdonald said the government is committed to a "deliberate and persistent" approach to increasing the economy's competitive ability.

And he called for co-operation from the private sector, if it wants to avoid more controls.

"If government alone is held responsible for the performance of the economic system, then government will be driven increasingly into the regulation of the private sector," Macdonald told the Commons.

He repeated that the government wants to remove its wage and price controls as soon as possible, but not until it feels the danger of renewed inflation has passed.

An international economic recovery under way will benefit domestic exports this year, but the economy may not have the competitive ability to take full advantage of a recovery.

A government priority is to come up with tax incentives to encourage more investment in high-technology industries that could improve the economy's growth rate, Macdonald said.

work on his committee staff on April 22, 1974, but left in November of that year and then returned to ask for her job back in the summer of 1975.

He said he took her to the office of Congressman Mendal Davis of South Carolina and she was hired on Hay's recommendation that "she was able to perform normal office duties.

"I also said that she had some personal problems but I did not tell him about my relationship with her."

He said Davis placed her on his office staff "for a brief period of time." At some unspecified time, she transferred to the administration subcommittee headed by Davis, from which job Hays fired her Monday.

"When I proposed to my bride, I explained to Miss Ray that our relationship was ended, and indeed it had ended before then," Hays said.

"I said I would continue to help her but she became hysterical and threatened suicide and threatened blackmail and to destroy my marriage. My first reaction was to protect my marriage and my dear wife."

"I'm now 65 and I have been in the house for 27 years," Hays said, his voice occasionally catching with emotion.

"My days on earth are numbered and my service in this room may also be.

"My conscience is now clear. I hope the Washington Post and Miss Ray can say the same. . . ."

Fees up in camps

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy doubled camping fees in 23 provincial parks Tuesday — but called it "a surcharge."

The camping fee jumps from $2 a night to $4 effective June 1.

Mrs. McCarthy said the increases apply to parks with heavy camper use "because they offer outstanding recreation opportunities and because they are near population centres."

She also stated the increase was necessary to meet increased maintenance patrol and security costs.

There are 320 provincial parks of which 120 contain developed camping facilities.

that efforts were still being made to find a solution.

Asked if he had withdrawn any of the proposed layoff notices, he answered: 'Not to my knowledge, but I'll take the question as notice."

However, BCGEU assistant general secretary Cliff Andstein told the Colonist there had been an apparent change of mind where at least 183 of the 420 layoff orders were concerned.

He said the notices had gone out without apparent planning and that management had suddenly realized it was laying off 33 engine room oilers — about half the number employed.

"We received information last week that all of these orders had to be rescinded," Andstein said.

"Then we received information that another 150 were being rescinded because they had gone to people who just can't be replaced."

On Tuesday the union learned that another 30 to 40 ferry workers were either resigning or retiring.

Andstein said it now appeared the ferry service had found it was "having to back off" with its planned layoffs.

The union says it has been told layoffs wouldn't be necessary if the ferry workers were willing to work 10-hour days, 10 days at a time without overtime.

"I've been involved in this for six weeks and I've yet to see where the hours of work have anything to do with the need for layoffs," Andstein said.

He said the union had agreed to take any time owing in time off.

Earlier, the union instructed those earmarked for layoff to report for work June 1 as usual. Out of this came a motto: "If one worker is laid off, all are off."

But Andstein said Tuesday there was no intention to stage a walkout.

"That would be exactly what the government is looking for. While we're not afraid of a fight, we're not exactly stupid, either."

The ferry workers claim their head counts have disclosed several cases of overloading on the ferries.

Elderly and ferries

Free travel cut

The elderly have had their free travel on B.C. Ferries trimmed by two day.

Transport Minister Jack Davis admitted in the Legislature Tuesday that as a "refinement" to his earlier free travel announcement he had now decided to confine free ferry travel to weekdays.

Persons 65 and over travelling on weekends will pay the going rate.

"I think they can plan their travel arrangements so that they can travel on weekdays without hardship," Davis said.

He made the statements in response to questions from Gordon Gibson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) who said outside the house that he had been informed of the new regulations over the weekend.

"A friend of mine was trying to make arrangements to bring a group of senior citizens to Victoria and was informed the free rates applied only to weekdays," he said.

Hugo Mueller, was taken to a special security room adjacent to the customs hall where an unidentified woman security guard asked him to open his luggage.

In Vienna, a police spokesman said the baggage of Hugo Mueller, reported killed in the Tel Aviv blast, contained nothing but soiled laundry during a pre-flight security check. He said Mueller booked his flight only hours before its departure.

"Our people remembered Mueller very well, because they had a full hour to check the ten passengers on the Tel Aviv flight," the police spokesman said.

"They told me when they opened his fiberglass suitcase, it contained nothing but soiled laundry and toilet articles," he said.

All passengers flying to Israel have to undergo thorough security checks, including opening their baggage, the spokesman said.

He said police were investigating how bombs or explosive materials could have passed through the checks undetected.

A thunderous explosion rocked the arrival hall as the suitcase was opened in Tel Aviv.

"What have you done to me! What have you done to me!" screamed a woman whose hair was set on fire by the blast. A customs officer pushed her to the ground and used his body to smother the flames.

The dead and injured were taken to nearby Tel Hashomer and Assaf Harofe hospitals by ambulances and helicopters.

Two more suspicious suitcases were also blown up.

The blasts came almost four years after three Japanese Maoist guerrillas sprayed incoming passengers at the airport, then known as Lod, with bullets and grenades, killing 26 persons and wounding 79.

Alberta pleased

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government's reaction to the new federal budget is generally favorable and it is generally pleased with a move to allow investors in resource-based industries to write off 100 per cent of their investment, Provincial Treasurer Merv Leitch said at a news conference Tuesday.

Kentucky-fried Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford scored a major upset in Kentucky, threatened a second in Tennessee but lost Arkansas Tuesday in his bitter GOP fight with Ronald Reagan. Jimmy Carter romped to victory in all three southern and border states.

But early returns indicated trouble for both Ford and Carter in Nevada and Idaho as vote totals straggled in from the western states in the record six - primary showdown. No tally was available for Oregon.

Reagan, the conservative crusader from California, took strong leads over Ford in both Nevada and Idaho. Frank Church was crushing Carter in his native Idaho and Carter was running behind California Governor Edmund Brown Jr. in Nevada.

Ford
. . . breakthrough

Ford's victory in Kentucky was a crucial breakthrough into Reagan's "sun belt" stronghold and came in a state where the former California governor earlier was a heavy favorite to win.

But Ford picked up strong momentum last week with landslide victories in Michigan and Maryland and moved into a commanding lead in the number of pledged delegates when party leaders — including Nelson Rockefeller — moved huge blocks of uncommitted delegates into the president's corner.

Carter was reaping 103 delegates, giving him 848 of the 1,505 needed for nomination by UPI's count. Reagan was leading Ford 82-63 in delegates chosen Tuesday. In all there were 179 Democratic delegates up for grabs, 176 Republicans.

Leger urges caution

WHITEHORSE, Yukon (CP) — Northern Canadians may have good reason to feel impatient and frustrated but should not lose faith in the political system, Governor-General Jules Leger said Tuesday.

"Canadians have evolved and learned to use political institutions which are flexible enough to permit change while respecting the different attitudes and needs of various parts of the country," he said in a written statement issued on the final full day of his 10-day first official northern tour.

By supporting the principles of the political system and directing their actions through it, the people of the North will achieve a meaningful future, he said.

During the governor-general's tour, officials in both territories have said privately that the northern economy is suffering and will continue to hurt until the land claims are settled.

Kennedy flays Carter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Senator Edward Kennedy Tuesday charged Jimmy Carter was being "intentionally . . . indefinite and imprecise" on many issues, but hedged on whether he was part of a "stop-Carter" movement.

"Mr. Carter has in his appearance before the democratic platform committee intentionally made his position on some issues indefinite and imprecise, as far as I was concerned," Kennedy, also a Democrat, told reporters.

But the Massachusetts senator dismissed published reports that he was part of an active "stop-Carter" movement. "I cannot stop any speculation . . . and I suppose there will continue to be speculation until the last vote is taken at the Democratic convention," he said.

Arriving at the Americana Hotel to receive the national Father of the Year award, he reiterated his pledge not to seek the presidential nomination.

"I have taken a position — over a year ago — and my position is unchanged," Kennedy said.

He added he was too busy campaigning for re-election to the U.S. Senate.

Seven seek East seat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven persons had filed when nominations closed Tuesday in a provincial byelection June 3 called to give New Democratic Party leader David Barrett another crack at a seat in the 55-seat Legislature.

Joining Barrett on the ballot will be a representative from each of the three major parties, two independents and one member of the North American Labor party.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Colonist Wire Services

HONOLULU — A senior defence department official said Tuesday the Soviet Union technically has violated S.A.L.T. arms control procedures, and that the United States "is closely monitoring" the situation. The official, who asked that his name not be used, said the non-compliance involved the Soviets' failure to fully dismantle some land-based missile silos before it put four missile-firing submarines to sea.

Running battle in Athens

ATHENS — Battle-clad riot police and striking demonstrators fought running battles in Athens Tuesday in the worst rioting since Premier Constantin Caramanlis replaced the military dictatorship with a civilian government. A 65-year-old woman was run down and killed by a police armored car and more than 60 persons were injured in the rioting which erupted during an attempted march on Parliament to protest a bill to forbid wildcat strikes.

Holes in Henry's policy

TORONTO — A leader of the black guerilla movement in Rhodesia said Tuesday that political pressures in the United states were forcing President Ford to back down from his policy of supporting majority rule in Africa. Michael Mawema, organizing secretary of the Zimbabwe African National Union, said there were noticeable holes in U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger's statements supporting liberation movements during his recent African tour.

French offer doomed?

PARIS — Opposition from the Arabs and mounting hostility within France will force President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to abandon his offer to send peacekeeping troops to Lebanon, Arab diplomatic sources said Tuesday. In Beirut, president-elect Elias Sarkis met President Suleiman Franjieh to discuss handing over power and France's offer of troops.

Jupiter's spot profiled

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Jupiter's Great Red Spot, an immense feature first observed in 1665, appears to be a column of rising gases that whirls like a gear between winds blowing in opposite directions. Scientists believe its deep red color comes from traces of phosphorous which condense out of the rising atmosphere at heights five miles above the surrounding cloud deck. The oval spot, three times the size of earth, was profiled Monday at the opening of three-day symposium on Jupiter at the U.S. Space Agency's Ames research centre.

Pipeline caution urged

WASHINGTON — U.S. Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe said Tuesday it would be a mistake for U.S. Congress to pass legislation now specifying an Alaska natural gas pipeline route. He said it would be better to allow the president to choose a delivery route late next summer, after all government agencies finish evaluating the alternatives.

Rhodesia reports deaths

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Rhodesian security forces Tuesday reported 11 persons killed in the past 24 hours in growing guerrilla warfare, including three black civilians who died only 40 miles northeast of the capital. The communique said eight guerrillas were killed and eight Rhodesian troops injured during the fighting.

Concordes land nicely

PARIS (UPI) — The French and British Concorde supersonic airliners Tuesday landed smoothly in their home countries, successfully completing their first round-trip commercial transatlantic flights between the United States and Europe.

Worrying the sick

WHILE THERE IS NO WAY of measuring the amount of anxiety suffered by the sick from the hospitals strike, worry over what's in store hasn't helped the healing process. But throughout the period of walkouts and even now during the "cool off" this aspect of the difficulties doesn't appear to be of any great official concern.

It is time that thoughts be directed more to the effects this labor dispute is having on the people occupying hospital beds and all those other human beings needing proper medical treatment and attention whose admittance to hospital has been delayed.

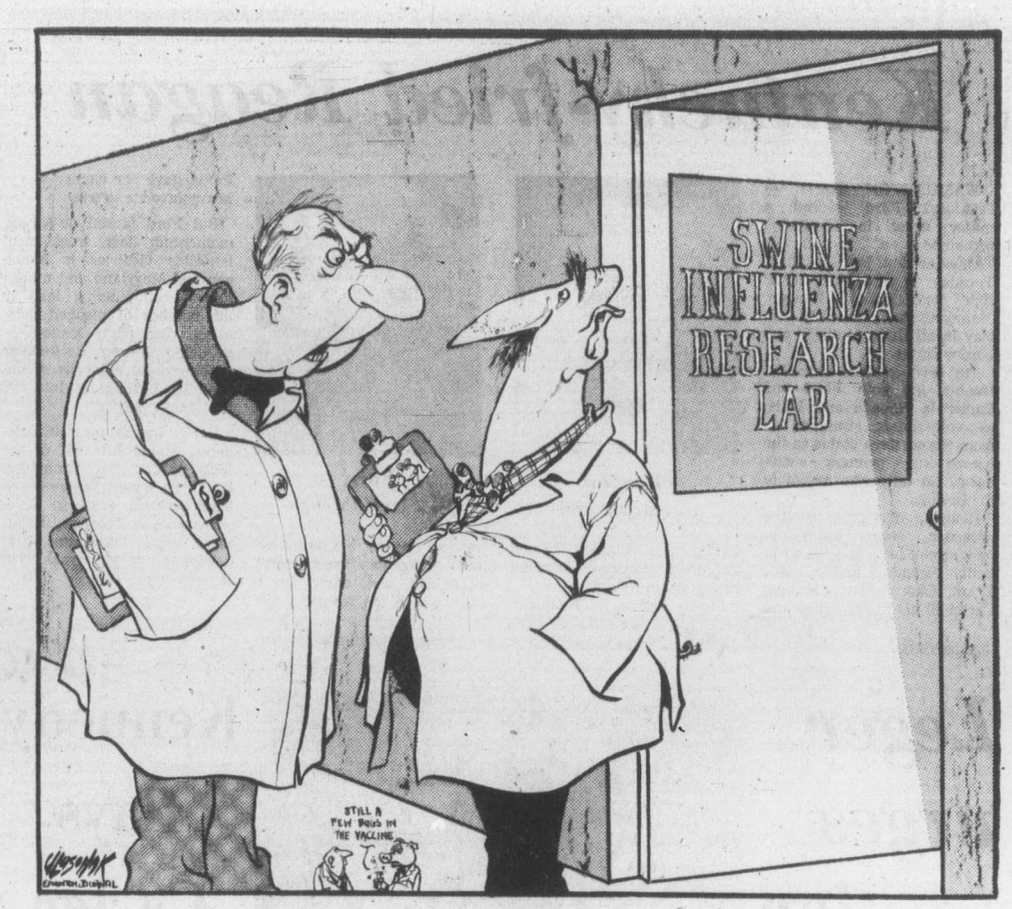

As important as are the financial aspects of hospital operation the cost of human suffering is more so and here is where the emphasis needs to be placed.

It may appear to be in the government's belated promise of special legislation to ensure delivery of essential services. That action will be a long time in coming, though, with first a "massive study" before its introduction in the legislature. It could be a year from now and what may happen in the meantime could add to the damage that has been done to the recuperation of the ailing.

The threat of so-called "work to rule" remains which can give no comfort to the sick. Nor can last week's government directive to hospital administrators on this year's spending.

The limiting of 1976 operating cost increases to 8.5 per cent of last year's budgets is subject to certain adjustments. But it is not clear whether allowances will be made for wage settlements when they are finally reached with nursing staff as well as non-medical personnel. Postponement or curtailment of planned new programs definitely is ordered and the administrators already can see a resulting reduction in services. There could be some layoffs and there will be no hiring of summer help as in previous years.

Apart from the poor timing of the directive, the decision to clamp down on hospital budgets can do nothing but add to the misery of the sick from a psychological standpoint.

"What do you mean everyone's home with the flu?"

A different pace

THE SOCIAL CREDIT government of British Columbia deserves congratulation on the introduction of a bill to establish the office of auditor-general. This province will be behind the majority of others in appointing an auditor-general to keep his eyes on government spending, accounting and administration, but it will give him wider powers than some of his counterparts elsewhere — wide enought, it seems sure, to guarantee him freedom from government interference or hindrance in his work.

The B.C. auditor-general distinctly will be the servant of the Legislative Assembly. He will be appointed on the recommendation of the assembly after an all-party special committee has recommended its choice unanimously. He will report to the assembly twice a year, once on the financial statements of the government, and once on the work of his office. He also will be able at any time to make a special report to the assembly "on a matter of primary importance or urgency that, in his opinion, should not be deferred until he makes his annual report."

He will hire his own staff and establish his own offices, and, as Finance Minister Evan Wolfe says, "if he ever feels that we are not providing him with enough staff or enough funds to do his job properly, he will be able to make his own case to the legislature."

Not the least of reasons for applauding the government for bringing in this proposed legislation is its promptness in doing so. Before the election last December the Social Credit Party promised the appointment of an auditor-general and an ombudsman at the first session after becoming government; six months later it appears that the pledge soon will be honored.

This is in some contrast to the pace of the government in Ottawa. After the retirement of the former federal auditor-general, Maxwell Henderson, his successor lost no time in having an independent committee set up to study and report on the duties and freedoms of the office. This was the result of Mr. Henderson's complaints that the government had hampered his work.

The committee in its report recommended that the government introduce new legislation defining the auditor-general's freedoms and responsibilities, giving him clear authority to inform Parliament of any government spending that he considered inefficient or wasteful.

Essentially he should be able to determine, the report said, "whether value has been received for the money the government has spent." This was in accord with Mr. Henderson's concept of the job.

We suggested at the time that if the government wanted to appear responsive to reason and the needs of the public, it could not long delay action on the recommendations.

That was more than 13 months ago.

Yet the other day in the Commons this exchange took place:

"Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the hon. gentleman. He and I have exchanged a few words before on the issue of bringing in legislation to implement proposals made by the independent review board on the office of the auditor-general. I think the minister has already promised seven times to introduce legislation before the end of the session. Would he make the promise for the eighth time and make us happy?

"Hon. Jean Chretien (President of Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I will make the promise at a time other than today; I hope to give this matter a very prominent place in the Speech from the Throne that will be presented in the fall."

Saying the same things as Solzhenitsyn

The totalitarian truth

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

In the May issue of Legion (monthly magazine of the Royal Canadian Legion), fellow-columnist Douglas Fisher has an article title "Purveyors of Doom." It starts: "The bitter world of Lubor Zink."

After a few paragraphs dealing with what comrade Fisher (we are both Legionaires) calls my 'obsessive anti-communism," he introduces another purveyor of doom, Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Solzhenitsyn, he says, "is a Lubor Zink writ large on the global scene." And "anyone who has followed the columns of Lubor Zink for the past 15 years will appreciate that he's saying the same things."

I am not sure whether Doug meant it that way but that's quite a compliment for which I want to thank him. What I have been saying about the totalitarian menace (both Brown and Red) is indeed virtually identical with Solzhenitsyn's assessment. It has to be, for it's the truth.

History shows that whenever the truth is very disturbing, people who are not directly affected close their eyes to it. And they do not want to hear that their own comfort and safety is in danger.

To keep the illusion of a sanctuary intact, increasingly sweeping compromises with ostensibly cherished moral principles are made. The debilitating process is rationalized as pragmatic adjustments to changing reality.

Anyone who points out that this is self-deception which cannot but culminate in disaster, is either smothered by such labels as alarmist, reactionary and warmonger, or ridiculed as a nutty extremist, or simply ostracized and ignored.

This happened in the 1930s to those who managed to get away from Nazi tyranny and tried to alert the democracies to the totalitarian peril. No one wanted to hear, let alone believe, what they were saying. The Fishers of that time, dedicated to unilateral disarmament and appeasement, spoke of "obsessive anti-Nazism." Winston Churchill was a reactionary warmonger.

It's all quite clear in retrospect. Including the terrible price the democracies had to pay when the nearly fatal pileup of avoidable mistakes forced a belated, desperate facing of the ingored truth.

Is it possible that after such experience we could be repeating virtually the same major errors despite the widely held view that this time the last resort corrective is unthinkable?

The answer, I am afraid, has to be yes. Not only because the post-Munich generations tend to regard even recent history as irrelevant to their perception of the world, but because too many Doug Fishers who took part in the struggle against Nazism cannot bring themselves to recognize Marxist totalitarianism as an advanced form of the same evil.

Consequently they do not see the disastrous folly of detente repetition of appeasement.

The reason for the refusal to face the truth about what Solzhenitsyn calls "Soviet Nazism" or "Red Facism" is no mystery. Anyone whose mind has been shaped by the sacred myths and beliefs of what now passes for fashionably leftist liberalism cannot but regard idealized socialist doctrines as nobly humanitarian. Every truly enlightened and progressive person simply must strive for the best formulated postulates of justice and equality.

The Soviet Union, although no longer a shining, unblemished model of the "new society" our tone-setting intellectuals visualize, is still mixed in the mental and emotional symbolism, if not the loyalties, of this dominant trend of our era. To accept evidence that the Marxist system in all its form is just as evil (and considerably more dangerous in its wider appeal) than the Nazi system was, would be so painful and require such wrenching revisions of everything the Fishers hold self-evident and dear, that it must be avoided at almost any cost.

While reminders of the frightening truth have been coming from those who, like myself, experienced Communist destruction of liberty (including free trade unions and socialist parties which helped to cut their own throats) on the periphery of the Soviet empire, it was farily easy to pooh pooh such testimony. Concern for survival of freedom could always be patronizingly dismissed as exile paranoia manifesting itself in "obsessive anti-communism." (Fisher had such sneering epithets for me in the 1960s as "Cold War Buff" and "Freedom Fighter," ha, ha, ha.)

When a man of Solzhenitsyn's stature emerged from the hell of Soviet slave labor camps (The Gulag Archipelago with its unspeakable horrors didn't really exist until then for the lib-left mind) and started confirming what the Zinks have been saying for years the Fishers faced a disturbing problem. They couldn't very well say that Solzhenitsyn also shouldn't be taken seriously, although Communist efforts to discredit him are not exactly unwelcome. And they couldn't bring themselves to face the unvarnished truth. Not yet, anyway.

So a new rationalization for cold shouldering the "purveyors of doom" had to be produced. What Doug Fisher has come up with is his no doubt sincere but illusory "I know Canadians" fortification of the increasingly untenable it-can't-happen-here smugness. However, the most interesting aspect of his Legion article is that it illustrates not only what Lenin meant when he called Western leftist intellectuals "useful idiots," but also the Bolshevik boast coined by Trotsky, "our enemy cannot understand us."

A secret meeting on nuclear dangers

By PAUL LEWIS, the London Observer from Washington

The United States is expected to make another attempt to persuade West Germany and France to stop exporting dangerous nuclear technology which could be used for developing atomic weapons when it meets secretly with other major nuclear exporting nations in London next month.

This will be the first meeting of the so-called London Group of nuclear exporters since its original seven members — the U.S., Canada, France, Britain, Germany, the Soviet Union and Japan — agreed last autumn to tighten export restrictions to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons-making techniques.

However since then Sweden, the Netherlands and East Germany have joined the group, while Belgium, Italy and Czechoslovakia are in the process of doing so. The group has also rejected applications from a number of countries it does not believe are sincere in wanting to stop the spread of nuclear weapons — including, it is believed, India and South Korea.

Since last autumn's agreement, the U.S. has been dismayed by West Germany's decision to open negotiations with Iran for the sale of uranium enrichment and reactor fuel reprocession plants — both of which can produce highly fissile material suitable for military purposes — as well as ordinary power reactors. It is also annoyed that France is going ahead with plans to sell Pakistan a fuel reprocessing plant, although the U.S. persuaded South Korea to cancel a similar arrangment.

In addition, the U.S. administration is coming under heavy congressional pressure to take a tougher line with Germany and France over their nuclear export policies. Democratic Senator Abe Ribicoff heads a vocal group of legislators who want to cut off American supplies of enriched reactor fuel — on which both countries are virtually dependent — unless they mend their ways.

Ribicoff then wants the London Group to divide up the world reactor market among its members to ensure each supplier country gets a fair share of the business and that they do not compete with one another by relaxing safeguards or offering to sell dangerous technologies as well — as has happened in the past.

Secretarty of State Henry Kissinger already has refused to put direct pressure on France and Germany by withholding enriched uranium supplies.

But he has promised concerned senators and congressmen privately that the U.S. will press again next month for an outright ban on the sale of reprocessing and enrichment technology — instead of last autumn's agreement merely to "exercise restraint" in this field — while the State Department is studying Ribicoff's market-sharing proposal.

Already, the U.S. and the Western European members of the London Group are planning a substantial increase in their enrichment capacity during the remainder of the decade. This should ensure them a virtual monopoly by making small national plants elsewhere uneconomic.

In addition, the Vienna-based international Atomic Energy Agency is preparing a study — partly financed by the World Bank — on the U.S. plan for a chain of regionally-owned reprocessing plants around the world to ensure tight international control of the explosive plutonium produced in the process. The U.S. will certainly press for no more reprocessing plants to be sold until the results of this work are known next spring.

How successful the U.S. plans for an outright ban on exports of these technologies will be remains quite uncertain. But both France and Germany are determined that Europe should not be squeezed out of the nuclear market by the U.S. in the same way as it has lost its position in aircraft manufacture, computers and other modern technologies.

Nuclear exporting is also good business. The U.S. Export Import Bank estimates the nuclear export market at $27 billion between 1976 and 1978 and believes that U.S. industry can obtain nearly half of it. However, U.S. government studies also show that by 1990 reprocessing the spent fuel from power reactors in the developing world alone will produce 30,000 pounds of plutonium annually — or enough for 3,000 small atomic bombs.

Another giant-killer job

By RON CLINGEN
substituting for Richard Jackson on vacation

A 20-year veteran of Parliament Hill took the role of a giant killer two years ago in a bid to enter the boiling political cauldron beneath the Peace Tower.

He failed but made a significant mark for himself in the process.

That same man has just turned 40 now and he's tackling a giant again. But his adversary is a different giant and the method of operations is different, too.

Bill Neville is the new chief of staff for the youngest Opposition Leader in the 109-year history of Canada's Parliament.

As Joe Clark's key backroom man he has already begun mapping the strategy the Progressive Conservatives hope will topple Prime Minister Trudeau from power in 1978, 10 years after he took over as the nation's boss politician.

In July, 1974, the spunky Mr. Neville stood up to John Turner at the polls in Ottawa-Carleton riding. Turner, of course, was finance minister at the time and was enjoying a fair measure of popularity right across the country.

When the ballots had all been counted, Neville lost by about 10,000 votes but the 28,000 he did collect represented 39 per cent of the vote — the highest ever polled by a Tory since the riding was created in the redistribution of 1968.

Mr. Neville knocked on 20,000 doors in the sprawling urban-rural constituency almost on Parliament Hill's doorstep and managed to worry Mr. Turner enough to bring him scurrying back from the national Liberal campaign trail to mend fences in his own back yard.

Now that Turner has quit politics — at least temporarily — the Ottawa-Carleton seat is vacant in the House of Commons.

If the Liberals are still smarting from the type of wrist-slapping they took in a recent public opinion poll now the prime minister has finally got around to calling a by-election, Bill Neville could likely become Conservative MP for Ottawa-Carleton.

But unless his present thinking takes an abrupt about-turn — or Joe Clark says he wants him in the Commons more than in his office — he will pass up his chance to collect a reward for hard work done in the 1974 election.

"When I took this job I had to make a choice of doing this or waiting for the by-election," Bill explains. "I don't think I could pick up and walk away six months down the road from now."

Mr. Neville believes he has the skills and experience that can help the leader of a political party. And he is convinced Mr. Clark's "excellent political sense and his openness with the people" will help make him Canada's next prime minister.

A graduate in journalism from Ottawa's Carleton University, he joined the Parliamentary Press Gallery in 1957 as a national affairs reporter for United Press International and later became Ottawa bureau manager for the news service.

During his six years in the press gallery, he covered four national election campaigns in addition to day-to-day parliamentary developments and a number of major international conferences.

In 1965, Bill Neville the reporter decided it was time for a look at government from the inside. He became executive assistant to Judy LaMarsh when she was health and welfare minister, then followed her to the Secretary of State's office until she quit federal politics in 1968.

"I never belonged to a Liberal party association," Bill points out. "I had a stronger sense of personal loyalty to Judy than to the party although I did my little bit to help the Liberals win."

Leaving the Hill, he formed a partnership with another key ex-Liberal aide, Bill Lee, providing counselling services to the private sector in public and government relations.

He says he became increasingly disillusioned with the Trudeau government in the early 70s and began doing more and more behind the scenes work with the Tories. Eventually, it led to the ballot box dual with Turner.

After a short stint as a Ontario government consultant, he became a special assistant to former PC leader Robert Stanfield, then last June was named party research director.

When Clark won the Tory leadership, the call went out to Bill Neville and he came.

Now an average days sees him arriving on the Hill about 8:30 a.m. and leaving about 8 p.m., usually lugging home documents which must be read.

In between is a steady round of meetings with the leader and people from his 30-member staff, some speech writing, administrative duties, and generally running the shop.

It seems likely he'll turn a deaf ear to a call to the hustings from his old riding association, at least until he's had a chance to work for the prime minister.

The Now Society

"Since 1948, I've been in a holding pattern."

Gorde Hunter

THERE WAS a time, back there in the late Forties and the early Fifties, when the so-called brain drain from Canada to the United States had reached stampede proportions.

The lure of higher pay, more salubrious weather conditions, was enough to offset any twinges of giving up Canadian heritage for U.S. of A. landed immigrant status. It was the greener fields of California that beckoned literally thousands of Canadians and in those days, U.S. immigration policy was reasonably lax in restrictions — it was not difficult to make the move. A married couple, for instance, could gain entry by merely having $1,500 in the bank, or, a job to go to.

THE mass migration, however, slowed to a trickle during the Sixties. Canadians no longer looked on life in the United States as a trip to the end of the rainbow. The rising crime rate south of the border, the fear of the spreading drug culture, made Canadians think twice before giving up a bird in hand for a pair in California.

But the migratory rumblings are being heard again, only for different reasons.

Canadian wages are as high, if not higher than those paid in the United States. Climatic conditions do not appear to worry Canadians as much now as they did 20 years ago. The thrill of constant summer is no longer enough to entice a Canadian to give up his citizenship, his land of birth.

TODAY'S reasons for moving and being heard more and more, are still economic, but of a different hue.

The reasons of monetary stability, of industrial peace.

"I'm fed up with inflation and strikes," is an oft-heard statement today in our land.

Canadians look at the federal government record in this respect and despair at the findings. They look across the 49th and see government there has obviously done something right in that the rate of inflation there has dropped well below the rate in Canada.

They look and note the economic comeback there has been far more dramatic than our own stumbling attempts to regroup from a major recession.

THERE SEEMS to be purpose to United States government action in direct contrast to the aimless wanderings of our own government. There are still strikes in the United States, but the union movement as a whole appears to be more socially aware, far less militant than here in Canada. There seems to be the realization that the more and more of Samuel Gompers' day is suicidal today and that confrontation has given way, to some extent, to co-operation.

Young people in Canada, hamstrung by the almost unreachable price of housing, note the vast difference of housing costs in the United States.

HOUSING, in most major areas of the United States, runs at roughly $20,000 to $25,000 less than in the major areas of Canada and the interest rates are many percentage points lower as well. This is a major consideration for those young Canadians presently mulling over the advisability of switching countries. And why wouldn't it be? There they have a fighting chance of owning their own home. Here, almost the impossible dream and even if fulfilled, a dream that can leave them with a crushing financial impost.

The crime rate, the drug culture, no longer acts as a deterrent insofar as emigrating to the United States. Our own crime rate, our own drug culture, is about on a par.

THE restrictions, by the United States government, are tougher today than when I took the plunge back in 1953 — a move from Canada to California. The monetary figure is higher, but the basic concept is roughly the same.

The U.S. Consul representatives must determine, to start with, if there is a chance of an immigrant becoming a public charge. Now as for young people, the restrictions are very tough indeed. To start with, only 120,000 are accepted into the United States from the Western Hemisphere each year under this rule, even if a person has a job to go to and with labor certification, it would mean a wait of about two years. In this regard, there is legislation now in front of the U.S. Congress that would give Canada a separate immigration quota — about 20,000 a year and this could become law before the upcoming election.

RETIRED Canadians can move to the United States under a retirement clause, with the restriction of a certain monthly income. They must have at least $800 a month to qualify.

Then there is the substantial investor category. If a person is going to invest in a business and has the money and experience, he or she can get in. The money investment, I'm told, must be at least $50,000.

So the road is not an easy one, but for those Canadians who feel they have had enough of our government bungling, enough of the hassles of Canadian living, they will work hard to comply with the entry regulations.

And many of them are planning right now.

Erma Bombeck

What has the United States become in 200 years?

If Americans were filling a Bicentennial time capsule to represent life in 1976, what would be included?

TWA's Ambassador magazine took a poll of celebrities and got some interesting answers that ran the gamut from a Bible and a credit card to a Watergate tape and a Peanuts cartoon.

No one asked me, but whenever I think of the sights, sounds, and smells of 1976, three things come to mind.

The smell of '76, of course, was the herbal. I'd put an herbal into the capsule. Don't ask me what an herbal looks like. All I know is we all smell like one. A day without herbal at our house is like a day without soap, shampoo, deodorant or air freshener.

Sometimes I feel like I am living on Christmas tree ridge.

A few years ago, we all smelled like lemon, but then long hair came in and people began to pucker every time a teenager walked into the room, so the shift went to herbal.

There is probably no other single item in our house that generates so much conversation as the herbal shampoo. Who has it? Who used it last? How much is left?

What would you put in the capsule for the sound of '76? A flick of a Bic? John Denver's voice wailing "Far out"? Or the swooshing of a flip top off a billion beverage cans?

I opt for a long-playing recording of two million teenagers ending every sentence with the two words. You know? One of my sons was relating a movie he saw one night and I counted 138 You knows? The only trouble with 138 You knows? is that you feel bound to respond to them each time they're asked and at the end of the conversation my head bobbed like a runaway rocking chair.

The visible part of the Bicentennail year is easy. There is one item that has dominated the American scene and touched the life of every American: the T-shirt.

I have seen them on every form ever invented. Some T-shirts identify, some amuse, some offend, others instruct. Some are obscene. Some are signed by famous designers. Some advertise. I saw one on a rather "healthy" girl the other day that was worn to mold an opinion. (No one should be THAT opinionated.)

Whatever, cheap T-shirts never die, they just fade. Frankly, I'd give a fortune to see the citizen of 2076 take a T-shirt out of a capsule and ponder the message on it: "CLEAN UP THE WORLD TOMORROW. TODAY JUST DO YOUR ROOM!"

U.K. committee makes history by probing of foreign policy

By JOHN HAY from London

In accusing Prime Minister James Callaghan of bungling the 1974 Cyprus crisis, a House of Commons committee has made British parliamentary history.

The select committee's 130-page report on Cyprus marks the first time such a group has made a detailed investigation into the government's foreign policy—the kind of parliamentary study that has become almost routine in Ottawa.

Some MPs were clearly startled by the vehemence of the committee's attack on Callaghan, who was foreign secretary during the crisis.

The committee members—three Conservatives and three Laborites—concluded that Callaghan performed ineptly during the crisis and gave confusing answers to the committee afterward.

At issue was how Britain should have responded to the three stages of the crisis: The overthrow, backed by the Greek junta, of Archbishop Makarios; the invasion by Turkey, and the failure of peace talks followed by the Turkish occupation of the northern half of the Mediterranean island.

The committee reports that "Britain had a legal right to intervene, she had the military capacity to intervene."

"She did not intervene for reasons which the government refused to give."

The legal right stemmed from a 1959 treaty which makes Britain a guarantor of the independence of Cyprus, a former British colony.

The committee rejected Callaghan's suggestion that the treaty was in practice "a dead letter."

It implies that strong action by Britain—which already had 3,000 troops based on the island—could have deterred the Turks from invading.

But, in a statement again this week, the government insisted that British intervention would have caused more ruin and bloodshed.

Although the committee report forms a parliamentary precedent, it is not the first time Callaghan has faced criticism for his Cyprus policy.

U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger was reported earlier to have been upset by Callaghan's inability to keep peace talks going in Geneva between Greece and Turkey—the breakdown of which led to the second Turkish invasion.

The dispute was especially serious because it divided two NATO allies—Greece and Turkey—and involved what Kissinger considered a vital strategic area.

The invasion also led the U.S. Congress to ban arms sales to Turkey, which retaliated by evicting U.S. forces from military bases in the country, and by withdrawing from NATO military organizations.

Domestic criticism—particularly within Britain's Greek community—was aimed at Callaghan, and prompted the establishment of the committee against the government's initial wishes.

There were some complaints later that the committee was composed only of pro-Greek activists in the Commons, intent on writing a report biased against Turkey and against British policies which seemed to favor Turkey.

Nevertheless, the committee's outspoken report means the monopoly over foreign policy long enjoyed by ministers and the Foreign Office might be less secure in future.

Insulting?

I refer to an attack on the government by the NDP, in the house on March 29. Apparently Mr. King is concerned that a statement by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe will embarrass or insult Australians and New Zealanders.

In his speech, Mr. Wolfe said: ". . . the parties that expound this irresponsible use of public funds are on the skids everywhere in the world. The people have thrown the socialists out in Australia. They have been thrown out in New Zealand. They are hanging on the ropes in Britain, and their leader has quit."

As an Australian, I must firmly disagree with Mr. King when he says that such statements about our country were "derogatory and insulting."

We in Australia have been fortunate in having a loyal Governor General, who was able to bring the corrupt and power-lusting Whitlam socialist government back to reckoning with the people it sought to control. This brings to mind the famous words of Edmund Burke: "In all forms of government, it is the people who are the true legislators." In this case in Australia, the courageous action of the Governor General was certainly vindicated by the people.

Mr. King, in his telegram to the external affairs minister, expressed grave concern that Mr. Wolfe's statements would affect relations between Canada and other Commonwealth nations. From our experience here in Australia, it has been mainly the socialist governments—both federal and state—that have sought to destroy the Commonwealth. Mr. Wolfe's criticism of the actions of socialist governments could be taken by all Commonwealth nations as a warning that it is from this quarter that the major threat to the Commonwealth really comes.

In the house, Mr. King maintained that Mr. Wolfe's comments "cast reflections of improper conduct upon sister nations of the British Commonwealth." I trust that this is the reflection intended by Mr. Wolfe, because this is exactly what has been occurring in Australia.

Who knows the full story of the Loans Affair? How much public money was senselessly spent on extravagant overseas trips by Gough? Which Australian government scorned 'God Save the Queen' as national anthem, removed the Royal insignia from postal departments, and deleted the word Commonwealth from our Parliament?

As an Australian, I will assure you if I may, Mr. King, that we are not all dismayed by the demise of our socialist government, and we are not all blind to the real threats to the British Commonwealth.

I'm angry

As a former member of a trade union in this city for several years, I am not only disgusted with the tactics and behavior of union leaders and picketing strikers, I am angry. There is a difference between valid contract negotiation on the one hand and the hostaging of innocents in the intimidation of those who seek to aid the helpless on the other.

Last year it was public school students. While merely trying to collect their assignments, my children, like others, had to thread their way through literally scores of so-called adults who screamed obscenities and made threatening gestures at them. Now, the hospitalized sick are the victims, along with those who volunteer merely to help feed them. Today, I was subjected to unwarranted and possibly illegal intimidation each time I came and went from the Royal Jubilee Hospital. Well, strikers, hear this: Not only will I not be intimidated, I shall if necessary bring a lawsuit. There are two avenues or both open to any person who is subjected to this type of treatment: a civil action in tort, or an action under Section 244 of the Criminal Code of Canada. One does not have to be physically harmed or even touched to bring an action in assault.

The elements of a civil action are merely (1) the intention of the aggressor (union striker) to cause harmful or offensive contact; (2) the ability of the aggressor (union striker) to cause such contact; (3) which causes apprehension or fear in the victim (citizen). Courts have awarded generous money damages in hundreds of such cases. Under the Criminal Code, intentionally applied force, directly or indirectly, or an attempt or threat by act or gesture, can be punishable with imprisonment up to two years. Union leaders have also been held responsible in many cases for the actions of striking members.

It should not be necessary for ordinary citizens to have to contemplate such litigation to protect their legal rights; the government should have the guts to declare certain essential occupations beyond the scope of strike action. Surely, the feeding of and caring for the sick is an essential service. Until the government acts — and unless we demand that it does it won't — my message to union leaders and strikers is this: You are doing the cause of organized labor no good, and if you attempt to move in on my legal rights as a citizen in a free democracy, I'll see you in court.

SEE YOU IN COURT.

Too Far

To Premier Bennett:

That does it — Now I am really angry — You and your government have gone too far with your price increases. It's all very well to balance the books but not at the expense of people's lives.

The ferry increase certainly discriminates against those of us living on the islands. I would not mind the increase, because as a rational person, some of the time, I realize that the transportation is very economical — but on top of the other increases you have imposed — this latest one has made me fighting mad.

I find you unreasonable and very insensitive to the effect this has on the lives of people. Perhaps you can afford it and have never had to struggle to survive. It must be nice but I know too many people who have been affected and hurt by your 7 per cent sales tax and now this latest, not to mention the income tax, the hospital insurance and the automobile insurance.

My God — why try to balance the budget in a year? Have you ever looked into the personal suffering this has caused or is the business of government to ignore this part of humanity and go blithely on balancing the books?

Trident

The controversy and protests continue over the building of the Trident nuclear submarine base at Bangor, Washington. In my view the Trident program is probably needed to maintain the balance of power throughout the world. However, I cannot agree that the location for the submarine base in close proximity to major civilian populations can be viewed as sensible. In this age of massive nuclear capability, huge numbers of civilian lives would undoubtedly be lost in an attack on this strategic target.

I cannot help but wonder, in this day and age, where technology will soon bring about space stations with earth shuttles, why such a submarine base cannot be located offshore on the continental shelf? Being a commercial fisherman, it occurs to me that there are many underwater canyons and flat plains up to approximately 100 miles offshore of Washington State. Could not a base be located somewhere out there, yet well within range of defence from the U.S. mainland?

Being unaware of any international treaties governing the use of the seabed, it occurs to me that territorial sea limits may need to be extended. Could not the possible added costs of placing the installation underwater, work also to some advantage by reducing the need for the hundreds of feet of reinforced concrete at the Bangor base? Regardless, does it not make sense to remove such a potential target from within high density population surroundings?

Example

After your excellent editorials and Mr. Gorde Hunter's column in the Colonist, there are few words left to describe the utter contempt all decent people feel for both strikers and our government, whose attitude now is not "Let them eat cake," but "let them die."

There is general disappointment over their callous indifference toward the sick and suffering. Prior to this strike the wives of the veterans wrote to the minister of health advising him of the lack of staff at the Memorial Pavilion. Men who are confined to wheel chairs are utterly helpless and unable to obtain help when urgently needed, due entirely to insufficient staff. One cannot speak too highly of the nurses and their unfailing devotion and good nature in what must sometimes be very trying circumstances. Even before this disgraceful strike the wives of the veterans had taken on a great number of duties ordinarily performed by the hospital personnel. This penny pinching at the expense of our war veterans makes one wonder if some people were worth fighting for.

A word of praise for those wonderful boys and girls who turned out last Saturday and did a splendid job helping at the Memorial Pavilion. Surely an example to some of their elders. Sickness and death comes to us all, and all those now responsible for this strike may one day be in need of care. Let us hope they will not be denied this by their fellow man.

SHOULD A CAR WITH A REPUTATION FOR BEING SO SAFE GO SO FAST?

Over the years, Volvo has become the very symbol of the safe, sane automobile, designed for people with a rational view of life.

But anyone who slides behind the wheel of a 1976 Volvo 240 may discover it's something more.

As Road Test magazine has put it: "This is one fun car to drive."

This year, Volvo has introduced a new fuel-injected, overhead cam 4-cylinder engine. It has extremely fast pickup in the 20-55 m.p.h. range where most serious driving is done.

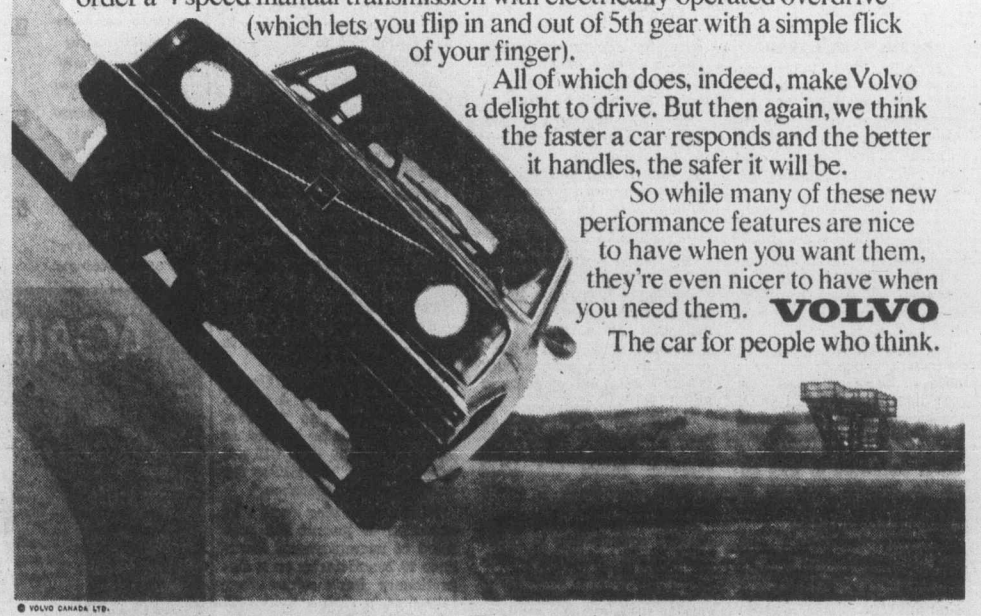

In a comparison of passing times, a Volvo 242 with a 4-cylinder engine was faster than a Mercedes 280 with a six.

Volvo also gives you rack and pinion steering to help you take life's curves. And a spring-strut front suspension designed to keep the car steady and level even if you take them fast. You get 4-wheel power disc brakes. And you can order a 4-speed manual transmission with electrically-operated overdrive (which lets you flip in and out of 5th gear with a simple flick of your finger).

All of which does, indeed, make Volvo a delight to drive. But then again, we think the faster a car responds and the better it handles, the safer it will be.

So while many of these new performance features are nice to have when you want them, they're even nicer to have when you need them. VOLVO

Company profits limited

Ottawa moves to plug controls program loopholes

Over-all effect minimal

By DOUG SMALL

OTTAWA (CP) — The govenment moved Tuesday to plug loopholes in its controls program with new rules limiting company profits.

But it also eased restraints for a number of firms and officials said the over-all effect of the anti-inflation program changes on price levels will be minimal. Wage controls were left unchanged.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons that as of a July date yet to be fixed, processing, manufacturing and other non-distributing companies will no longer be allowed to raise prices solely on the basis of increased costs.

Nor will they be able to avoid restraints by averaging high profits on one product line with lower ones on another.

Now, all firms will be limited by law to annual profits equal to 85 per cent — down from an original 95 per cent announced when the program began last Oct. 14 — of those during previous years.

Macdonald softened the new medicine by saying companies no longer have to base their profits on average levels during the five years ending last Oct. 14. Now, they will be able to use either the five-year average or 1975 as a base, whichever period produced the highest profit.

And he added that companies whose profit margins are "too low," no matter which period is used, will be permitted to earn an unspecified minimum profit which will be disclosed in new regulations to be released by the anti-inflation board.

The effect of the moves, announced in the federal budget, will be to restrict profit levels for companies that have used techniques of increased cost and mixtures of product-line profits to circumvent price restraints.

But the changes will also ease conditions for firms forced by original regulations to hold profits down to abnormally low levels based on five-year average profit levels.

Macdonald said the action was taken to achieve greater "equity and effectiveness" in the price controls program.

"Some firms are subject to insufficient restraint because in practice they have been able to choose rules which are favorable to them.

"Others are locked into very unfavorable starting positions and therefore have been subject to unreasonable restraints."

Such conditions create unfair competition among firms and could lead to sharp price jumps at the end of the three-year controls program, Macdonald said.

In addition to keeping over-all profit levels down, companies also will be forced to hold profits on each of their product lines to 85 per cent of previous years.

And more companies will be ordered to tell the anti-inflation board when they plan to raise prices. Currently, about 150 firms must justify proposed price increases to the board. Another 200—all major companies—will be added to the list next week, an official said.

Macdonald also announced a number of less extensive changes in price-control rules affecting such distributing companies as food wholesalers and retailers and department store chains. These firms now will be allowed gross profit margins—the difference between the price a distributor pays for an item and the price he sells it for—on each product line equal to the full amount of previous years. Under original regulations, distributors were only allowed to maintain gross profit margins for their businesses as a whole.

As a result, distributors will now be able to boost their margins by putting more emphasis on selling profitable goods.

Other price control changes announced in the budget:

● Charitable contributions and money spent by firms on research and development will no longer be considered "restricted expenses," freeing companies to increase amounts for such purposes. But political contributions will be added to the list of company expenses that cannot rise above past levels.

● Trappers and fur farmers will join farmers and fishermen as among those whose prices are exempt from controls. Farm and wharf prices have never been subject to restraints.

● Construction prices established through competitive bidding by all firms with more than 20 employees will now be covered by controls. Previously, only construction firms with 500 or more workers were covered.

● Land-prices increases since last Oct. 14 will be subject to controls. Original regulations did not spell out when the program would apply to increased land values.

● Companies will be allowed to increase annual dividends by eight per cent, effective Oct. 15 this year. Initial rules prohibited firms from increasing dividends, except under exceptional circumstances, for the first year of the program.

● Regulations covering the changes are to be announced as soon as possible, Macdonald said. But they will not become operative until sometime in July.

'Eight-week wonders'

Standards tougher on UIC payments

By GINNY GALT

OTTAWA (CP) — Tougher standards are coming for the collection of unemployment insurance payments by requiring claimants to work at least 12 - weeks out of a 52 - week period before they are eligible for benefits.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said in his budget speech Tuesday night that the proposed increase in the eligibility period to 12 weeks from the current eight weeks is prompted by "the increasing number of people who have only marginal attachment to the labor force and who thus have less of a claim for the protection of unemployment insurance benefits."

The change would affect an annual average of 330,000 persons who now are eligible to collect benefits after working eight to 11 weeks.

Elimination of the so-called "eight-week wonders" would save up to $300 million if the change was in effect for a full year. But the changes must be approved by Parliament, so the full impact of saving is not likely to be felt until sometime next year.

Other planned amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act tie special extended benefits to regional unemployment rates rather than the national rate.

That will result in longer benefit periods in areas of high unemployment, such as the Atlantic provinces, and shorter benefit periods in areas of relatively low unemployment, such as the Prairies.

The government also plans to link more closely the number of weeks during which benefits may be collected more closely with the number of weeks actually worked.

Under the current system, a person out of work in an area of high unemployment could collect benefits for a maximum of 44 weeks after working only eight weeks.

The proposed changes will not extend the current waiting period of two weeks and will not alter the maximum benefit rate, which now is $133 a week on maximum insurable earnings of $200 a week.

In addition to announcing plans to tighten up the unemployment insurance program, Macdonald said the government will merge the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) and the department of manpower "to promote even greater effectiveness in administration and to enhance the quality of employment services to Canadian workers."

The merger, which one official described as 'a one-stop, one-shop plan," is scheduled to take place in several stages over three years.

The federal share of the unemployment insurance program last year was $1.7 billion, which represented about 53 per cent of the total 1975 cost of $3.4 billion. The rest was covered by employer and employee contributions.

In a bid to hold the line on future expenditures, Parliament recently passed legislation shifting a higher portion of the costs to workers and employers. Under the new formula, which went into effect Jan. 1, the federal government will pay about 38 per cent of the projected 1976 costs of $3.78 billion.

Manpower Minister Robert Andras said in a statement that the merger of manpower and UIC operations is not designed as an economy measure.

"However, it should result in a more efficient use of available resources for the administration of the manpower and unemployment insurance programs ... and possibly some reduction in unemployment insurance payments."

Andras said that the public now "is obliged to shuttle between the UIC office and the Canada manpower centre." There was no price tag attached to the federal proposal to re-unite the two organizations, which operated together prior to 1966.

Andras said the employment service was transferred out of the UIC "because it was felt that a positive manpower policy could best mature if it was allowed to develop independently of any responsibility for an unemployment insurance program."

However, manpower services of counselling, placement and training have improved considerably in the past decade and the government now feels manpower and UIC operations should again be combined in order to give UIC claimants "a faster and more systematic exposure of clientele to the manpower services," Andras said.

Proposed changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act will reduce the maximum time that benefits can be collected to 50 weeks from 51 weeks.

However, UIC official Harry Hodder said most claimants do not collect for the maximum period and the average benefit period is 17½ weeks. There is an annual average of 2.5 million claimants.

A person who has worked between eight to 15 weeks is entitled now to basic benefits for eight weeks.

Also under a provision known as "the re-established benefit phase," every claimant is automatically eligible for 10 additional weeks of benefits plus another eight weeks if the national unemployment rate is higher than 5.1 per cent, as it now is.

Proposed changes will wipe out the 10 additional benefit weeks and the extra weeks added for the unemployment rate will be based on the regional, rather than the national, rates.

Hodder said unemployment insurance claimants in areas of almost full employment "now get an automatic gift of eight benefit weeks and that just doesn't make sense."

There now are only partial adjustments made for variations in regional unemployment rates.

Another feature of the existing system gives persons who have worked 20 weeks an additional 18 benefit weeks, over and above the other benefits they are entitled to.

The new system basically will give claimants one benefit week for every week worked, to a maximum of 25 weeks. In other words, a person who works 12 weeks will be entitled to benefits for a basic period of 12 weeks and a person who works 25 weeks will be entitled to benefits for 25 weeks.

A person who has worked more than 25 weeks will be entitled to a further benefit week for every two worked over 25 weeks, to a maximum of 13 benefit weeks.

Under the new system, claimants also will be entitled to an additional 20 benefit weeks if unemployment in their region is higher than 8.6 per cent.

They will be entitled to no additional benefits if the regional unemployment level is four per cent or less.

Macdonald said the Unemployment Insurance Act also will be amended so that severance pay will be treated as savings "and as such will not affect a person's eligibility for unemployment insurance."

"The act also will be amended to permit the payment of unemployment insurance to beneficiaries on a discretionary basis where they take part in such activities as elective employment training or short-time work programs."

Hodder said that provision will apply to claimants participating in federal government projects. It will not allow persons to continue collecting benefits while working at jobs in the private sector.

Income taxes basically not changed

By MICHAEL LAVOIE

OTTAWA (CP) — The personal income tax system is basically unchanged but the government made it more inviting Tuesday for taxpayers to enrol in pension plans and hire child care services for their offspring.

In his first budget speech, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the government will give up $75 million in revenues this year to give taxpayers bigger deductions for pension contributions and child care costs.

But over-all taxpayers will contribute about 26 per cent more in personal taxes this year than they did last year. The budget estimates the total take in personal income tax at more than $16 billion in 1976-77 compared to $12.7 billion in 1975-76. Inflation of taxable income is the main reason for the increase.

He said individuals and their employers each will be able to claim tax deductions on pension plan contributions of up to $3,500 a year, a $1,000 increase.

For taxpayers who are not enrolled in company pension plans, contributions to individual retirement savings programs will be increased to a tax-deductible maximum of $5,500 from $4,000.

Macdonald said increases in maximum allowable deductions for deferred income plans will help offset the reduction in the real value of the plans because of inflation.

He also announced a doubling to $30 per week per child in the amount that working women and single-parent fathers can claim for the cost of day nurseries and other child care expenses.

The old limit was $15 weekly or $500 annually per child with a total annual maximum deduction of $2,000 per family. The new limits set the basic deduction at a $30 weekly maximum or $1,000 per year per child with a total annual family maximum deduction of $4,000.

Macdonald said further amendments will allow persons obtaining income from research grants and adult training allowances to claim child care deductions.

Another change will allow persons contributing to registered home ownership, savings plans to shift plans from one bank trust company or similar institution to another. Taxpayers moving to other communities or dissatisfied with the rate of return they are receiving will be able to transfer their investments.

Under the plan, non-owners of homes, are allowed to save up to $1,000 a year, tax-free, to a maximum of $10,000 for the purchase of a home.

But restraint goals being met

Ottawa spending more than ever

By MICHAEL LAVOIE

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is spending more than ever before and has added $700 million to estimated total outlays for last year but tough austerity measures are beginning to take hold, Finance Minister Donald Macdonall said Tuesday.

In his first budget speech, Macdonald told the Commons that total 1976-77 spending of more than $42.1 billion remains within the restraint goals set by cabinet last year.

The figure represents a 14-per-cent increase over total spending for 1975-76, which ended March 31, he said. Planning for next year is based on a further rise of 11 per cent, bringing projected 1977-78 spending to about $46.7 billion.

The government expects a deficit this year of about $5 billion compared with about $4.5 billion last year.

Outside the Commons, Macdonald told reporters the increase in spending over last year was cut to 14 per cent from an original estimate of 16 per cent because last year's spending was about $700 million higher than expected.

This was because of miscalculations, totalling about $500 million of the amounts the government departments would have left in their budgets to return to the central revenue fund at year's end, he said.

The rest was due to payments of about $200 million which were made earlier than expected to Petro-Canada, the government oil company, and to the Export Development Corporation, a government agency which helps finance the foreign purchase of domestic goods.

Macdonald told the Commons that expected spending increases this year and next meet the government's goal of keeping spending growth lower than the over-all growth in the gross national product, the total value of all goods and services produced in the country.

Macdonald said the austerity program announced last December, together with further measures including reductions in unemployment insurance costs and a ceiling on growth of federal-provincial shared-cost programs, are part of a plan for basic changes in the pattern of federal spending.

"Our objective is to achieve a major shift in the pace of growth of the government sector in a deliberate, susained fashion," h esaid.

The December austerity measures included the scrapping of Information Canada, the Company of Young Canadians and the Opportunities for Youth program and the reduction of growth in the civil service work force to a level of 1.5 per cent annually.

Macdonald, Trudeau with budget

Variety of breaks for some firms

OTTAWA (CP) — The new federal budget Tuesday included a variety of tax breaks for companies as well as an end to the freeze on corporate dividends.

The measures:

—Allow corporate dividends to increase by eight per cent annually after Oct. 15;

—Increase the amount of money a small business can earn while retaining special, low income tax rates;

—Extend special exploration incentives to all taxpayers, not just those companies whose principal business is exploration;

—Change capital cost allowance rates on a range of items, including increases for computers and reductions for aircraft.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald noted in his speech that corporate dividends have been frozen, except in special circumstances, since the anti-inflation program went into effect Oct. 14.

Among major changes in business taxes, the budget will allow small companies to earn up to 50 per cent more and still qualify for special reduced taxes.

Mr. Macdonald said the maximum income allowed will be increased to $150,000 a year from the current $100,000.

If it stays under the maximum, a company will pay taxes of 20 per cent for a manufacturing business or 25 per cent on other enterprises. The regular tax rate is 40 per cent for manufacturing and 4 per cent for other types of business.

The measures apply to companies controlled in Canada.

As part of its effort to increase the search for new supplies of petroleum and minerals, the government has allowed companies whose principal business is exploration to write off 100 per cent of exploration costs in a year.

Mr. Macdonald said that effective Tuesday night, all taxpayers will be given the 100-percent write off for three years ending July 1, 1979. Previously, such taxpayers could only write off 30 per cent of exploration costs annually.

In another measure for the energy industry, Mr. Macdonald amended the income tax act effective Tuesday night to make it clear Ottawa won't levy a tax on incentives provided to the companies by the provinces.

Mr. Macdonald said the government has completed a review of capital cost allowances — under which a taxpayer can claim the costs of assets as a deduction on income tax.

He said the capital cost allowance will be increased to 30 per cent from 20 per cent for computers and related equipment.

The allowance for offshore drilling platforms will be increased to 30 per cent from 15 per cent.

The allowance for taxis and for portable equipment rented out temporarily will go to 40 per cent from 30 per cent while the rate for a jetty will increase by one percentage point to five.

The budget decreased the allowance on aircraft to 25 per cent from 40 per cent; on radio, television, radar and electrical generating equipment to 20 per cent from 25 per cent; on powered earth-moving equipment to 30 per cent from 50 per cent and on leased advertising signs to 20 per cent from 35 per cent.

'No real effort' Wolfe judgment on federal bill

The federal budget lacks real effort to create jobs, solve housing problems, or build up trade, provincial finance minister Evan Wolfe said Tuesday.

Wolfe said he had only had a perfunctory look at the budget, but he was pleased to see that the anti-inflation program will be paying more attention to pricing.

"The program needs increased credibility on the price side," said Wolfe.

The government is especially interested in the provisions as it is about to enter into an agreement with Ottawa to implement the guidelines in British Columbia.

"We have said a good program needs visible fairness," said Wolfe.

He agrees that the two main concerns of government are inflation and unemployment, but questioned whether the budget goes far enough.

"I don't see any real effort to create more jobs."

However the additional tax incentives for small businesses could create some jobs.

Criticizing the budget he said: "Job creations could have been represented and there could have been more on housing and something on the trade side."

He noted that federal expenditures will increase over 14 percent to $42.5 billion, with a $4.5 billion deficit.

He is concerned with the deficit programs over the long range, and question if there is any real restraint indicated in that size of a budget.

Tariff on pork possible saving

OTTAWA (CP) — The temporary removal or reduction of tariffs on about $100 million worth of food, mostly from the United States, were among changes announced in the federal budget Tuesday as inflation-fighting steps.

The major change is removal of a half-cent-a-pound tariff on about $77 million worth of pork annually from the U.S., a finance department spokesman said.

"Hopefully, whatever saving there is will be passed on to the consumer," he said. But it was up to the food industry to make that decision.

A tariff was also removed from bacon, and ham mostly imported from the U.S. from hearts, kidneys, tongues and liver, mostly imported from Australia and the U.S.

Tariffs were reduced on canned pork, canned ham, canned luncheon meats and macaroni, which Canada imports mainly from member countries of the European Economic Community (EEC).

These changes, all effective immediately, will increase to $1.6 billion the $1.5 billion worth of imported goods currently affected by tariff reductions announced in February, 1973.

Charity rules set

OTTAWA (CP) — A new federal tax law affecting fund-raising for charities, including churches, universities, medical institutes, theatres and the like, will go into effect next Jan. 1, Finance Minister Macdonald announced in his budget Tuesday night.

The new tax rules are little different from proposals made almost a year ago by former finance minister John Turner. Their announced aim is to ensure that charities are used for their proper purposes and not as a means for wealthy corporations or individuals to hide money from the tax collector.

The new law will require charities registered with the national revenue department to be classified as charitable organizations, private foundations or public foundations.

Charitable organizations are the active bodies that actually do charitable work. Foundations are set up mainly to supply funds to the active organizations. A foundation whose money comes primarily from one person or family will be called a private foundation. Public foundations will be those drawing their money from a variety of sources.

Federal tax law has for many years exempted registered charities from taxation on their incomes and has given tax relief to those who make donations to them. This continues to be the basic principle of the new law, Macdonald said.

However, private foundations will be required to pay out 80 per cent of their annual income to charitable organizations, or five per cent of their assets each year, whichever is greater. This is designed to ensure that the private foundations are not used as a haven for accumulating tax-free income.

Charitable organizations and public foundations will also be required to use at least 80 per cent of their annual income for charitable purposes. This is to ensure that not more than 20 per cent of their income is spent on fund-raising activity.

Background papers tabled by Macdonald said there are 35,000 registered charities in Canada, about two-thirds of them religious organizations. All taxpayers are permitted a standard $100 income deduction for tax purposes to cover medical exemptions and charitable donations. Donations in excess of $100 can be claimed as income deductions when backed up by receipts.

Little reaction either way to document

By The Canadian Press

Early reaction to the federal budget Tuesday night ranged from slight praise to mild criticism.

Doug Peters, chief economist with the Toronto Dominion Bank, saw it mainly as a standpat budget.

"I don't really see any major changes. Some of the minor changes are quite positive ones."

However, he took issue with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's forecast reduction of the annual inflation rate to 8 from 9 per cent by the end of the year.

"There does not seem to be anything in this budget that would change drastically our estimate of 9 per cent in 1976," he said.

In a press release from Ottawa, Joe Morris, just-re-elected president of the Canadian Labour Congress, said:

"The government has demonstrated with this budget that it has no confidence in its own program of price controls. In the circumstances, we had expected the government to come in with an expansionary budget to deal with the serious levels of unemployment and make use of the full capacity of our economy.

"Instead, we have been presented with a budget which relies on expansion in the United States to stimulate growth. The budget fails to do anything about unemployment."

The president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce said that the budget contained few surprises and little good news for business.

"We were not surprised at the budget, because we realized Mr. Macdonald was in the difficult position of not wanting to overheat the economy on one hand and not wanting to dampen it on the other," said Gerald Pearson, of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

"One thing that concerns us is the suggestion that we in the private sector have to create 250,000 jobs," Pearson said in a telephone interview. "I think the private sector will have difficulty doing it because we've done a lot in Canada to destroy the incentive to gamble, to take risks."

Gordon Woodman, president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta, said in Edmonton he disagrees with those who described the federal budget announced Tuesday as "a nothing budget."

"The budget contained a lot of disincentives," said Woodman, "and any time there are disincentives, that's a big concern."

He referred specifically to the new measure making all companies regulated by the Anti-Inflation Board limited to yearly profits equal to 85 per cent of those during previous years, down from the 95 per cent previously allowed.

"We must keep the profit before tax not only level, but must decrease it from the base level," said Woodman. "It's hard to see how this could be anything but discouraging to the business community or Canadians in general."

Canada's independent petroleum operators are pleased with budget measures they feel will increase Canadian investment in resource industries, John Porter, general manager of the Independent Petroleum Association said in Calgary.

Saskatchewan hails rain --- but not budget

REGINA (CP) — "I think the rain is going to be a heck of a lot more significant to us than the federal budget," Saskatchewan provincial secretary Elwood Cowley said Tuesday night.

Giving reporters the provincial government's reaction to the budget, Cowley called it "a relatively innocuous document" that failed to take a wide range of steps that could have been taken.

He said there should have been measures to reduce housing costs and mortgage interest rates and to alleviate unemployment.

Tory calls for an end to 'this spending spree'

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, called Tuesday's federal budget "smug, uncaring and totally indifferent to the real problems faced by Canadians."

Broadbent said the country needed measures to create jobs instead of what he termed a marginally negative, restrictive budget.

The government could have created jobs without causing inflation through tax cuts because manufacturers are operating at only 80 per cent of capacity, he added.

"It's a nothing budget," Broadbent said outside the Commons. "One wonders why they spent the time and money to prepare it and why they used up the time of members of the House to listen to the damn thing."

Changes to tighten operation of the unemployment insurance commission were indicative of an anti-worker mood in government, he said.

There was no economic justification for the budget, Broadbent said. Finance Minister Donald Macdonald should have stimulated the economy.

DENTON, England (CP) — The menu of a restaurant here said: "You are respectfully asked not to smoke cigars or pipes in the restaurant. Cigarette smokers are asked to inhale only."

Switch, save on RHOSP; little else for housing

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal tax change will allow future homebuyers to switch their registered home ownership savings plans from one financial institution to another.

Homebuyers who want to get a better return from savings plans can shop for a better deal under the changes announced by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald in his budget speech Tuesday.

The measure should also help people who move to new communities not served by the carriers of their plans.

The change in the home ownership savings plan is one of the few items directly affecting housing in the budget. The finance minister also announced that the long-promised Federal Mortgage Exchange Corp. (FMEC) is again being postponed.

Under the home ownership savings plan, homebuyers can put aside $1,000 a year tax free, up to a lifetime limit of $10,000, towards buying their first homes.

The minister raised the annual limit for tax-free savings permitted under registered retirement savings plans to $3,500 from $2,500 but he left the homeownership savings ceiling untouched.

Asked about this, Mr. Macdonald said the retirement savings plan program is older and it is time for a change.

The mortgage exchange corporation, created by legislation almost three years ago, was deferred once again because of government financial restraints, the minister said.

It was designed to give mortgage lenders a market for selling mortgages when they need cash. Mortgages could also be bought through it.

Questions about federal budget asked, answered

OTTAWA (CP) — Questions raised by Tuesday's federal budget:

Q—What's it going to cost me?

A—You've heard most of the bad news already in the form of provincial tax increases and last week's federal announcements of higher costs for gasoline, heating oil and stamps. There's some good news in the budget.

Q—Where?

A—Day care deductions will be doubled to $30 a week or $1,000 a year per child and to $4,000 maximum per family. You'll be able to invest more tax-deductible savings into registered retirement savings plans. The new limit is $3,500, up from $2,500, and if you don't belong to a pension plan, it goes to $5,500 from $4,000. You can also save by changing your buying habits.

Q—How?

A—As an energy saver, a new tax of $100 is being imposed on air conditioners for autos, station wagons, vans and smaller trucks. The government says air conditioners can add as much as 20 per cent to your gasoline bill. They're also saying now that as of Aug. 1, it will cost you more money to buy any car weighing more than 4,250 pounds.

Back in 1974, remember, they clapped an excise tax on bigger cars and the existing no-special-tax level is 4,500 pounds. By 1979, the limit will be down to 3,500 pounds when only compact and sub-compact autos would escape the tax.

If you buy a 4,500-pound car after Aug. 1, you'll pay $120 more in tax. The tax on such full-size cars as a Buick Electra, Chrysler Newport, Dodge Monaco or Ford LTD would range from $30 to $240, depending on weight. By 1979, it would range from $420 to $660. The government says that's an incentive to manufacturers to stop building big cars.

Q—What about my home?

A—Federal sales taxes will be eliminated on windmills, wind-powered systems for generating mechanical or electrical energy, as the government puts it. But if you're not quite ready for that, or a solar furnace, you might consider a self-timer for your heating system. Time controlled thermostats are said to save 10 to 15 per cent in energy. Also recommended are thermal insulation for pipes and ducts, solar cells to charge batteries and heat pumps. No sales tax on these.

Q—And food costs?

A—Some food costs should go down. Farmers may complain but import tariffs are being cut on fresh pork, ham and bacon. And on macaroni. Tariff cuts are being extended on many basic foods — some fresh vegetables, sugar — as well as drugs, plumbing fixtures and so on.

Q—What's going up?

A—Tariff reductions on tires and tubes are said to have hurt Canadian manufacturers and their employees and are being removed. That means higher prices for imports. The tariff on scissors also goes higher. And if you fly, you'll have to pay the air transportation tax of a maximum $8 a flight if you buy your ticket outside Canada and use a Canadian airport for arrival.

Q—I can't get a job. What about that?

A—The Unemployment Insurance Act is being changed "to encourage those with jobs to stay with them and those who are unemployed to seek suitable jobs." The outlook is for current high unemployment to remain stable, then decline. Meanwhile, the message seems to be take anything you can get.' To qualify for unemployment insurance, you'll have to work at least 12 weeks, not eight.

If you work the minimum, then claim insurance, you won't get it for long. It's going to be related to actual time worked. The idea is to get those "who have only a marginal attachment to the labor force" off the rolls. Severance pay will be treated as savings and won't affect eligibility for unemployment insurance, a break for long-time employees out of work. The UIC office and the Canada manpower centre are being united as an economy measure to cut costs.

Q—My uncle, the small businessman, says his taxes are too high.

A—If his business is Canadian-controlled, he'll be able to pay tax at a reduced rate of 20 per cent on profits up to $150,000 a year up to a cumulative total of $750,000. That's an increase of 50 per cent.

Q—He raises funds for charities.

A—He may have a problem. Some charities have spent so much on fund-raising that they haven't had much left for charity. They'll have to distribute, charitably, at least 80 per cent of the funds for which tax receipts have been issued. They'll also have to disclose publicly more about their finances and activities.

Q—My brother drives a taxi and, what with car costs and gas, it's really hurting. Anything for him?

A—By this time next year, he'll be paying 6.5 cents more a gallon for gas, although he can claim some deductions. This budget will allow him to write off the cost of his car faster, one of the many capital-cost allowances in the budget. Higher depreciation claims also may be made for offshore drilling platforms, computer hardware and software, runways and roads. Depreciation rates will be cut for airplanes, radio television and radar equipment, leased advertising signs, earth-moving equipment, and electrical generating equipment.

Q—Is the anti-inflation board working?

A—Yes, says Finance Minister Macdonald. But he says it will pay more attention to prices and profits with new regulations to keep them in line. Some firms evidently have been able to dodge present regulations. The new rules will be announced shortly. Meanwhile, he says, wages and salaries have been held within the guidelines for the most part and prices, while still increasing, aren't rising as fast as they had been last October, when the program was announced. The main forces pushing the consumer price index up are governmental, he indicated. They include retail sales taxes and public services. The price of meat and imported food had declined and the board had seen that the savings were passed to consumers, he says.

Alfred Perri with 54-pound Chinook from Beechey Head

The heaviest chinook salmon weighed into the King Fisherman Contest since 1970 was recorded at Becher Bay's Cheanuh Marina Sunday.

Alfred Perri, 3149 Orillia, Saanich, hooked into the 54-pounder around 8:30 Sunday morning, just east of Beechey Head, and it took him another three-quarters of an hour before he could bring it to gaff.

It is a sad story for some other angler. The mouth of the big whopper had been torn. Obviously it had been caught before and lost. It was the fish that got away and lived to be caught another day.

"I have been waiting for 10 years for this," said Perri, who last year led the King Fisherman Contest for a while with a 41½-pounder from Beechey Head.

Sunday he was using Rhys Davis Minnow Teaser and big minnow, 65 feet of line, and 1½ pounds of weight.

He was fishing with Bennie Smith, his regular partner who gaffed the fish, and 13-year-old cousin, Gino Perri.

They caught two other salmon, a 17-pounder and a smaller one, and on Friday Alfred Perri brought back three 17-pounders. "I had on a double-header of big ones, and lost them both. Maybe this is one of the fish I lost Friday," Perri said with a laugh.

As a Colonist subscriber he is in line to win both the King Fisherman trophy and the Polaroid color camera from Colwood Pharmacy.

He also is a contender for the Fish of the Year award.

But Perri's lead could be beaten.

Biggest chinook ever weighed into the 22-year-old King Fisherman Contest was a 58.8-pounder caught by A. Martin off Nanaimo's Gallows Point Aug. 24, 1966.

Other bigger chinooks include Nancy Nelson's 57.12-pounder caught at Albert Head in 1964; Eric Flinton's 56.12-pounder from Qualicum in 1957; Joe De Bodt's 55.4-pounder from Nitinat Bar in 1970, and Len Duncan's 55-pounder from Becher Bay in 1960.

All chinooks are classified as spring (chinook) salmon in the King Fisherman Contest, until they get to Barkley Sound and north of Bowser's Nile Creek. North of those marks chinooks 30 pounds and heavier are entered in the tyee category.

Perri said he was on the run between Aldridge Point and Beechey Head when the 54-pounder hit his line. "We weren't very far from the Head. We were lucky there was only one boat near us . . . and this fish took off as if he were heading for Port Angeles. He took us out from the main sports fishing fleet and we were able to play him without any interference."

It was a male fish and looked like a Fraser River red chinook.

'Something different' at Pearson College

Candles at end of long tunnel

A few weeks ago, two students sat facing each other on the stage of the small auditorium at Pearson College of the Pacific at Pedder Bay.

One was Egyptian, the other Israeli.

The room was dark except for a candle lighting up the faces of the two girls.

For more than an hour, the two talked about the problems faced by their two countries. They never became emotional.

Later that night, students from 40 different countries talked about what the two had said and the discussion lasted into the early morning hours.

This incident was related Tuesday to the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria by Jack Matthews, director of Pearson College.

Mattnews told his audience that this example of understanding another's point of view without necessarily agreeing with it, was the key to a greater co-operation between the nations of the world.

Matthews' own enthusiasm for the ideals and principles of the World College movement was evident throughout his talk.

"I've been in many schools all my life, but there is something different happening out there at Pedder Bay," Matthews said.

"I don't know of many other candles lit up at the end of a long tunnel," he said.

Matthews said three forces were shaping civilized societies today.

At one end, he said, were the laws which must be obeyed by everyone; at the other end was the area of free choice.

And in the centre, there was the flexible area of "obedience to the unenforceable," he said.

It was an area where free choice still existed, but if the wrong choice was made, others were being hurt without necessarily resulting in punishment.

It was society's attitude toward this "obedience to the unenforceable," Matthews said, that determined its strength.

And it was, perhaps, in this area that Pearson College could help strengthen society, he added.

"Education can change people's attitude," Matthews said, and Pearson College was showing this every day.

'Habits hard to bust'

A higher tax on luxury and full-size cars plus its extension to mid-size cars, as revealed in Tuesday's federal budget, isn't likely to change Canadian car-buying habits, according to Peter Pollen, past president of the Victoria Automobile Dealers Association.

"It's just another burden for people buying a mid-sized car," Pollen said.

The tax, purported to be for energy conservation, jumps from $20-$45 on full-sized new cars to $30-$240 on August 1. By 1979 the special energy conservation tax will have climbed to $240-$660 on full-sized cars.

Starting next year mid-sized car buyers will pay an additional $30-$70 extra at time of purchase and by 1979 this tax will cost similar car buyers $70-$360 more.

Effective immediately is a $100 tax on all automobile air-conditioning units.

Pollen, who agrees with the objective of energy conservation, called the increased tax on heavier automobiles "a typical Ottawa response to a problem—that is to tax it out of existence."

He said if Ottawa was serious about encouraging people to drive smaller cars it would "eliminate the punitive tax on import cars which is the highest in the western world."

Outside the Legislature Tuesday Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, a car dealer himself, supported the increased tax on heavier automobiles.

"We are all concerned about energy conservation and this is obviously the direction," he said.

The tax on the heavier automobiles is expected to net an additional $35 million for the federal treasury this year while $7 million is expected to be raised with the tax on car air-conditioning units.

Intermediate care stressed

Closure of 31 personal-care homes in the Greater Victoria area between November, 1973 and November, 1975, meant a loss of 282 beds for the elderly.

And within the last 30 days, four more units have closed, meaning the loss of an additional 50 beds, Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) told the Legislature Tuesday night during debate on health estimates.

Making what he called "Wallace's annual speech," the medical doctor appealed to the government to build more intermediate (personal) care hospital beds.

"If you or your parents or your grandparents need the kind of care that comes between acute and extended, you're on your own, buster," Wallace said. "That is the reward for independence. The person who in his middle years doesn't look for unemployment insurance or social assistance, works his fingers to the bone, saves a few thousand, and then after age 65 he becomes sick. If he doesn't require acute or extended care, the state rewards him handsomely by allowing him to pay his own hospital expenses."

Three successive governments had promised to build the beds but nothing had been done, Wallace said.

Norman Levi (NDP—New Westminster) said the NDP government had studied the problem but there would not be enough money to build sufficient beds. His department had estimated that it would cost between $150 and $200 million.

The answer was not building more hospitals but increased home care problems so that the elderly could remain in their homes unless they needed extended or acute care, Levi said.

Death probe promised

Two cabinet ministers promised Tuesday to investigate the circumstances surrounding the death of 81-year-old Allan Leroy Eggenburger in New Westminster on May 20.

Eggenburger, with only 10 per cent vision, died after a fall down an elevator shaft in a New Westminster medical building. He was on his way to visit his eye doctor.

Norman Levi (NDP—Vancouver Burrard) had asked Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm if the accident was a result of cutbacks in the staff of a transportation system for the elderly.

The sytem, using private cars to get elderly people to and from doctors' offices and hospitals, had its budget cut from $180,000 to $117,000 this year.

As a result, Levi claimed, the organization had been forced to lay off four or five "swampers" — people who rode with the elderly people and assisted them in reaching their destinations.

"On this occasion the elderly gentleman was not able to be escorted to his doctors office," Levi said.

Vander Zalm said he was unaware the death of Eggenburger was in any way related to the transportation program but that he would investigate.

"We have always attempted to provide the best service possible with the funds available," he said.

Labor Minister Allan Williams, in answer to a question from Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard), also promised to investigate the incident to ascertain whether the accident had anything to do with faulty elevator inspection.

The accident occurred when the elevator in the building jammed about six feet above the ground floor level. A young man in the jammed elevator forced the protective gate open in order to call for help.

While the gates were open Eggenburger, thinking he was stepping into the elevator, fell to his death.

PO trouble gets deeper

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite postage increases of up to 50 per cent the financially-troubled post office is expected to continue losing money at the rate of $500 million a year.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Tuesday night in his first budget speech that postal rate increases announced Friday by Postmaster-General Bruce Mackasey will cut about $100 million from the Post Office deficit next year.

But he made clear that the higher rates to be imposed in the coming months, including 12 cents for a first-class letter, will not make the post office a profitable operation. They will retard but not reverse the growth in the postal deficit, he said.

Working mom now typical of American family

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The typical American family no longer has a breadwinner husband and a homemaker wife, a U.S. labor department study has found.

Nowadays, both marriage partners in the "typical" family have jobs. The erosion of family income is partly responsible for sending more wives to work, says the current issue of the department's Monthly Labor Review.

"The family model of husband-breadwinner and wife-homemaker is valid for only 34 out of 100 husband-wife families, compared with 56 out of 100 a quarter century ago," it said.

The number of employed wives has increased from 36 out of 100 in 1950 to 49 out of 100 in 1975 — a rise that has been more rapid among whites than blacks over the past 10 years.

The major reason compelling wives to work, the study found, is money.

In 1974, the median income was $16,928 in famiies with working wives, compared to $12,082 in those with nonworking wives.

Erosion of family income also sent wives to work. The decline in the purchasing power of multiworker families between 1973 and 1974 was 1.3 per cent, compared to 3.1 per cent in families depending on a husband as sole breadwinner.

The study said a lag in pay scales for women meant they still contribute only about 26 per cent of family income, unchanged from the 1920s.

Salary differences are explained in part because the bulk of working wives have gone into low-paying, traditional female jobs in service industries. Female employment has more than doubled in these industries since 1950, while it has risen only about one-fifth in goods-producing industries.

But the attachment of working wives to their jobs was "neither temporary nor capricious," the study said. It found 72 per cent of working wives held fulltime positions.

The report concluded rapid growth among working wives over the past quarter century began with middle - aged women whose children were grown, and has shifted to younger women still of childbearing age.

Although wives with young children are less likely to work, the study found four out of 10 wives with children under six held jobs. Among working wives with preschoolers, two - thirds worked fulltime.

Thus, two-thirds of all children under 18 now live in multi-worker families, creating what the study described as a child care and child rearing problem. It noted, however, the extra income may save many children from poverty or give them advantages they otherwise would not have.

'Basket cases' improve

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economies of two of the world's most impoverished countries, India and Bangladesh, have improved considerably, says a World Bank official.

Both countries have enjoyed bumper grain crops and will have surplus food stocks to carry over from this year into next, said Ernest Stern, the bank vice-president for South Asia.

But Stern said that if the United States and other industrialized countries delay on new financing for World Bank aid programs, it might slow the pace of improvement in the two countries, especially India.

Stern said the new Bangladesh government, which took power in a coup in November, is putting great emphasis on agricultural development and "increasing the scope of private-sector operations."

"The food-supply situation for Bangladesh is for once quite satisfactory," he said at a news briefing.

The last year also has been "exceptionally good" for India, Stern said. Considerable progress was made in controlling inflation, and overall economic output rose 5 to 6 per cent, the best this decade.

"India has grown as an industrial power and has now become quite a significant one," he said. He said Indian grain harvests will mean a record carry-over of grain into next year of about 11 million tons.

But, he said, both countries remain desperately poor and need aid from the rest of the world to help them with their development plans.

Graven while you wait

CHICAGO (AP) — Elmo Williams makes tombstones — while you wait — for persons who might be in a hurry to see before they die what's going to be on top of their grave.

"Before you go, call Elmo's," says one of the slogans printed on the back of Williams' bowling shirt and painted on the truck he uses to deliver the markers to the cemetery.

'I can turn out a made-'to-order tombstone in about 90 minutes," he says.

"An 85-year-old lady came in and told me what she wanted for her tombstone," said Williams. "I got to work on it at once. She wanted her picture inserted in the granite. She was very satisfied with it and told me to set it aside until her death when friends will pay for it.

"I have several set aside that way — sort of like being in 'will call.' Some are making monthly payments on them."

Williams, 59, said he was a tombstone salesman for monument companies for 25 years before getting into business on his own.

Rock promoter, police at odds

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

A rock-music promoter and Saanich police are at odds following Monday's free concert at Mount Douglas Park.

Victoria promoter Frank Dimarzio of Scorpio Productions was incensed Tuesday after learning that Saanich police intend to recommend to Saanich council that no further permits be issued for rock concerts at the park.

"Is this a free park for public use or is this a park for council to recommend who to use?" Dimarzio asked.

Insp. Ted Owens of the Saanich police said Tuesday that the open-air concert drew 8,000 people for the six-hour period, that traffic congestion would have prevented any emergency vehicles from getting through had the need arisen and that there were complaints of open use of liquor and drugs.

Owens said, however, that a check Tuesday morning by his department showed that the cleanup after the concert was a "good job" and that ground keepers reported no major damage.

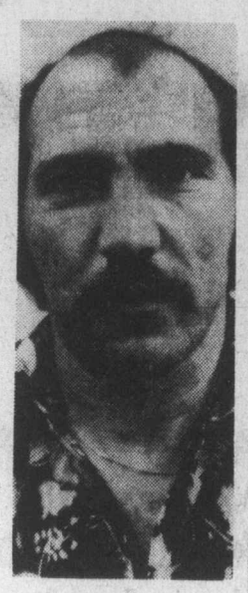

Dimarzio said Saanich police patrols did not stop once at the concert but only drove by. There were no arrests.

He objected strenuously to Owens' crowd estimate and said the concert was "lucky if there were 2,000 there."

Owens said he was not there personally — the figure of 8,000 came from his officers' reports.

On the use of liquor, Dimarzio admitted there "was some drinking going on, but not that much."

"Pot? I couldn't quite pinpoint anybody on that," Dimarzio answered.

Slam at Wallace's 'interest' draws 'guttersnipe' retort

A Social Credit backbencher Tuesday night accused Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) of "just looking after his personal friend Fraser McColl" in pushing for the Douglas-McKenzie site for Victoria's third hospital.

The government has told the Capital Region board that it will approve a Helmcken Road site instead.

The accusation that Wallace was "just looking after his personal friend Fraser McColl," came from James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) as the house debated health estimates.

McColl, he said, was a former executive of the Oak Bay Conservative party association.

Wallace did not answer the accusation in the house. But he said later outside that he had expected that the government would resort to "guttersnipe tactics."

He said: "The facts speak for themselves. I just feel sure . . I am completely convinced of the reasonableness of the arguments I presented, not the least of which is the fact that the health and hospital planning commission of greater Victoria decided by an 11-1 vote to recommend the McKenzie-Douglas site."

He continued: "I just assumed that I would be dealing with the kind of guttersnipe tactics you can expect from the Social Credit party; when all my reasonable arguments couldn't be refuted any other way, someone would come in in the way Chabot did and present this simply as a conflict of interest."

Wallace said the municipality of Saanich is currently negotiating with commercial developers to use that property as a commercial site in which case it would be worth close to double its value as a hospital site.

Owners of the 25 acres are Fraser McColl and Gordon Rolston, partners in Rand and M Development Co., Ltd.

Earlier, Health Minister Robert McClelland told the house that the owners of the McKenzie-Douglas site paid $374,000 less than three years ago for the property which the Capital Region Board had been asked to pay $2.5 million for.

"We are being asked to pay $100,000 an acre for land purchased for about $13,000 an acre," he said.

"This government can't support that kind of speculation."

He had been replying to Wallace who continued to ask why the minister wanted the hospital built on the Helmcken Road site.

Access to a hospital at Helmcken Road would be difficult, Wallace said, since it was located close to the greatest bottleneck in the Victoria area on the Trans-Canada Highway.

He noted that all obstetrics would be moved to the new hospital.

"In light of documented evidence of traffic problems, there would be a real chance that we will have a higher incidence of babies being born en route to hospital," Wallace said.

McClelland said that while access would be more difficult from the east and south, it would be easier from the north and west.

Decision today

A new round of talks aimed at finding grounds for settlement of the civic, regional and school worker strike here, is due to begin here today.

The last session adjourned Friday night for the long weekend and, at that time, provincial mediator Clark Gilmour issued a set of guidelines under which the talks would resume today. Included in the guidelines was a stipulation that the attitudes of delegates from both sides must indicate that they are willing to undertake serious bargaining.

When talks adjourned Friday, spokesmen said little progress had been made in the session which continued for three days.

Meanwhile, a statement issued by the Nanaimo District Teachers Association Monday, said it was imperative for the good of the community that the dispute be settled quickly.

The statement said that the association is deeply concerned over alarming lack of student progress, increasing high school student dropout rate, drastic drops in attendance, the doubling or tripling of the failure rate at secondary levels and dirty classrooms and washroom facilities.

"The association recognizes and acknowledges that some good educational efforts are being attempted during the dispute.

"But," the statement said. "It also acknowledges that the adverse conditions existing far outweight the good, and will continue to grow steadily worse as the dispute continues."

The president of Local 401 of The Canadian Union of Public Employees, Stan Boshier, used h v of rsumption of talks to issue a strong attack against the Mid-Island Public Employers Association.

Even best of experts fooled

Building a rubble-rouser

By ELEANOR BOYLE

Not many people know how to knock down a building in the middle of a city.

Even the experts run into problems — and Campbell Building demolition superintendent Stu Glendinning had one of the first of his 30-year construction career Tuesday.

Part of a brick wall fronting on Douglas Street broke out from under the seventh-storey floor where columns were being removed about 3 p.m., hurling bricks to the street below.

No one was injured but one girl whom Glendinning said appeared deaf mute and did not jump out of the way, was momentarily frightened and almost fainted.

He said about 200 bricks fell to the ground while much of the wall caved inward. It was scheduled to have remained intact until the floor above had been taken out.

But Glendinning said the 1912 structure is fragile and has only four inches of reinforcing bar through ceilings where most buildings have at least two feet of it.

"You can't read a building if you don't have the blueprints," he added. "The way it was built I don't think there were any blueprints."

Precautions are taken during city demolitions so similar incidents seldom occur.

Passersby are normally protected from flying rubble by planks on scaffolding, but they only accommodate the material that should fall down — not the stuff that comes down accidentally.

Glendinning has a crew of eight on the job, hauling away tons of broken concrete and odds and ends of the landmark each day.

A Vancouver resident, he moves around the province on just such projects because few other people have his expertise.

Under his belt are jobs such as one in Calgary recently where three feet of sidewalk was all the leeway he had for taking down a 150-foot building in the heart of the city.

In Victoria he has five feet of room on each side.

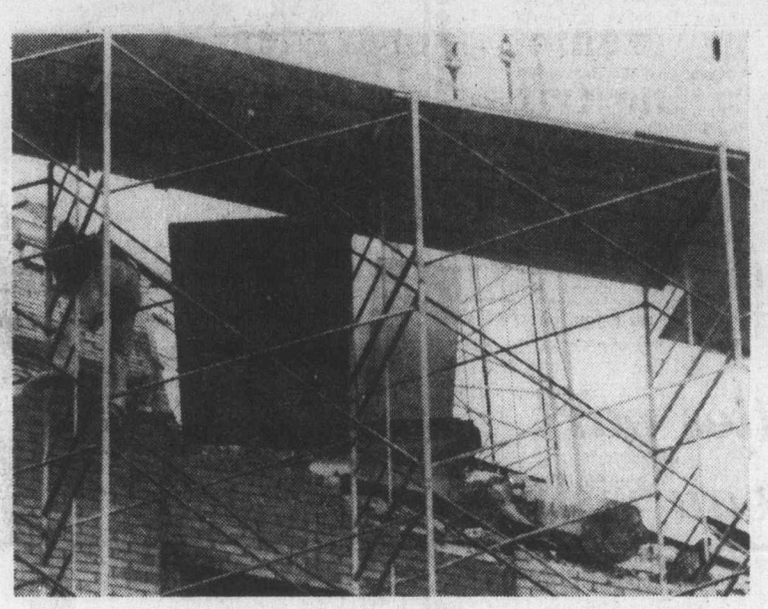

There are, of course, tricks to the art, Glendinning said on the job site this week.

First, don't let the huge crane bucketing rubble away swing out over Fort or the sidewalk — take a little more time and keep the action within the rear workspace.

Secondly, shield any sidewalk below with planks and plywood on the outside scaffolding when walls are being jackhammered.

And use the knowledge that walls can be pulled inward as easily as pushed outward.

Shaving the concrete and brick building step by step, Glendinning of the Johnston Terminals-owned Merchants' Contractors and his workers have so far lopped more than 14 feet off an estimated 120 that made it Victoria's tallest structure when it was completed in 1912.

Bricks accidentally fell Tuesday

Penny arcade law almost sure to pass

A proposed new bylaw to bring penny arcade operators under stricter controls is virtually assured of approval in principle at Thursday's meeting of Victoria city council.

Mayor Michael Young made a strong case Tuesday in favor of the new bylaw.

The mayor told aldermen at the weekly "caucus meeting" that city council should get involved in regulating such businesses.

Referring to juveniles operating pinball machines, the mayor asked: "Where do they get the money from and what do they do when they run out of money?"

Ald. John Hayes expressed some doubts as to the effectiveness of the bylaw which would prohibit anyone under 17 from entering a pool hall or penny arcade.

"If they are dispersed, where else will they congregate?" he asked.

But the majority of aldermen was in favor of "at least trying" to bring the situation under control.

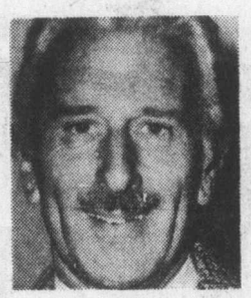

Ald. Ronald McKenzie told the meeting that city police recently picked up a 12-year-old boy in a downtown amusement centre.

The boy had 70 cents on him when he was driven to his Esquimalt home by police. It was later found out that he had taken $20 from his mother's purse, McKenzie said.

He added that the owner of the establishment had promised the mother to reimburse her for the $20 loss.

The business in question, he said, was the Marble Machine at 1320 Broad.

Harvey Carter, the owner, said last week if council approved the bylaw he would be out of business.

Worley

That wonderful world soon home for Worley

Ron Worley didn't get a formal Socred farewell Tuesday.

The new generation of a B.C. political party that was his lifeblood for the 20 years he worked alongside "the old man" as he calls W. A. C. Bennett, didn't give him a platform as he attended what may be his last Social Credit meeting.

Worley, 55, tanned and smiling as he anticipated a move to San Diego, Calif., had hoped to say just a few words to Saanich and the Islands party members meeting at Royal Oak school.

The main speaker, riding MLA Hugh Curtis, knew he was in the audience but did not acknowledge it, and Worley said later, he'd intended to make his presence known with a question or two but "you don't embarrass a minister."

It was almost understandable he didn't get a chance to rival Curtis.

Worley has little good to say about the new Socred government, and in an interview after the meeting partly blamed its "heavy handed" economic tactics for B.C.'s cost of living.

That's part of the reason he's moving to the warmer climes he has been visiting for years as a B.C. tourist promoter — and where he will assume a position as director of a company he would not name.

Elaborating in a paper written to clarify a recent "rumor" in the Legislature that he had been fired, Worley listed moves by the new government that had shown "arrogance and brutal means . . . lack of competence and humanity.

So Worley, on his 25th anniversary — to the day — that he joined the party, walked away from a meeting full of faces he hadn't recognized.

Author of The Wonderful World of W. A. C. Bennett, he'll be off before September for a new home, career and another wonderful world.

Robbery a fadeout

If there is anywhere in the world of crime a rulebook on holdups, a man who staged one Monday in Saanich has not read it.

Such a rulebook, if it exists, would contain (a) never let a customer interrupt you and (b) never try to escape by a locked door.

Saanich police said both those strange things happened after a man entered Shoppers' Drug Mart, 3575 Douglas, about 6 p.m. Monday and walked up to cashier-clerk Ada Del Rosario, 20, with one hand under his jacket as if there was a gun there.

Police said the man said "I want it all in bills" but, before the clerk could say or do anything, the only other customer in the store — another man — walked up with a handful of batteries for purchase.

The holdupman stepped back to let the customer go ahead. In the process of making his purchase, the customer asked the clerk if the batteries were any good and the holdupman took it upon himself to reply, "Oh yeah, they're okay."

The clerk said nothing to the customer about the holdupman and the customer made his purchase and left. The holdupman walked forward again and the clerk asked, 'Are you sure?" The reply was, "Oh yeah, I'm sure."

About $130 was handed over and the holdupman turned to a nearby door for a quick exit. It was locked. As he tried it several times, the clerk sounded an alarm and called to a nearby pharmacist for assistance.

Police said the ma nthen returned toward the clerk and threw the money back on the counter. Officers arrested a man in the store and found no gun.

In Victoria provincial court Tuesday, a Saanich charge of robbery with threat of violence was read against Michael James Loeppky, 20, of 834 Royal Oak. At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel William McElmoyle, he was remanded one week by Judge Blake Allan for further hearing.

Cotillion Ball at Empress

Today's schedule of Victorian Days events is expected to be highlighted by the Cotillion Ball at the Empress starting at 8:30 p.m.

A 15-piece orchestra and elaborate buffet dinner will await guests who are to wear Victorian costumes.

Today's schedule:

10 a.m. — Painting and crafts display and artists at work, 700 block Yates Street.

10 — Display of historical gowns by Costume Society of B.C., Emily Carr Art Gallery.

11—Start of four hours of community entertainment by schools, clubs, bands and senior citizens' groups, Centennial Square.

Noon—Secretaries luncheon, Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, the Empress.

8:30—Cotillion Ball, the Empress.

Saanich to air Quadra plans

Saanich council will discuss a development proposal for 28 acres on upper Quadra Street Thursday.

The proposal, from D.B.C. Estates, was tabled Tuesday at a meeting of the lands, planning and housing committee. The committee, which includes all Saanich aldermen, will include the proposal in a lengthy session Thursday called to look at the Quadra area in general.

The property is on the east side of Quadra, straddling the Victoria and Lake Hill districts boundary.

In a letter to the committee, D.B.C. Estates has suggested mixed housing for the site, including low-profile rental apartments near the Quadra Street frontage, zero-lot-line homes in the centre, some townhouses, and conventional single-family homes on high ground at the eastern boundary.

Demolition permit takes cake

Victoria city council aspired to the difficult, if not impossible Tuesday — eat its cake and keep it.

At their weekly informal caucus meeting, the aldermen hesitantly decided not to hold up any longer a demolition permit for a Samuel Maclure-designed house at 913 Burdett.

At the same time, they instructed Ald. Ronald McKenzie to talk the owners out of demolishing the house.

The decision to approve the issuing of a permit came after a lengthy debate during which Mayor Michael Young insisted that council didn't have the right to withhold demolition permits.

A lawyer himself, the mayor instructed council in the finer points of the law.

Council could regulate, but withholding a demolition permit might be interpreted as discrimination, he said.

His point was directed particularly at Ald. Murray Glazier who had said the city shouldn't issue any demolition permits unless the applicants had a plan for a better or higher use of the property.

In many cases, he said, a developer will demolish a good home, leave the site vacant for a while and then apply for rezoning.

"The record shows that they are successful in getting properties rezoned," Glazier added. But Young maintained that the city didn't have the right to ask for future plans at the time of demolition permit application.

Brother new champ

DENMAN ISLAND — Three-time world champion oyster shucker Kenneth Barkley of Union Bay was dethroned Sunday by his younger brother, Leonard.

Leonard, 19, shucked 62 oysters in the five-minute time limit, highlight of the two-day Denman Island oyster festival, to capture the trophy.

He had 50 points (12 cuts) while his older brother shucked 48 oysters (no cuts) to finish in runner-up spot. Another member of the Barkley clan, Mrs. Barbara Barkley, shucked 47 oysters while daughter Patricia finished in fourth spot with 44 points.

Once served as HEU lawyer

Judge to mediate hospitals

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

A judge who once served as lawyer for the Hospital Employees' Union has been given the job of trying to lead the union and Hospital Labor Relations Association to peaceful settlement of a dispute that touched off an escalating hospital strike.

With the combatants into the fifth day of an enforced 21-day cooling off period Tuesday, the provincial cabinet appointed County Court Judge D. E. McTaggart as special mediator in the dispute.

The cooling off period was announced last Thursday by Labor Minister Allan Williams 16 days after the beginning of strike action that spread to seven hospitals, including Royal Jubilee and Victoria General.

McTaggart, who is to report back to Williams within 10 days, will review the recommendations of industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blaire and compare them with maximum increases allowed in similar circumstances by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

Until his appointment to the bench in recent years, McTaggart provided legal services to HEU.

The Blair Report recommended an 8 per cent wage increase over one year in keeping with the minimum AIB guideline.

However, cost-of-living features and other benefits swelled to increase to 13.6 per cent by union figures and 15.15 per cent, according to HLRA.

The union voted acceptance of the package, but HLRA rejected it as inflationary, touching off the strike.

Although the judge's recommendations are to be nonbinding, Williams has already indicated special legislation would be used to make them binding if there was no settlement by the June 10 end of the cooling-off period.

Williams also said earlier that the government would not tolerate any resumption of the strike that was halted with his order last Thursday.

At the same time, the 16,000-member union has said it will continue to take strike votes at various hospitals among the 99 it faces in master agreement negotiations.

Originally, HEU secretary-business manager Jack Gerow had opposed introduction of a third-party on the basis that Blair had already served that function.

After Tuesday's announcement, however, he agreed the third-party concept would be "different" because McTaggart would have at his disposal the recommendations of "another third party"—Blair.

"We would then be attending any hearings called by him with the purpose of discussing the Blair recommendations," Gerow said.

It was expected McTaggart would try to arrange meetings between HEU and HLRA as early as today.

The judge has had considerable experience in industrial relations. Among his accomplishments was a binding arbitration award which settled the Vancouver Island propane dispute earlier this year.

Meanwhile, hospitals caught up in the strike had returned to near-normal conditions by Tuesday. In most instances, elective surgery—suspended during the strike—was underway again.

There were some trouble spots during the weekend, including the union's claim that Royal Jubilee disposed of food without providing any for its employees or visitors.

Ken Black, chairman of the HEU unit at Royal Jubilee, said food was served only to student nurses Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Black said about 235 servings on pancakes and fresh pancake batter were "dumped down the garburator" along with 75 to 100 turkey and vegetable pies and other food.

And veal that was left over was put back in the refrigerator, but not served," he said.

He said he had "at least 10 phone calls" from members of the public "who thought we were at fault for this."

During the weekend the public and employees had nothing more than tea, coffee, hot chocolate, cheese, crackers and ice cream to choose from, he said.

He said he phoned Royal Jubilee executive director Dr. A. C. Pickles and was told by Pickles that "he had no control over what goes down the garburator."

Pickles could not be reached for comment Tuesday night. He said earlier that employees had been asked to take their lunches until a proper food supply was on hand. Black said most employees didn't get the message.

According to the union, its members working in the cafeteria had been told by someone in management to dump the food.

MP quotes Caesar on murder

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP drew on a quote from Shakespeare Tuesday to express his opposition to the death penalty as the Commons debated for the ninth day a bill to abolish it.

Marke Raines (Burnaby-Seymour) quoted the words of Caesar in the play Caesar and Cleopatra: "To the end of history, murder shall breed murder, always in the name of right and honor and peace, until the gods are tired of blood and create a race that can understand."

Raines called the death penalty a barbaric practice that has "no place in a civilized society."

Don Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) said he would oppose the bill, calling it a waste of time designed to divert public attention from the failure of the government to deal with the economic problems.

He's walking history

The oldest member of Victoria's Jewish community has more memorabilia from his days in the Great War than from his Jewish past.

Although Ben Grossman feels like a member of the traditionally close-knit ethnic group, he has yet to see the Jewish historical exhibition on display until the end of the month at the Provincial Archives.

He might be excused for not having gone to see it.

Grossman turned 90 last Christmas Day, and though the man who sold cars in the city for 49 years still drives his own, he doesn't go far, he said last week.

The impressive exhibition brought to the city by the Jewish Historical Societies of B.C. and Western Canada mentions Grossman as one of the provincial community's oldest and most colorful personalities.

He has a wealth of stories that begin with early days of Russia, the country of his birth, before his Rumanian-born father was forced to move his family for the Czarist-proclaimed crime of alternate citizenship.

Stories, pictures and a plaque which he says is the only one in Canada all bring back his years in the war during which he spent almost two years on motor patrol in the Libyan desert.

Signed by King George V, the plaque is notice of honorable discharge after disablement in Europe.

An old photograph shows Grossman chauffeuring Edward Duke of Windsor on a visit to Canada.

That picture also goes along with a story lodged in Grossman's memory.

He said the then royal prince, later Edward VIII, kept confiding in him that "he didn't want to be king. He told me that a dozen times. He said he'd rather be footloose."

Now Grossman, the self-made salesman, who left family in Vancouver to move to Victoria in 1907, spends much of his time at synagogue functions.

He predicted all the suffering that occurred through war in the Middle East from her Bible interpretations, he said, adding "the religion has nothing to do with politics."

It has much to do with com-

It's almost 60 years since he joined the Victoria group, and he said the biggest change is increased membership.

Some of those members—notable Jews in the city—are among those cited at the exhibition that can be seen from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. today to Friday.

Long-time oil manager dies at Rest Haven

A memorial service for H. Dudley Foster, long-time manager of Imperial Oil's coastal area, will be held Friday at Holy Trinity Anglican Church beginning at 2 p.m.

The former Sidney resident died Monday in Rest Haven Hospital.

He was a member of the Victoria Rotary Club for 21 years and a member of the Nelson Rotary Club before that.

He was born in Vancouver. Foster's last address was 316 Coal Point Lane.

He is survived by his wife Marjorie and sister Elizabeth McPherson of Victoria.

Donations may be made to the Victoria Cancer Clinic, 1900 Fort.

King sees trouble

Health Minister Robert McClelland will be to blame if there is another confrontation between union and management in the hospital dispute at the end of the three-week cooling off period, William King (NDP—Revelstoke) told the Legislature Tuesday.

King repeatedly asked McClelland to give assurances that money would be made available to pay the costs of any collective agreement worked out between the Hospital Employees Union and Hospital Labor Relations Association, and approved by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

McClelland did not answer.

The minister, King noted, has told the hospitals that he will allow a maximum 8.5-percent increase in health costs.

The minister should consider separating the cost of health increases from the cost of any collective agreement which is negotiated, King said.

Noting that the government has said all public service agreements will go to the Anti-Inflation Board for scrutiny, King said: "Surely the government is duty-bound to apply that approach as a criteria and benchmark for collective agreements in the public sector."

The hospitals need to know that they can negotiate whatever level of income and fringes they think is realistic, subject to the Anti-Inflation Board, he said.

Charlottes part of Trudeau visit

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will visit the remote Queen Charlotte Islands off the coast of British Columbia this week as part of a fiveday visit to the province.

The visit will include a speech at the opening ceremonies of the United Nations Habitat conference on human settlements which begins in Vancouver May 31 and runs until June 11.

He will be the first prime minister to visit the Queen Charlottes, 200 miles northwest of Vancouver, part of the Skeena riding of Liberal Iona Campagnolo.

Trudeau is to arrive Thursday and stay with Mrs. Trudeau and their children in a private cabin at Tlell on Hecate Strait and will visit Masset on the northern part of the islands, as well the nearby reserve of the Haida Indians.

Saturday, he will open the Queen Charlotte Museum, in the city of Queen Charlotte, a museum devoted to the preservation of Haida cultural artifavts.

Later the prime minister and Mrs. Trudeau will board HMCS Restigouche, a Canadian destroyer making a week-long surveillance patrol in the area, and will travel overnight on the ship to Powell River, 80 miles northwest of Vancouver.

Later Sunday, he will travel by helicopter to Port Alberni where he will visit a youth festival. He will return to Vancouver Sunday night.

Monday, following a speech to the Habitat conference, he will be host at a reception for more than 130 delegations expected to attend the conference.

Money necessary after all

Castro dream is shattered

HAVANA (Reuter) — Money, a dirty word for many years here, is playing its part again in Cuba's economy as the Castro government goes for more-orthodox socialist methods to boost productivity.

A "work more, earn more" plan now supplements the much-talked-about moral incentives for productivity.

Forgotten words like budget, credit and taxes will shortly be in use again. The ministry of finance, abolished 10 years ago, will reappear. State-run companies, so far only concerned with production targets, will be granted increased autonomy and have to watch for profitability.

Fidel Castro, the man who wanted to build the world's first genuine Communist society where men would be rewarded "according to their needs" and money would play no role, has had to come to terms with reality. Facts and figures have shown that on the road from capitalism to communism he first had to build a socialist society where men are rewarded "according to their work."

"Without some dreams of utopia, there would be no revolutionaries," he told the elite of Cuban Communists last December. "But revolutionaries have to be realistic."

The new system, passed by the first congress of the Cuban Communist party, is believed to have been worked out in collaboration with Comecon, the socialist economic grouping that Cuba joined four years ago.

Cuba dreamed for years of building a society where men would work for the good of all. This was the basis for the policy of moral incentives to workers urged by the late Ernesto (Che) Guevara.

Indeed, Cubans lost the craving for money, paradoxically because they had too much of it.

Health and education services were free. Transport, rentals and basic goods were cheap. The United States-imposed trade embargo had forced the introduction of rationing and the Cubans, surrounded by near-empty shops, could hardly spend more than half their salaries. With currency piling up in the drawer, many decided they could do as well without working.

The government moved in the early 1970s to mop up excess money and remedy a situation that had serious ill-effects on the economy.

High-priced restaurants were opened, some consumer goods were put on sale and the best workers were awarded the right to buy luxury goods at sky-high prices.

With the bulk of excess liquidity cleaned up, money regained attraction and the Confederation of Cuban Workers agreed three years ago to introduce material incentives for all.

The government now has undertaken the huge task of rating how much each worker or workshop should reasonably produce. Those who exceed the norm are paid extra; those below standards have their salary cut.

The aim is to set norms for the largest possible number of workers. Waiters, for example, get a bonus when the restaurant sells more meals than planned. Professionals like doctors, whose work cannot be measured, are not affected.

The system has so far been applied to one-third of the country's two million workers.

How did Ford Pinto get to be the best-selling wagon in North America?

Pinto Wagon with Squire Option. Certain items shown are optional at extra cost.

Easy to load

The easy-to-open liftgate at the rear is counter balanced. So, with the slightest effort, it floats up and open... to over 57 cu. ft. of cargo space. The low, flat floor means easy loading, no high lifting.

57.2 cu. ft. load space

Easy to handle

Pinto's precise rack-and-pinion steering makes it easy to steer. Its turning circle is smaller than VW Rabbit, so Pinto's easy to park in the tightest spots.

31 ft.

Easy on gas

Pinto's thrifty yet peppy 2.3 litre 4-cylinder overhead cam engine is bigger than any of the leading imports. Yet, it's rated at 40.8 mpg highway; 28.8 mpg city. These are U.S. EPA estimates with manual transmission, converted to Imperial gallons. Your actual mileage will vary depending on your car's condition, optional equipment and how and where you drive.

40.8 mpg highway

28.8 mpg city

Easy to buy

Pinto's price includes dual hydraulic brake system with front disc brakes, floor-mounted 4-speed manual transmission, solid-state ignition, a gutsy 2.3 litre OHC engine, Ford Safety Design Features, and more. Add it up. You'll see why Pinto is North America's best-selling wagon.

$3,862.* or less

*Manufacturers' Suggested Maximum Retail Price, for the Pinto Wagon, excluding provincial and local taxes, optional equipment, distribution and delivery charges and gasoline. Local prices may be less.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was sharply lower at the close of moderate trading Tuesday.

Analysts attributed the decline to profit-taking after the holiday weekend and apprehension about the federal budget.

A total of 269 contracts were traded on the option market compared with 176 Friday.

Of the 32 blocks traded, MPG Investment Corp. recorded, the largest sale with 50,000 shares at $3.60, and third largest with an additional 33,900 shares sold at the same price. A block of 44,400 shares of Bank of Montreal was second at $15½ a share.

A trading halt called on Tuesday's opening continues on shares of Abbey Glen Corp. Ltd., which last traded Friday at $6⅝ a share. Both Genstar Ltd. and Cadillac Fairview Corp Ltd. were reported considering bids for control of Abbey Glen, now held by Capital and Counties Property Co. of London.

Irish Copper Mines Ltd. has been suspended until the Toronto Stock Exchange considers its financial position acceptable for listing.

Roberts Bank coal terminal handled 8.2 million tons in 1975

Kaiser: It's expansion time

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kaiser Resources Ltd. Tuesday announced it has expanded its markets and plans to expand its metallurgical coal production facilities near Sparwood in eastern B.C.

Edgar Kaiser Jr., president and chief executive officer, said at the company's annual meeting the expanded markets and production will result in an expansion of the coal shipment facility at Roberts Bank, subject to environmental studies.

At the same time, Kaiser cautioned shareholders to expect reduced company profits this year.

As a result of softmarket conditions for coal, the Japanese buyers may reduce the volume of their purchases over the remainder of the year, which would hurt profits, he said.

The company has increased the volume of its coal shipments to customers other than Japanese.

"Although Japan will continue to be our principal market, we have been successful in establishing new international markets for our coking coal," he said.

A contract with a Korean steel company has been settled at 4,150,000 tons of metallurgical coal to be shipped through 1985, with 300,000 tons to be purchased by the end of this year.

A Mexican contract has been signed for 690,000 tons, 125,000ns of it to be shipped beforerch 31, 1977.

"Prospective new markets or our coal include Brazil, Chile and the Republ;ic of China," Kaiser said.

Eastern Canadian steel mills still are prospective customers but transport is the major holdup, he said.

Kaiser said the company now considers the Hosmer-Wheeler project, a coal zone near the existing mine in Sparwood, to be economically

The property would produce approximately two million tons of coal a year, using hydraulic methods, and would be operated in partnership with Mitsui Mining Company, Limited and Mitsubishi Corporation of Japan.

Kaiser said he hopes to find an early solution to the strike in progress at the Sparwood operations.

He said the mine work force is the company's main asset, and he regrets any time lost due to the strike.

First load

What is believed to be first crude oil ever shipped to North America from Soviet Union is off-loaded at Portland, Maine. The 48,000-ton Soviet tanker Khulio Antonio Melya, right, delivered 348,000 barrels of Romashkinskaya blend crude from Black Sea port of Novorossiysk to Portland terminus. From there it goes to Gulf Oil Canada's Montreal East refinery by pipeline for evaluation. Gulf is considering Russian crude as possible supplementary source.

Labor cornerstone under legal siege

WASHINGTON (AP) — The union shop, a cornerstone of labor's strength for more than 100 years, is under a legal siege that threatens its survival in the United States.

The outcome of the battle is far from certain. But union lawyers say that a recent California federal court decision, if upheld by higher courts, might seriously weaken or destroy union-shop agreements under which all workers must join the union.

If the ruling is upheld in full, "I don't see how the unions will be able to operate," says Joseph Rauh, the chief union lawyer.

The decision was a major victory for the National Right to Work Committee, one of labor's chief antagonists.

In a counter-attack, 10 of the biggest unions in the U.S. have sued the committee, saying that it is an illegal, anti-union front for employers out to weaken union bargaining power.

In the California case, U.S. District Judge Leland Neilson of San Diego ruled earlier this year at the request of a group of Western Air Lines that their union, the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, misspent dues for political and other purposes.

The lawsuit is being financed by the right-to-work committee. During the years, similar lawsuits filed by the committee group have established the principle that a union may not use dues from "union-shop" or "agency-shop" labor contracts for political or ideological purposes. "Agency shops" require dues payment but not union membership.

But the courts have approved rebate systems under which dues payers get back that portion of their dues used for political purposes.

But Judge Nielson went much further when he also ruled the union's rebate plan invalid, and said that money collected from workers who object to paying dues can be used only for the direct cost of collective bargaining. Dues money for organizing, union conventions, newsletters and per-capita dues to the AFL-CIO were ruled out.

In the legal complaint challenging the right-to-work advocates, the unions say that the group has gone beyond its avowed purpose of fighting compulsory unionism.

Rauh, who also represents the union-plaintiffs in that case, contends the committee is an anti-union organization whose actual purpose is to "weaken the strength of labor unions."

U.S.-China trade hike seen

NEW YORK (AP) — A China authority with top-level trade contacts predicts a huge increase within two years in commerce between that country and the United States, now about $500 million a year.

Impetus for the trade will be the rapid industrialization of the People's Republic, caused partly be enormous oil reserves recently discovered there, said Harned Pettus Hoose, China agent for several U.S. concerns.

He forecast that U.S.-China trade, which amounted to $450 billion in 1975, will swell to $5 billion or more by 1980, and that by about 1985, U.S. sales alone to that country will reach more than $5 billion.

"One current deal, by itself, if consummated, would involve payments by China to an American consortium in the billions of dollars, enough to generate many thousands of man-years of work for Americans," said Hoose.

Read our Report!

This latest analysis from Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities examines the firm base for future growth being established during the current market lull. Send for our new Investment Policy Report, today!

WE BELIEVE the current lull in the market, predicted in our last Report, will be temporary. It gives investors the opportunity to improve their portfolios with selective purchases of good quality issues.

Although economic recovery in North America has been better than anticipated, we believe it will be even stronger during the second half of the year.

That's why you should send for our latest Investment Policy Report. You'll learn about timely opportunities for capital appreciation. You'll also get a helpful insight into economic conditions and trends in Canada and the U.S.

This new in-depth Report is based on information gathered both here in Canada and from our parent company's research department in New York.

Here are some of the questions that the Report answers in more detail.

1. Will the U.S. recovery continue?

There is little need for concern about the continuing upward trend. Policy makers recognise the importance of a steady recovery, hence their monetary and fiscal policies are not expected to choke off recovery or rekindle inflation.

2. What forces are at work on the Canadian economy?

On the negative side there are still relatively high interest rates, the current account deficit and slow export markets. However, these are offset by stronger consumer spending than anticipated, worldwide economic developments and the positive effect of the U.S. recovery.

3. What opportunities are there for the aggressive investor?

Now is an ideal time to give greater consideration to selected issues in Natural Resources and Consumer Goods. Our Report contains a detailed discussion of current opportunities and lists 18 selected issues.

4. Do you have any concern about the forthcoming Federal budget?

We don't believe the Government will make any significant changes and the effect on the stock market will be largely neutral. But don't rule out the penchant that finance ministers have for coming up with unexpected, and unpleasant, surprises!

5. Do you recommend changes in portfolio structure?

No. Cash reserves of 10% should be maintained and another 10% should be used to capitalize on the still liberal yields of bonds and preferred issues.

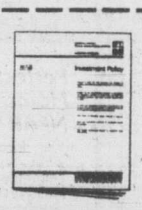

Bear in mind that every professionally guided portfolio has its own characteristics and objectives. We cannot give a definite answer without a thorough scrutiny of your portfolio.

To capitalize on the current market and expected trends, write for our 8-page Report right now. You'll get valuable investment information and our latest evaluation of 27 different issues.

Three of fastest cars won't start in Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Three of the fastest cars entered in this year's Indianapolis 500 auto race won't even be in the race. They'll be locked up in Gasoline Alley when the green flag drops Sunday.

The cars, all listed as backup machines, are assigned to A. J. Foyt, Johnny Rutherford and Al Unser.

"I can't even remember when three cars so good didn't get in the race," said Frankie DelRoy, Technical director of the United States Auto Club. "Any one of the three could sit in the front row.

"Any one of them could win the race, too. I guess it's just a matter of finances and maybe time. It takes a lot of time to get these things properly prepared for the race."

Foyt, who qualified his No. 14 car at 185.261 miles an hour, decided to keep his No. 1 Coyote out of the race, because, as a friend said, "He is convinced the other car has a better chance of winning."

Foyt's backup has an impressive list of racing accomplishments. At Indianapolis, the car won the pole position in 1974 and led the race through the early stages. It also won 500-mile races at Ontario, Calif., and Mount Pocono, Pa., and once held the world's closed course speed record at more than 217 m.p.h.

This month, Foyt turned the fastest lap of the month in practice here at better than 191 m.p.h. with his backup car.

Foyt gave a ride in the car to Janet Guthrie, apparently just so she could show she had the ability to go fast enough to make the race, given proper machinery. She succeeded, and Foyt put the car back in the garage, where he always intended for it to stay.

Another of the few machines which reached more than 190 m.p.h. this month was Rutherford's backup McLaren, the car with which Rutherford won the 1974 Indy 500. It has turned speeds at least as fast as the McLaren he put on the pole for this year's race at 188.957 m.p.h.

Lloyd Ruby, who drove the second Team McLaren entry here last year, was in line for the car until McLaren people changed their minds.

"We decided running two cars might take away from our over-all plan of winning the race," said McLaren chief Tyler Alexander. "We want to be able to devote our full attention to Johnny's car."

Unser qualified his front line car at 186.258 m.p.h., then switched to his backup — which was apparently faster — for a second shot at the pole. But the machine developed clutch problems and a water leak.

Later, a sponsor came forward and wanted Ruby to run the car as part of a two-car team with Al. By then, however, Ruby was committed to another deal. The sponsor was unwilling to go with another driver, so the car was parked.

Gilbert captures title as chip shot finds cup

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Veteran Gibby Gilbert, who twice quit the tour in disgust before learning the fine points of his profession, chipped in on the 17th hole for the par he needed to hold off hopeful Dr. Gil Morgan with a final 72 and score a four-stroke victory Sunday in the $200,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis golf tournament.

Gilbert, the leader throughout the humid, hazy final day, appeared to be in deep trouble when he just got out of a sand trap on the 17th and was lying three in the fringe. But the stocky veteran retained his two-shot lead with a perfect chip.

The 35-year-old Gilbert acquired the second victory of his 10-year-career—his first in six seasons—with a 72-hole total of 273., 15 under par on the hilly, 7193-yard Colonial Country Club course.

"When I won before the Houston-Champions in 1970, I didn't know how to play the game," said the husky Gilbert. "Now I halfway know how."

But it didn't come easily. He quit the tour at the end of the 1969 season, then came back to win the next year. He quit again in 1973, was off for a couple of months working as a golf equipment salesman, then returned with a course-record 62 at the famed No. 2 course at Pinehurst, N.C., a round that prompted him to try it again.

He missed part of the next year, however, with a back injury. His steady improvement was capped by this event, in which he forged a three-stroke lead on a 54-hole total of 201, a course record.

Morgan, alone in second most of the day, finished with a one-over-par 73 and a 277 total. He was tied with New Zealand's John Lister, who closed with a 68, and Forrest Fezler, who had a putt on the 18th green to break the second-place tie. But Fezler missed and had to settle for a 71 and a three-way tie.

George Calde followed with a 69-278. Fred Marti, the leader through the first two rounds, and Tom Kite were next at 279. Kite shot a last-round 69 and Marti, like Gilbert, matched par 72.

Gene Littler, the 1975 Memphis champion, headed a group at 280.

Lee Trevino, twice a champion here and the winner last week in Fort Worth, birdied four of his first seven holes but couldn't improve from there. He finished with a 68 and 281. He was tied at that figure with South African Gary Player, who shook off the effects or an early bogey-bogey-triple bogey string for a 71.

Fair Play awards presented to three

PARIS (AP) — The international Fair Play award was presented Tuesday to Emil Zatopek, a winner of four Olympic gold medals in distance races, Bob Mathias, twice an Olympic decathlon winner, and Victor Niederhoffer, United States squash champion.

The committee making the awards is headed by Jean Borotra, a former French tennis champion. The ceremony was held at the headquarters of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Mathias, a former congressman from Tulare, Calif., and Zatopek, of Czechoslovakia, were honored for the sportsmanship which marked their over-all careers. Mathias won the Olympic decathlon titles in 1948 and 1952. Zatopek was the legendary winner of 5000 meters, 10,000 meters and marathon at Helsinki in 1952.

Niederhoffer was cited for an incident in the 1975 North American open squash championships in Mexico City. His opponent was Sharif Khan of Toronto. Niederhoffer was leading two sets to one when Khan, who had been the victor in all their previous encounters, experienced trouble with a contact lens.

Although the time needed for Khan to return to the match was far beyond the one hour allowed by the rules, Niederhoffer insisted that his opponent take all the time necessary to resume play. Niederhoffer eventually won the match.

CAHA clears Oil King move

PENTICTON (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association cleared the way Tuesday for the transfer of a Western Canada Hockey League junior franchise to Portland, Ore. from Edmonton.

The CAHA adopted legislation at its annual meeting which makes it possible for an American-based, but Canadian majority-owned team, to compete for the Memorial Cup in the national major junior championship.

It had been speculated for some time that Edmonton Oil Kings of the WCHL would transfer to Portland for the 1976-77 season because of dwindling attendance in the face of competition from a World Hockey Association team in the Alberta capital.

President Ed Chynoweth of the WCHL said Monday the league will consider transfer applications at a meeting June 9 in Brandon. The legislation was opposed by both British Columbia and Alberta delegates, but is passed by a two-to-one margin.

Sciarra Vancouver-bound

VANCOUVER — B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League are expected to announce the signing of quarterback John Sciarra today. The Lions have called a noon press conference, and it has been reported that Sciarra, who led University of California at Los Angeles to a Rose Bowl victory over Ohio State, is on his way to Vancouver. Sciarra was taken by Chicago Bears in the National Football League draft and attended the Bears' rookie camp this spring but didn't sign an NFL contract.

Assault on fan brings fine

LONDON (CP) — Defenceman Kevin McCloskey of St. Catharines Black Hawks was fined $250 in provincial court Tuesday after being found guilty of assaulting a London fan during an Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series game last fall.

McCloskey was charged by provincial police after Gary Johnson, 16, of London received cuts and a black eye in a fight between players and spectators during a Black Hawks-Knights game Nov. 14 at London Arena.

Judge Glenn Marshman said he imposed the fine to deter other players from becoming involved in incidents of rowdyism. Coach Paul Emms of the Black Hawks and another St. Catharines player, Robert Manno, pleaded guilty May 11 with two other spectators to charges of causing a disturbance by fighting. Judge Marshman discharged them, saying at the time he thought the hockey business had to discipline itself.

Robinson reaps rewards

DEFENCEMAN Larry Robinson has been presented with a plaque, a ring and a new car by Sport Magazine as the most valuable player in the Stanley Cup final. The 24-year-old Montreal Canadien star joins a select group of the award winners which included Ken Dryden of the Canadiens (1971), Bobby Orr of Boston (1972), Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal (1973) and Bernie Parent of Philadelphia (1974-75) . . . Dolores Stargell, wife of first baseman Willie Stargell of Pitgsburgh Pirates, remains in serious condition Tuesday following surgery for removal of a blood clot on her brain . . . Kevin Shawcross of Australia has won the world amateur squash championship bp defeating Doug Scott of South Africa in the final in London . . . Veteran tennis star Ken Rosewall has announced that he will pass up this year's Wimbledon championship. The 41-year-old three-time Wimbledon runner-up said he would not have time to prepare properly for the event . . . Two players, Greg Hoist of Providence Reds and Pierre Mondou of Nova Scotia Voyageurs will share the Red Garrett Trophy as rookie-of-the-year in the American Hockey League. They each received 49 points in balloting, the first time there has been a tie in the 29-year history of the trophy.

Capital Builders tourney titlists

Capital Builders won the rain-delayed Heywood Avenue Men's League softball tournament Tuesday.

Laurie Acorn hit a three-run triple in the fifth inning to give Capital a 7-4 win over Castle Properties in the tournament final at Heywood Avenue Park. The final had been postponed from Monday.

Castle jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning when John Coccioloni led off with a home run and Ken Mireau and Ron Maber scored runs. But both teams scored once in the fourth inning and Capital scored six times in the fifth inning.

In the Senior Women's League, Stockers North Americans extended their unbeaten streak to 14 games with an 8-3 decision over CJVI Vicettes while Hygrade Radio took sole possession of second place by beating MacDonald Furniture Seniors, 3-0.

Debbie Derkson, who pitched for Vicettes last year, scattered six hits for the Stockers victory and Sandy Ferguson hit a pair of singles, drove in one run and scored once.

Cathy Wilkinson pitched a one-hitter for Hygrade and Lori Skinner had three hits, drew a base-on-balls, scored once and drove in one run.

In the Sidney Men's Association Bob Vanderkratch pitched a two-hitter and Harvey's Sporting Goods edged Sidney Hotel, 2-1, at Sanscha Park.

Bakers snap tie with fine display

Victoria McDonalds, coming through with one of their best performances of the season, broke a tie for the Western Canada Junior "A" Lacrosse League lead on Tuesday night.

Bouncing back from a 10-13 setback by Burnaby Cablevision in a Mainland game on Sunday, the Bakers gave 850 Esquimalt arena fans a fine show in wresting the lead from New Westminster Salmonbellies with a 15-7 triumph.

Both goalkeepers stood out in what was rated the best spectator action of the season. Victoria's Al Radley stopped 46 shots while Jim Poelzer not only got in front of 53 shots but had four earned assists

However, Salmonbellies had no one in this game to match the Victoria club's one-two punch of Kevin Alexander and Bob Cool.

Alexander bumped his league-leading total to 34 points with five goals and three assists, and Cool matched the total with three goals and five assists.

John Entzminger and Kevin Kennedy had two goals each for the winners and Steve Buckley, Dave Louden and Ken King all had a single scoring shot. Mario Govorchin, who did it twice, was the only player to beat Radley more than once.

McDonalds yielded the first goal, cashed in twice on power-plays to end the first period at 6-3, and then took control as Alexander scored twice and Entzminger once to stretch the lead to six goals.

On Sunday, a bad first period proved a bit too much for the Islanders. They were 1-7 after 20 minutes, closed to 4-9 in the second period and chopped another two goals off the lead in the final 20 minutes.

Alexander had three goals and four assists to lead both clubs. Cool scored twice and Buckley, Scott Browning, King, Mike Hardy and Kennedy once each. Dan Perreault had four goals to lead the Burnaby club within a point of the lead.

McDonalds play their third game in four days tonight, travelling to Coquitlam for a tussle with the Jayhawks.

Ron Grahame blocks this Ulf Nilsson blast but Jet sniper hit net on three other tries

European Jets give Aeros fits

WINNIPEG — Bobby Hull won the first two games with late tie-breaking goals but Houston Aeros are having even more trouble with European imports in what appears to be a losing effort to win a third successive World Hockey Association championship.

Swedish-centre Ulf Nilsson, the playoff leader with 23 points, scored a goal in every period Tuesday night to make the difference in the 6-3 conquest which gave Winnipeg Jets a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final.

But there was more from the Jets' European contingent. Sweden's Anders Hedberg and Finland's Veli Ketola each had a goal and an assist, Sweden's Mats Lindstrom had two assists and Lars-Erik Sjoberg of Sweden and Hexi Riihiranta of Finland each had one assist as a sellout crowd of 10,384 looked on.

On Sunday night in Houston, where Hedberg opened the scoring on a pass from Nilsson and Lindstrom shot the 2-2 goal, Thommie Bergman shared the hero role with Hull. The Swedish defenceman helped set up Lindstrom's scoring shot, scored the 4-4 goal and then drew an assist on the play which ended with Hull cashing his own rebound to bring the Jets a 5-4 decision. A crowd of 15,256 watched.

Penalties played a big role in the Tuesday win, the Jets scoring twice on power plays and Nilsson's first two goals coming while he was out as a penalty killer.

Nilsson boosted the Winnipeg lead to 2-0 only 14 seconds after teammate Larry Hillman had been penalized early in the first period. After Mark Howe had sliced the lead in two, Hedberg and Peter Sullivan scored powerplay goals to give the Jets a 4-2 lead for the second period.

The killing goal came in the eighth minute of the second period, Nilsson scoring just as Hedberg was leaving the penalty box. Don Larway got the first of his two goals later in the period, but Nilsson got that one back early in the third period and the Jets had no trouble in staying safely in front.

Fourth game of the series is scheduled here Thursday night.

Veterans help Sox, Phillies

Boston Red Sox, still below .500 and third in their division, and Philadelphia Phillies, threatening a runaway in the National League East, both got another big contribution from a veteran Tuesday as they continued to surge.

Carl Yastrzemski, whose home runs, three of them in one game, brought two victories last week, hit a two-run blast Tuesday to give the Red Sox their 11th win in 14 games — a 2-0 decision over Detroit Tigers which was the 39th shutout of veteran Luis Tiant's major league baseball career.

And Jim Lonborg, former Red Sox r'ighthander, straightened out after a three-run first inning to give himself a 7-0 record for the season by pitching the Phillies to an 8-4 win over New York Mets.

It was the 24th win in 30 games for the Phillies, who now lead Pittsburgh Pirates by eight games on the losing side and at 25-9 have handily the best record in either league.

Yastrzemski connected in the fourth inning after Carlton Fisk had drawn a base on balls. Tiant, touched for eight hits but matching that in strikeouts and issuing no bases on balls, made the lead stand up without serious trouble.

Jay Johnstone had a home run and three other hits, drove in two runs and scored three times in Philadelphia's defeat of New York ace Tom Seaver, now 4-1 for the season.

Montreal Expos again proved tough for the Pirates, ending Bob Moose's unscored-on streak in its 14th game. Moose, a one-time starter now working out of the bullpen, hadn't yielded a run in relief this season but the Expos got to him for four runs in the 11th inning, winning by 6-3.

Another highlight Tuesday was a ninth victory for San Diego lefthander Randy Jones, who pitched the Padres past Los Angeles Dodgers, 5-2. Jones, who led the National League in earned-run average last season while compiling a 20-12 record, is now 9-2 for the season and has lowered his earned-run average to the 2.24 which tops the league.

Four-game sweep

Bates pull away

Victoria Bates are running away in the Pacific Coast Fastball League.

The defending champions swept four games on a weekend road trip to boost their unbeaten string to 14 games and their lead over Vancouver Magicians to 4½ games.

Bob Burrows and Bob Holness hit home runs Sunday as Bates downed winless New Westminster Royal Tower Blues, 5-3 and 3-0, at Moody Park.

On Saturday, Bates swept a doubleheader from the Athletics at Abbotsford with Stan Kern and Dave Ruthowsky tossing five-hitters and Burrows and Harvey Stevenson hitting home runs.

Bates managed 33 hits in the four games and now have outhit the opposition 107-65 and outscored it 84-18.

Former Bates catcher Bill James made his debut for New Westminster, catching both games. A pair of games scheduled for Saturday between Vancouver and New Westminster was rained out.

This weekend Bates host Abbotsford for games at 7 and 9 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park and New Westminster for games 1 and 3 p.m. Sunday.

The Athletics announced Tuesday that in the future they would be called Fraser Valley instead of Abbotsford and then they went out and dropped the Magicians to five games behind Bates by edging the Vancouver team, 1-0, at Abbotsford.

Corny Unrau pitched a two-hitter and Rudy Teichrob drove in the run with a single.

Victoria rowers on Olympic team

Victoria Day weekend was a busy time for selection of athletes for the 1976 Olympics at Montreal.

Canada's rowing, fencing, sharpshooting and weightlifting teams were announced following Olympic trials held in various parts of the country.

Four Victorians were named to the rowing team which was announced following pre-Olympic competition Sunday at Montreal.

Linda Schaumleffel, Ina DeLure and Sandra Kirby were named to the women's team while Mike Cullin was named to the men's team.

Miss Schaumleffel, a physical education instructor at Oak Bay, qualified in the cox four along with Joy Fera of Vancouver, Monica Draeger of London and Gail Cort of St. Catharines. They beat the Olympic standard by five seconds with a time of 3:36.

Mrs. DeLure, a University of Victoria student, earned a berth on the eights crew along with Nancy Higgins and Becky Stevenson of London, Chris Newland and Tammy Biernacki of St. Catharines, Rhonda Ross and Wendy Pullan of Vancouver and Jane Pal of Brockville, Ont.

Miss Kirby, also of UVic, made the women's squad with Elaine Bourbeau of Boucherville, Guylaine Bernier of Chomedy and Barbara Boettcher of Calgary.

Cullin, a former Canadian singles champion now rowing for Brentwood College, finished second in the trials to Brian Thorpe of St. Catharines.

The oarsmen will now take part in meets at Bled, Yugoslavia, and Lucerne, Switzerland.

No Islanders were selected to the shooting, weightlifting or fencing teams.

Kansas City gets short NHL reprieve

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Hockey League served notice Tuesday that the financially-troubled Kansas City Scouts franchise is ready to be terminated, but gave city officials 10 days to come up with an acceptible plan to keep hockey there.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said the Scouts had received a complaint note from the league informing the club that it had failed to pay dues and also had failed to repay a $300,000 loan secured from the league to complete the 1975-76 season.

Campbell said that Kansas City owner Edwin Thompson had informed the league that the present ownership of the club is "unable to continue operations and that it has no desire to try to reorganize its finances."

Campbell added that the league had no desire to take over the Scouts.

The fate of the troubled California Seals franchise also was discussed during the one-day session but the status of the franchise's sale remains uncertain, said Campbell.

The Seals have been financially troubled under several owners since the team was admitted to the league in 1967. Campbell said Seals owner Mel Swig has informed the league that he intends to exercise his option either to sell the club or move it from Oakland.

The NHL official said the 10-day extension was granted to Kansas City officials who appeared before the NHL's board of governors to "express their desire to keep the team in Kansas City.

"Mayor Charles Wheeler (of Kansas City) said he is interested in taking whatever action is necessary to help to retain the club," Campbell said. "He didn't say he and his staff would be successful, but he said he felt the people of Kansas City want hockey."

After the meeting, Wheeler said he was happy with the way the board of governors responded to his request and said he is confident that the city will keep franchise.

The league had been expected to terminate the franchise after Kansas City Kings of the National Basketball Association withdrew an offer to purchase the Scouts.

The Kings, who had shared the city's new Kemper Auditorium with the hockey team, apparently were set to buy the Scouts but a major stumbling block developed in negotiations when City Manager Robert Kipp rejected a request to provide the Kings with an escape clause in case the Scouts became financially burdened.

Five CFL players scratched from all-star game rosters

EDMONTON (CP) — Five players have been scratched from the roster for Saturday's Canadian Football League all-star game because of a conflict of interest.

The five are Zenon Andrusyshyn of Toronto Argonauts, Terry Evenshen of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Tony Gabriel of Ottawa Rough Riders, Peter Dalla Riva of Montreal Alouettes and Jim Young of British Columbia Lions. The five were replaced because they were scheduled to be in the Toronto borough of Etobicoke Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday to take part in an event billed as the Canadian Superstars series and would miss practice time with the all-star squads.

"I asked for them," east coach Marv Levy said of the changes. "I wanted them . . . I'm glad they made the changes under the circumstances."

Levy declined comment on whether the chances would hurt the eastern team. "I have too much admiration for the guys who came here on short notice to say that it has hurt us."

"It was the right decision to make," said West coach Ray Jauch of Edmonton Eskimos.

Mike Eben of Toronto, Joe Petty of Montreal and Lawrie Skolrood of Hamilton will replace Evenshen, Dalla Riva and Gabriel, while L. J. Clayton of Toronto will be a backup receiver. Ken Clark of Hamilton will replace Andrusyshyn.

Other lineup changes also have been announced.

Larry Cameron, a former Lion and soon-to-be an Ottawa Rough Rider, will replace Sam Cvijanovich, a former Argo who signed with a National Football League team during the weekend.

Jim Stillwagon of Toronto will replace Jim Corrigal of Toronto, who is missing due to business problems.

Tom Campana of Saskatchewan Roughriders will replace Young on the West team.

Gabriel, speaking for the superstars contingent in a telephone interview, said he and the other players involved sent messages to the CFL Players Association through their player representatives and assumed no reaction meant their temporary absence was fine.

He said the Superstars television show, which will be shown at half time during CFL games, could not be changed because of CBC camera and crew availability. He said the players feel they're doing as much for the league in the east as the players who will compete in the all-star engagement.

Gabriel said the five are upset and hurt that they've been taken off the team because they feel they only needed a day or two to be able to absorb things, not the entire week. He said the five are also upset that it wasn't the president of the players association who they feel made the decision but game co-chairman Peter Travis and Norm Kimball of the Eskimos, CFL management representative. They were informed of their replacement by Travis.

George Reed of Saskatchewan, players' association president, said the five players did not request permission to attend the superstars event and be late. "It wasn't a request. I was told they were going to the Superstars."

Reed said the decision was made by Travis and Kimball "but I back it 100 per cent and I talked to a lot of the players and they all feel the same way."

"I had an invitation to the superstars myself and I turned it down because I thought the players' association was more important."

Winnipeg gets one Cup game

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg was confirmed Tuesday as the site for at least one game in next fall's Canada Cup international hockey tournament.

Lawyer Alan Eagleson, in charge of arrangements for the six-team, round-robin tournament, said Sweden will play Finland at the Winnipeg arena on Sept. 9.

He told a news conference there is also a possibility of three other games being played here. He said games between Sweden and Russia on Sept. 5, Finland and the United States on Sept. 11 and an exhibition game between Canada and the United States in late August, are being considered.

Eagleson said the Sweden-Russia game was going to be held in Winnipeg but the arena is already booked for a horse show on that date.

"The stumbling block with the exhibition game is that I have to convince my committee it's worth losing $150,000."

Although only one game is definite, he said there "are a couple of alternatives left for discussion both here and back east with my committee."

"But they are subject to the availability of the arena."

The consideration of Winnipeg was forced by the failure of Eagleson to reach agreement with Harold Ballard for use of Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

Celtics extended to win opener

BOSTON (AP) — Streak-shooting JoJo White, Dave Cowens and John Havlicek led Boston Celtics to a 98-87 victory Sunday over the stubborn Phoenix Suns in the opening game of the National Basketball Association championship series.

The series resumes here Thursday night.

White, the Celtics slick backcourt man, shook loose for 20 of his 22 points in the second half, including 12 consecutive Boston points in the fourth quarter.

Cowens, Boston's rugged centre who played the entire game, led Boston in scoring with 25 points, in rebounding with 21 and in assists with 10. Havlicek, Boston's all-time leading scorer, played 41 minutes including the entire second half despite an injured left foot. He scored 16 points and sparked the Celtics offence.

Rookie Alvan Adams led Phoenix with 24 points while Ricky Sobers, another rookie, scored 15.

The Celtics, playing in their 14th championship series since 1957 and bidding for their 13th title, were unable to pull away from the inexperienced Suns, playing in their first NBA final since joining the league in 1968.

Collins outduels speedway rivals

Bob Collins, Jim Caudwell and Jerry Ferrie continued their dual Monday but this time with Collins coming out on top.

The three super-stock drivers battled right to the finish Monday with points leader Collins taking the checkered flag a split second ahead of Caudwell to win the 35-lap main event before a crowd of 1992 at Western Speedway.

Ferrie finished third half a car length behind Caudwell.

The same three drivers battled through Saturday's main event with Caudwell winning, Collins taking second and Ferrie finishing third.

Collins led from the 19th lap in winning Monday's feature.

In the hobby-stock feature, Bill Hitchcox won the 12-lap race to regain the points lead that he lost to Gordon Stone Saturday.

Stone, who won the main event Saturday, finished fourth Monday while Wayne Johnston was second and Gordie Hildebrandt was third.

Meanwhile, Roy Smith and Roy Haslam had highly successful weekends out of town.

Smith made a clean sweep of the Washington Racing Association super-modifieds program at Yakima Saturday, breaking the track record and winning the heat, the trophy dash and the main event.

Haslam won the Rose Cup super-stock championship in a three-race competition in the northern interior. Haslam won the opening race Saturday at Quesnel, finished third Sunday at Prince George and won the main event Monday at Prince George.

Nicklaus scuttles mates with big pro-am error

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus' pro-amateur team finished with a 25-over-par 97 Tuesday, an astounding 40 shots behind the winning fivesome, thanks to a major error by golf's all-time money winner.

Nicklaus served as his group's scorekeeper and penciled in a 34 instead of a par four in the block for the 18th hole score. Under the rules, the 34 stood as the final hole score. So instead of an actual five-under-par 67, Nicklaus's bunch was saddled with a 97.

"I can't believe it — I signed the card too," said former Ohio State quarterbacking great Pandel Savic, a member of Nicklaus's team who filled in for the ailing Bing Crosby.

A fivesome headed by Bob Murphy dipped 15 under par for a winning 57 in the event that served as a prelude to the $200,000 Memorial golf tournament opening Thursday over Nicklaus's Murifeld Village course.

Mid-Island champs

Anne Newman, Rutledge win

NANAIMO — Anne Newman of Campbell River and Jim Rutledge of Victoria won the Mid-Island junior golf titles Monday.

A two-time Victoria junior champion, Rutledge fired a two-under par 70 to easily win the boys' title while Miss Campbell carded an 88 in a surprise one-stroke victory over defending Pacific Northwest Association champion Sidney Thompson of Victoria's Royal Colwood.

Rutledge finished five strokes ahead of Victoria's Dave Rands, who won the Gorge and Victoria tournaments this year, and Dick Zokol of Vancouver.

Aren Frederiksen of Nanaimo topped the up-Island contingent with a 77 while Tim Salt of Royal Colwood won the net title with a 64.

Defending champion Russ Reynolds, who missed the Victoria tournament after suffering a neck injury in a car accident, failed to finish.

Whalers win

Steve Saunders scored four goals Monday as Juan de Fuca Whalers edged Victoria Optimists, 10-9, in a Vancouver Island Intermediate "B" Lacrosse League game at Memorial Arena. Ian Teeple scored two goals and picked up two assists for Victoria.

Vampires, Tigers romp

Scott Tuttle scored three touchdowns Sunday as Saanich Vampires took sole possession of second place in the Junior Bantam Spring Football League with a 27-6 win over Oak Bay Crusaders at Cedar Hill Park.

In the other game, Steve Percival scored seven touchdowns and kicked three converts and Dana St. Pierre scored four touchdowns and kicked nine converts as Juan de Fuca Tigers slaughtered Saanich Wasps, 90-0.

	P	W	L	F	A	Pts
Hornets	5	5	0	199	6	10
Vampires	5	3	2	129	90	6
Crusaders	4	2	2	130	108	4
Tigers	5	2	3	186	108	4
Wasps	5	0	5	23	289	0

NEXT GAMES: Thursday — 6 and 8 p.m. — Saanich Vampires vs Juan de Fuca Tigers, Saanich Hornets vs Oak Bay Crusaders, Royal Athletic Park.

Delta-Richmond tops in first fivepin bid

Delta-Richmond won the Pacific Coast fivepin bowling championship in its first try.

The new entry in the annual tournament was led by Bob Lee and the mixed team as it scored 50 points to win the aggregate title in the weekend tournament at Town and Country Lanes.

Lee won the men's singles title with a pinfall of 2273, only 14 more than Frank Lavigne of Vancouver, while the mixed team finished with a pinfall of 9744, 127 more than North Vancouver.

Central-Island, which had the highest total pinfall (37,672), finished second with 43 points. Vancouver also had 43 points but was had to settle for third place because of a lower pinfall. Burnaby was fourth with 35, Victoria was fifth with 34 while Port Alberni finished ninth with 24.

Vancouver representatives rolled 10,002 to win the men's team title while Abbotsford captured the women's title with 9296 and Mary Bakewell of Port Coquitlam won the women's singles championship with 2086.

Elsie Fielder of Nanaimo was the leading Island bowler with a second-place finish and a score of 2075 in the women's singles. Bill Cool of Victoria topped the men with a third-place finishing score of 2155 and the Victoria team of Cool, Wally Weinberger, Mike Thompson, Bob Waller, Don Brown, Jim Lebold and Brian Peddlesden finished third with 9803.

Aim of $85,000 monthly cheque one thing that keeps Ali fighting

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Muhammad Ali says he feels he has just enough left to get past Ken Norton in September. But promoters' offers and his own desire to see an $85,000 cheque in the mail every month for the rest of his life "may not let me quit 'til I can't fight no more."

Ali sat with a group of reporters in his hotel room just eight hours after his fifth-round technical knockout victory Monday night over Richard Dunn of England and repeated: "It's hard to quit. They make it hard for me to quit. I want to quit."

Asked about a phrase he dropped just after the fight indicating that at 34 he does not feel strong enough to look beyond the Norton fight at New York's Yankee Stadium in September, Ali said: "That's the way I feel, yeah."

Then why would he risk his reputation if he wanted to quit so badly?

"Yeah, I feel that," Ali said. "But we don't know. We might get Norton in two rounds and it might not take nothing out of me."

Ali said he had been offered $10 million to fight the winner of the Joe Frazier-George Foreman fight next month—he picked Foreman as a knockout winner—and said he thought a fight with Duane Bobick might be a good draw.

"That's what I'm telling you," Ali said. "They might try to keep me around with it. You know they really won't let me quit boxing till I can't fight no more. But I truly want to quit.

"All I'm looking at is the money to help my children and my cause. I want to get me about $10 million in government tax-free bonds which will bring me about $85,000 a month tax-free for the rest of my life. So that's what I'm thinking about when you're saying when are you gonna quit—that cheque you get in your box every month that says $85,000."

Dunn, who played soccer in a park Tuesday morning with his young sons, had the satisfaction of a courageous fight and offers of contracts from the United States.

Ali, calling the round as it started with a gesture to the canvas, knocked out Dunn after dropping the Englishman five times.

German referee Herbert Thomaser rushed toward Dunn to push him away after the courageous British challenger reeled away from the ropes.

Ali redeemed himself after a contested victory over Jimmy Young last month by dominating the left-handed European champion, dancing and clowning, and punching with authority he had not shown since his fight with Joe Frazier.

Dunn was a courageous opponent, boring in on the champion until he began to find the range and winning the third round by slipping left hands through to the champion's head and peppering him with three sharp rights.

Ali knocked Dunn down for the first time in the fourth round with a right hand lead. The Englishman went to his knees and then rose at the count of nine.

Ali blasted Dunn with a right to the head that sent him staggering and knocked him down for the second time with a right to the head.

Dunn was up again quickly, but went down for a third time, and the referee counted to nine.

Ali began the fifth round by pointing to the canvas, indicating that Dunn would fall by the end of the three minutes. But Dunn was out of his corner quickly, pursuing the champ to the ropes and punching with both hands.

Dunn worked inside close to Ali, and Ali hung on his neck, catching his breath. Ali bore in, scoring with a left hook and then a right to Dunn's head and then with volleys with both hands.

It was finally an overhand right that dropped Dunn for a fourth time. He was up at seven, and then down again on a short right hook at 2:05 of the fifth round.

Dunn wobbled on his legs near his own corner, and Thomaser intervened, signalling that the fifth was over.

It was fast work for $1.6 million for the champion. Dunn made $125,000 from the fight.

Whitecaps hold edge, settle for soggy tie

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League seemed to have the best opportunities Monday but played to a scoreless tie with Manchester United of the English First Division in an exhibition soccer match before 16,091 fans.

The game was played in a driving rain on soaked artificial turf and the conditions frustrated both sides.

Brian Robinson was put in the clear by Tommy Ord with 20 minutes gone. Manchester goalkeeper Alex Stepney came 12 yards out of his net to meet the threat, realized he could not get back in time and was stranded. But Robinson elected to try and drive the ball rather than chip it over Stepney's head and the goaltender went down to smother it.

Moments later, Glen Johnson slid five yards like a hydroplane to cause Stepney another anxious moment. And early in the second half, United's Tommy Jackson had to kick the ball off the goal line with Stepney absent after an overhead kick by Bobby Lenarduzzi.

The closest Manchester effort came at 22 minutes of the second half when Ray Storey burst through the middle with the Vancouver defence appealing for offside. With only goalkeeper Phil Parkes to beat, Storey sliced his shot wide.

Holland qualifies for semi-final

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Holland qualified for the semi-finals of the European soccer championship Sunday with a 2-1 win over Belgium. Holland won the first leg match, 5-0, in Rotterdam. The semi-final lineup is Czechoslovakia vs. Holland and Yugoslavia vs. West Germany.

City players dominate net event

Victoria Racquet Club players dominated the Nanaimo Spring Festival Tennis Tournament at Nanaimo on the weekend.

Brenda Cameron and Neil Coutts led the way winning a pair of titles each. Miss Cameron won the women's singles title with a 7-6, 6-4 decision over Nina Bland and she teamed with Coutts to win the mixed doubles with a 6-4, 6-7, 6-1 triumph over Ian Brady and Miss Bland.

Coutts and Russ Hartley teamed up to win the men's doubles with a 7-5, 6-2, win over clubmates Tony Simnett and Ted Davies.

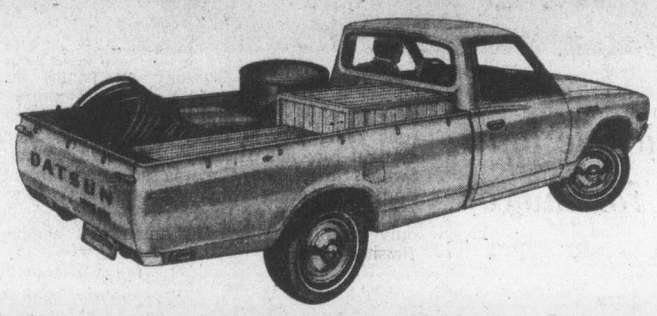

Brady, of Island Indoor Tennis, won the men's singles with a 6-4, 6-0, win over Marty Taylor of Oak Bay.

Bicycle built for mayor

Enjoying his ride Tuesday on penny-farthing bicycle is Mayor Michael Young of Victoria while Jack Leonard, rider and builder of old-type bicycle, runs along just in case. Winner after Monday's straight race and Tuesday's obstacle race was John Swann. Stuart John Cox was second and John Smith third in the event which was worth $500 to winner. Gerard Bertryn of Rancocas Woods, New Jersey, only out-of-town entrant among 10 competitors, finished 10th.

Another anti-whaling mission set

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Members of the Greenpeace Foundation, Canada's persistent environmental organization, Tuesday announced plans to disrupt Soviet and Japanese whaling operations in the Pacific Ocean this summer.

"If both countries try to carry on whaling any longer, they will do it over our dead bodies," vowed Greenpeace president Bob Hunter, an ex-newspaper columnist.

Thirty-six volunteers from seven countries — including six women — will take part in the mission. They will leave Vancouver June 19 aboard a fast former Canadian navy minesweeper, renamed Greenpeace 7.

Hunter said 17 crew members have vowed to place themselves in high-speed inflatable boats between the whales and the harpoons of the whalers.

"For the first time, women as well as men will be acting as human shields to end the slaughter of the world's few remaining great whales," he said. "This is a serious business — it's no mere male chauvinist operation."

Hunter hailed the capability of the 153-foot Greenpeace 7 and said it would be able to pursue the whaling fleets throughout the entire summer.

Unlike last year, when Greenpeace sailed against the whalers, they will have speed and distance.

"This time our vessel can travel every bit as fast as the whalers. We have sufficient range to travel all the way to Tokyo if necessary."

He said the mission has been endorsed by marine explorer Jacques Cousteau and might be joined at sea by Canadian author Farley Mowat, a member of the Greenpeace Foundation's board of governors.

Another Greenpeace mission returned recently from an attempt to disrupt an annual Canadian-Norwegian seal hunt on pack ice off Canada's Atlantic Coast. In previous years Greenpeace members have sailed against French nuclear tests in the South Pacific.

Queen's message:

Continue the struggle to reduce suffering

OTTAWA (CP) — Queen Elizabeth has called in her annual Commonwealth Day address on all Commonwealth countries to continue the global struggle to bring down the numbers suffering from poverty and starvation in the world.

The queen's message for Commonwealth Day, which coincides with Victoria Day in Canada, was issued here by Government House. In Britain, Commonwealth Day is celebrated June 12.

Her Majesty urged the 35 Commonwealth governments to persist in the struggle to achieve freedom from want throughout the world.

Here is the text of Her Majesty's address:

We live in a world striving to find ways for men and women to improve their standard of life and, at the very least, to achieve one of the fundamental freedoms — freedom from want.

Many of us, individually, tend to lose heart as one obstacle after another—man-made and natural—makes progress slow. But the Commonwealth has never lost heart, for it has the strength of being a great international community, broadly representative of the world's population, with thirty-five independent countries, drawn together of their own free choice from every part of the world.

Five years ago Commonwealth governments joined in a Declaration of Principles, which included these words:

"We believe that the wide disparities in wealth now existing between different sections of mankind are too great to be tolerated. They also create world tensions. Our aim is their progressive removal. We therefore seek to use our efforts to overcome poverty, ignorance and disease, in raising standards of life and achieving a more equitable international society."

The Commonwealth is never likely to lose sight of this goal and, at last year's meeting of heads of government in Jamaica, it did something which probably only the Commonwealth could do. It invited a group of experts from different countries to study this problem. Their work has been a positive Commonwealth contribution to broader discussions now taking place in the United Nations.

This initiative by the Commonwealth can give us new heart. We must persist especially in the struggle to bring down the numbers suffering from starvation in the world, and particularly the children. The task is enormous, but it is one in which the whole Commonwealth has a special part to play.

Obituary notice shocked subject

DROYLESDEN, England (CP) — James Reid got the shock of his life when he read his obituary notice in The Times, and undertakers called to take him away. Reid, the victim of a cruel hoax, cancelled plans to attend a cricket match when he read about his death. The Times published a disclaimer.

You can help raise
$125,000
for Canada's amateur swimmers.
Taking part is the spirit...

Take part.
By saving 30¢ with these coupons.

The hours and years an athlete is willing to sacrifice in training is not all that's required to win. Especially when it comes to the Olympics.

It also takes a lot of money.

For the past five years, Standard Brands Canada Limited has been offering you coupons on our products. And donating an equal amount (up to $100,000) to Amateur Swimming for every coupon received.

This year, we'll be donating up to $125,000.

So take part and use these coupons on your next purchase. Each one will save you 10¢ and raise 10¢ for the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association. If you use them all, you'll save 30¢ and our swimmers will receive 30¢.

By using them, you'll be helping to make a very important contribution to the development of Canadian swimmers and helping Canada at this year's Olympics.

And you'll be saving money at the same time.

Save money on Chase & Sanborn Roasted Coffee, Chipits and Blue Bonnet Margarine and support British Columbia's amateur swimmers.

Islanders win prizes

BRANDON (CP) — Several Vancouver Island students were among award-winners in the Canada-wide science fair which wound up here over the holiday weekend.

Three southern Ontario Grade 13 students grabbed all the top prizes, however, and will make the trip to the International Youth Science Fair in London, England, July 28-Aug. 11.

Mark Semenuk of Hamilton won the award in the senior division of the life sciences category with his project, a biological study of cell structure in chickens.

In the physical sciences section, Fred McLaren of London, Ont. placed first with a test tube creation of the nucleus of a carbon atom.

The senior entry in engineering, developed by Adrian Kitat of Hamilton, won the third major prize.

A panel of 60 judges evaluated 124 projects. The junior division is comprised of students from grades seven to nine; the intermediates are from grades 10 and 11, and the seniors from grades 12 and 13.

Other winners in the life sciences were Kathleen Telfer of Edmonton, a Grade 9 student whose junior division project was "environmental selection by mealworms," and in intermediate competition, Vernon Stringer, Grade 11, of York County, Ont., with "infectious drug resistance."

In the physical sciences, Susan Bosak, a Grade 8 student from Winnipeg, won the junior division with "thermo-electricity" and Arnold Stamler, a Grade 11 student representing Metro Toronto, placed first in the intermediate division with "a pulsed nitrogen laser."

In the junior division of the engineering competition, Paul Hebert and Charles Albert, both Grade 9 students from New Brunswick region, placed first with a project in which they produced methanol, a potential fuel, out of wood pulp.

The intermediate division winner was Kaleb Small of Vancouver Island region, a Grade 11 student whose project was the optic transmission of digital computer data.

In the environmental section, Alexandra Rieche of Vancouver Island region, the only Grade 7 student to win produced a study on combatting oil slicks. Janet Graham, a Grade 11 student from the explored the question, "do air impurities affect human reflexes?"

Engine efficiency can best be calculated here.

The ultimate evaluation of your car's engine efficiency is what that car costs you. To operate. To maintain.
And, that's where STP Oil Treatment can help. Because recent tests prove, without a doubt, STP Oil Treatment can dramatically help reduce oil consumption and engine wear.

A recent U.S. test was conducted with cars ranging from one with only 1,867 miles on it, to one with over 250,000 miles on it. A single and a multi-grade premium oil were used.

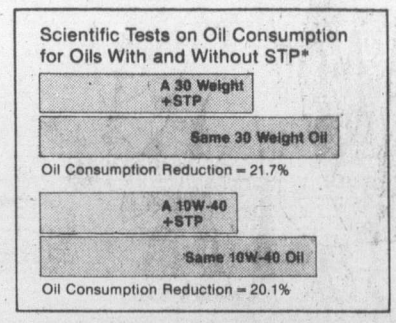

Each car was tested for two 6,000 mile oil change intervals without STP. Then, the test was repeated using STP.

Professional drivers ran the cars through a range of speeds from stop-and-go driving to long stretches at 55 mph.

The following graphs and information are the results of that test.

STP Oil Treatment reduced oil consumption by an average 20.9%. Here's how:

The reason STP Oil Treatment reduces oil consumption is a simple one. It retards the oxidation of motor oil. Therefore, the test cars used less oil. No matter what the weight.

STP Oil Treatment provides increased lubrication at the time it's most needed. That's because under the pressure of increased friction and heat build-up of a fast running engine, the long chain polymers in STP uncurl and expose more of the actual molecules' surfaces.

Also, oil treated with STP Oil Treatment drains off moving parts more slowly, leaving a film of lubricant on critical surfaces for a longer time when the engine is not running.

The time to use STP Oil Treatment is at every oil change. And, the first time you need oil.

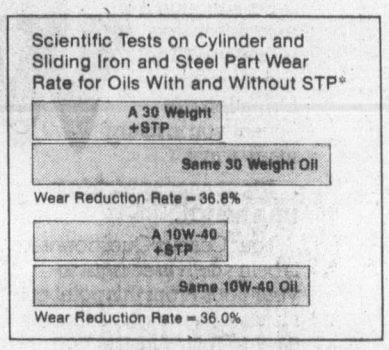

In new or rebuilt engines, or engines in good condition, use one can of STP Oil Treatment per 4 or 5 quart crankcase. About 10%. In engines where oil consumption is high, use up to 20% of STP or two cans per crankcase.

And, STP will not settle out of solution. Once mixed with motor oil, it remains permanently mixed in the solution.

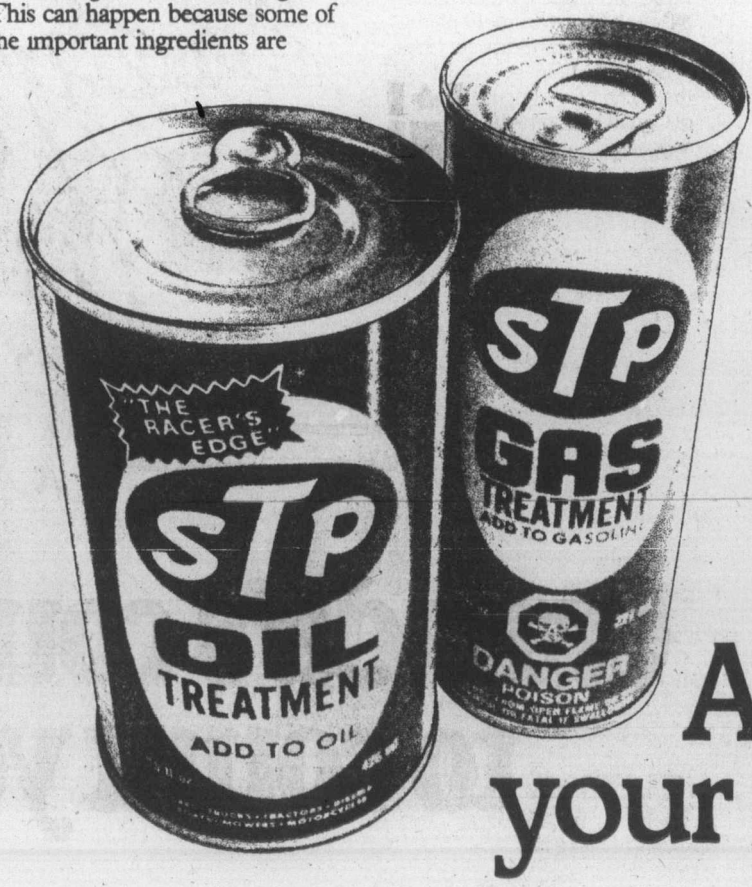

STP Oil Treatment reduced the engine wear rate by an average 36.4%. Here's how:

It's a fact, motor oil can lose effectiveness with use. Even a premium grade 10W-40 weight. This can happen because some of the important ingredients are depleted as you drive. And, that's where STP Oil Treatment can help.

STP Oil Treatment fortifies, or toughens, motor oil. In doing so, it helps reduce the wear rate of lubricated sliding iron and steel parts, as well as parts containing copper and aluminum. Engine parts like cylinders, rings, bearings, cams and lifters.

STP Oil Treatment reinforces the oil's ability to withstand the abuse of friction and heat developed in a running engine. Metal-to-metal wear is reduced. It's as simple as that.

STP Gas Treatment is another fine product you should know about. Here's why:

While it's true today's gasoline contains cleaning additives, no gasoline when used over a period of time can make a carburetor cleaner. Instead, when used, gasoline leaves deposits on the carburetor throat and other internal parts. These gummy resins are by-products of fuel. They collect dirt that passes through the air filter down into the carburetor. Dirt that can have a serious effect on engine performance. Whether moving on a highway or idling at a stop light. Dirt that reduces engine efficiency and adds to fuel consumption.

And, that's where STP Gas Treatment can help. STP Gas Treatment can clean that dirty carburetor. And, keep it clean. It can help keep valves, spark plugs, PCV valves, and fuel systems clean as well.

STP Gas Treatment also contains an effective anti-rust agent that provides protection against damages caused by moisture accumulating in the fuel system.

And, it's as simple as adding one can of STP Gas Treatment to every tank of gas.

Also, STP Gas Treatment is safe to use with unleaded gas and has no effect on either the life or the catalyst action of catalytic converters. Very important.

It all adds up. Here's why:

Clearly, STP Oil Treatment and STP Gas Treatment are products right for the times. It's a simple matter of arithmetic when you consider that a car wash can cost more than a single can of STP Oil Treatment or Gas Treatment.

Think it over. With what your car costs you, shouldn't you get a run for your money?

*Here's what the graphs mean: On the wear graph, for example, for every 1,000 miles driven, 64.8 milligrams of iron were worn away without STP in a 10W-40 oil, and 41.5 milligrams of iron were worn away with STP in the same 10W-40 oil. This is an average reduction in wear rate (calculated from parts per million of iron measured in the crankcase oil), of 36%. Of course, use of STP will not always result in a 36% reduction in wear rate. The results shown are averages for the test cars. Results for individual test cars varied. The actual wear and oil consumption results that you obtain may also vary depending upon the way you drive, driving conditions, the motor oil you use, your car's condition, model year and optional equipment. What these scientific tests show is that the use of STP Oil Treatment will help reduce wear and oil consumption.

A run for your money.

PROVINCIAL COURT

"If it weren't for your wife and children, I can tell you now you would go to jail," Judge Blake Allan said Tuesday in Victoria provincial court to a 38-year-old Victoria-area man who pleaded guilty May 11 to a Saanich charge of theft.

Josef Fink, address not known, admitted taking $260 worth of beef roasts, hams, lobsters, sardines and cheese April 16 from the Royal Oak Inn, 4680 Elk Lake Drive, where he worked as a cook, with the intention of selling the food in beer parlors.

He was remanded then to Tuesday for a pre-sentence report and sentence, with Allan noting after reading the report that Fink had a similar conviction in 1971 in Victoria for breach of trust.

Defence lawyer Edmund Rogers said the food had been returned to its owner at the time of arrest and added Fink had "expressed deep regrets to the manager, who has forgiven him and would take him back."

Rogers also said Fink was separated from his family but still contributed to their upkeep. He supported a pre-sentence report recommendation for an intermittent jail term and prosecutor Nicholas Lang did the same.

The judge agreed, although he said that it was "against my better judgment," and sentenced Frank to 14 days in jail to be served on his days off the cooking job, plus a $300 fine to be paid by June 30.

Rodney Kevin Steigenberger, 22, of 256 Atkins, already serving eight months for an earlier offence, pleaded guilty to two Campbell River charges dated March 13 — one of impaired driving and an second of mischief.

Lang said Steigenberger's car forced another vehicle onto a road shoulder early March 13. An eyewitness-driver followed Steigenberger to a service station, took his car keys and asked the attendant to call police.

Steigenberger smashed the entry door of the service station and the windshield of the eyewitness' car. Allan ordered a total term of three months, added to Steigengerger's present time and said it would be followed by two years of probation.

Allan said "it is important that it be very plain to visitors" that possession of marijuana is an offence in Canada and tourists who violated the law would not "merely" be sent home as punishment.

He spoke after Los Angeles resident Gregory Price, 26, who came to Victoria for the holiday weekend festivities, pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana Monday morning.

Legal Aid duty counsel William McElmoyle said Price had been in custody since his arrest and suggested a nominal one-day sentence which would have meant deportation Tuesday. Instead, Allan made it two days and deportation will follow release today.

Public help sought in rape attempt

Public assistance was requested Tuesday by Colwood RCMP in the search for an older-model white pickup truck or anyone with information on a case of attempted rape shortly after midnight Friday in the Peatt-Goldstream area.

Police said a 22-year-old Victoria woman was walking up Peatt Road to visit a friend and passed the parked pickup. Just before she reached her friend's home, the pickup drove past her without lights.

Later, after she found the friend was not home and began walking back, the pickup passed her again. Then on Peatt, close to Goldstream, a young man came at her from bushes, threw her to the ground and got on top of her.

But the woman screamed and managed to free herself as the man "took off running the other way." The woman did not see the pickup during the attempt but police considered the driver's behavior before the attempt made him a probable suspect.

Police said the woman's only description of the vehicle was an older model white pickup with rounded fenders. There was a white canopy on the back and the top of the canopy was even with the top of the cab.

The man was described as in his mid-20s, five feet, 10 inches tall, around 165 pounds, of stocky build with a thick moustache to the corners of his mouth and dark brown straight hair, styled around the face and hanging over the collar at the back.

Drug-traffic trial opened

One person pleaded guilty and three others pleaded not guilty at the opening of a two-count drug trafficking trial Tuesday in Victoria county court.

Alain Rosaire LaForest, 25, was remanded in custody to June 23 for sentence after pleading guilty to possession of codeine for the purpose of trafficking and possession of pethidine for the purpose of trafficking in Victoria Jan. 27.

Irene Janine Jolin, 20, Lori Elizabeth Knight, 17, and Wendell Sinclair Lewis, 25, pleaded not guilty to the same indictment.

Escape from moving van resulted in brief freedom

A charge of being unlawfully at large from Wilkinson Road jail in Saanich is expected to be read today in Victoria provincial court in the case of a 21-year-old Victoria area man.

Jail officials Tuesday identified the man as Gregory Howard and said he was serving a three-month jail term imposed in Victoria for assault causing bodily harm and had about one month left.

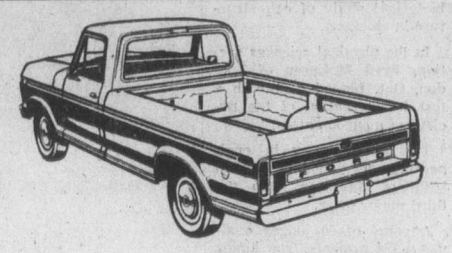

The officials said an inmate at the Jordan River camp got into an argument with a woman during visitors' day Sunday and began "causing problems at the camp." It was decided to return the inmate to Wilkinson Road late Sunday afternoon in a van.

The inmate was the only person in the back of the van during the trip. It was locked on the outside and the inmate managed to remove the screen from a window, then the window, and jump out.

The spokesmen said the inmate left as the van travelled along Helmcken. His absence soon was noted and Saanich police found the man 15 minutes later off Hastings.

Census information often provides the starting point for determining such things as, regional development programs, social measures, and the need for schools, housing and transportation. For example, based partly on population figures, the Federal Government makes various payments to the provinces including grants for hospitals and other health programs.

So, although it may not always be apparent, the use of census information can benefit you in many, many ways.

June 1 is Census Day. What's in it for you?

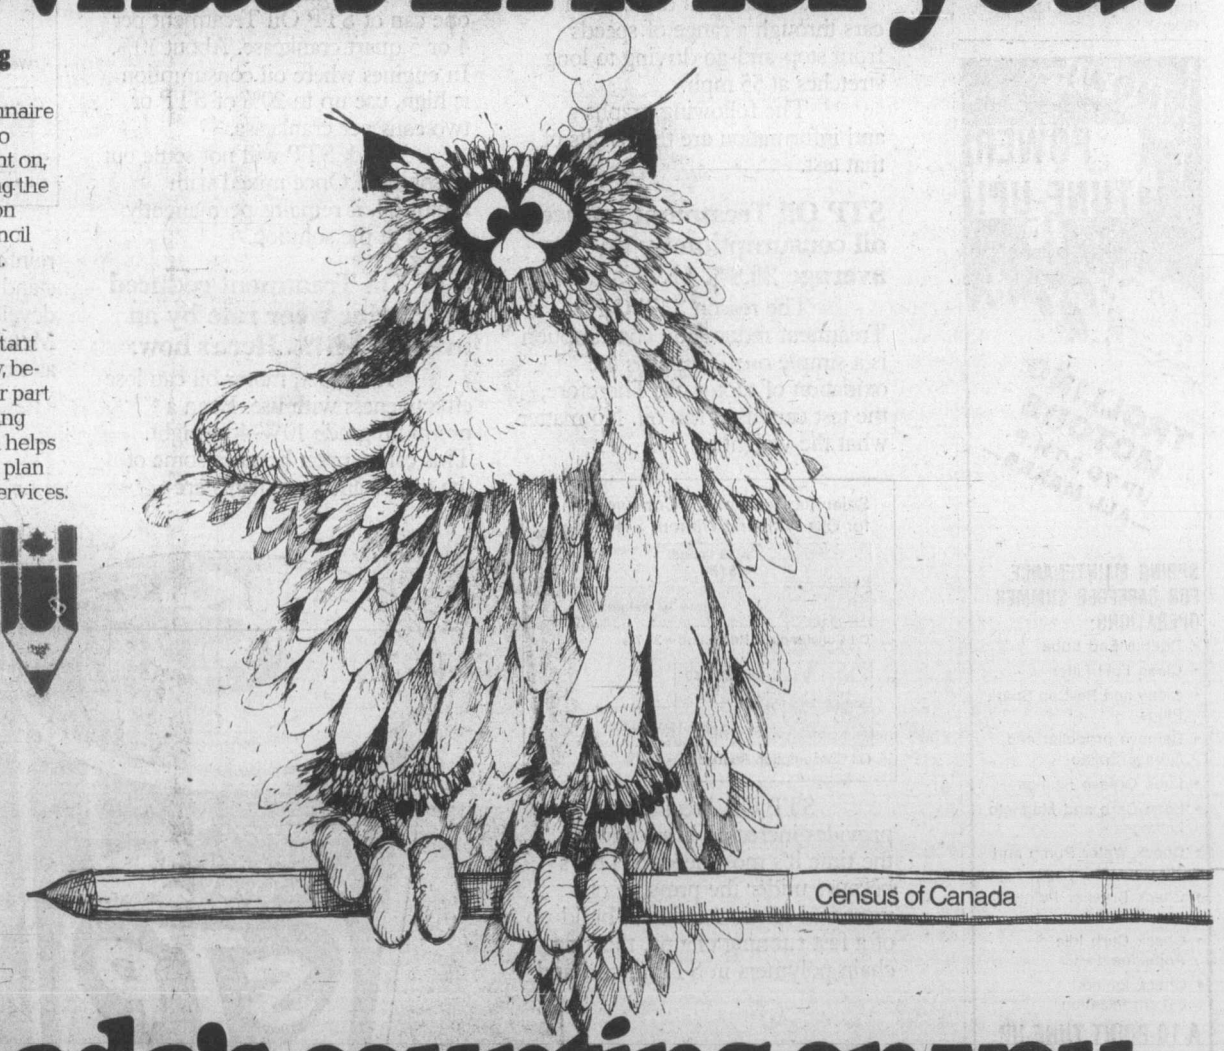

It's as easy as picking up a pencil.

Your Census Questionnaire is being delivered right to your door. From this point on, it's just a matter of reading the easy-to-follow Instruction Booklet, picking up a pencil and counting yourself in.

We can't do it right without you.

No one is more important than you on Census Day, because, when you do your part on June 1, you're providing basic information which helps all levels of government plan social and community services.

So please help us make the 1976 Census of Canada a complete success.

Canada's counting on you to count yourself in.

Canadian N-cutoff attacked

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India, smarting from Canada's abrogation of nuclear co-operation with this country, warned the non-aligned nations Tuesday against designs of developed countries to deny them benefits of technology.

India's warning was aired by Foreign Minister Yeshwantrao Chavan during a debate on international affairs in the upper house of parliament.

Chavan said, "Canada's unilateral abrogation of nuclear co-operation with India is a warning to all developing countries of the developed nations' intentions of denying benefits of technology to the Third World."

The foreign minister said the Canadian action "is a definite indication of a new trend in the advanced countries to make it more difficult for developing countries to participate in and benefit from the technological revolution."

He asked the Third World to "take serious note of this development and ensure that they are not denied their share in the technological revolution."

Chavan said: "India doesn't believe in nuclear weapons but we do not want to give up our right to develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes."

Chavan's remarks gave rise to speculation that India might raise Canada's refusal to continue nuclear aid at the summit conference of the non-aligned nations scheduled for August in Colombo.

Canadian External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen told Parliament last week that his government had decided not to resume nuclear co-operation with India because of New Delhi's refusal to promise it would not use Canadian materials, equipment and technology for further nuclear weapons.

India used nuclear wastes from a Canada-supplied reactor for its first underground nuclear explosion in the desert state of Rajasthan on May 18, 1974.

Camp's capers

Policeman watches youth clean up campsite at end of weekend after up to 50 policemen responded to a plea for help at private campground about 25 miles north of Owen Sound, Ont., during weekend. Police acted following complaint from camp's owner that he had been threatened with bodily harm by some of the campers.

$14 million in heroin seized in B.C. case

VANCOUVER (CP) — An RCMP spokesman said Tuesday that a year-long investigation during which 16 pounds of heroin worth $14 million was seized, has culminated with 17 persons being charged with various drug offences.

The spokesman said the accused persons, as well as 21 named co-conspirators, are alleged to be part of an international organization which has been in operation in the city for some time.

He said the 17 persons have been charged with a total of six counts of conspiracy to traffic in heroin and seven counts of trafficking in heroin, and further charges were expected.

He said that RCMP Tuesday completed 62 searches simultaneously, leading up to the charges. He also said that during the searches more heroin and a substantial amount of currency were found.

The spokesman said the illegal operation appeared to be centred in the city's West End but had connections throughout Greater Vancouver.

He said the case involved RCMP undercover operators as well as several teams of investigators.

The alleged offence of conspiracy, he said, took place between March, 1975, and May of this year.

Hunt's on for Leopards

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — The government apparently is going into its latest armed forces modernization plan—acquisition of the Leopard tank from West Germany—without concerns about financing.

Government officials said Tuesday that the 128 tanks plus support systems which Canada will buy will cost $159.8 million, that deliveries will start in January, 1978, and payments will come progressively out of defence department budgets.

Government plans to spend $1 billion on 18 Lockheed Orion patrol aircraft died last week when the company was unable to raise financing from Canadian banks.

Decision of the government to buy the Leopard was announced in Europe this weekend by travelling External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen. It came as the minister was telling his NATO allies of the failure of the Orion program.

Questioned on the matter in the Commons, Defence Minister James Richardson said negotiations are not yet complete, but are proceeding satisfactorily.

The Leopard is referred to as a main battle tank. It weighs more than 46 tons and fires a 105-millimetre British gun backed by a laser computer system from Belgium.

It is capable of 40 miles an hour on the road and 25 miles an hour cross country. It has a range of 375 miles.

The decision to buy the Leopard—rather than take the cheaper alternative of refurbishing the ancient Centurions which the army has been using for many years—was taken at a cabinet meeting last week.

Canada in 1970 decided to get out of the tank business because such vehicles had no use in Canada.

The Liberal government yielded to pressure from freinds of the armed forces in Canada and from NATO allies, mainly the United States and West Germany, in first suspending implementation of that decision and then reversing it last year.

Government officials said Tuesday the government and West Germany still must work out details of industrial benefits for Canada as a result of the major purchase in Germany.

They said there is no hope of having any major part of the tanks made in Canada. Instead the West Germans must be persuaded to make purchases in Canada amounting to between 30 per cent and 50 per cent of the total cost of the Leopard.

West Germany will lend Canada about 30 Leopards so the armed forces can begin training on the tank which is in use in several NATO forces.

The forces currently have more than 200 Centurions. Most are in storage. Eighty are in use, 54 of them in Germany.

The Leopard's VC-12 gasoline engine is similar to the one that powered the Spitfire fighter planes during the Second World War. The Centurions cost $186,000 each in 1952.

Our legal strike against hospitals in the province of British Columbia has been suspended, by order of the provincial government, for 21 days.

Suspended, not ended.

Almost 6,000 of our members have now returned to their jobs.

Picket lines around seven Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island hospitals have disappeared.

They will not reappear before 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 10, 1976.

But if, by that time, the Hospital Employees' Union has not been successful in its attempt to secure for its members a collective agreement based on the recommendations of Industrial Inquiry Commissioner Bert Blair, those picket lines will reappear.

They will be set up, not only at the seven hospitals where the Hospital Employees' Union is already engaged in legal strike action, but at many other British Columbia hospitals as well.

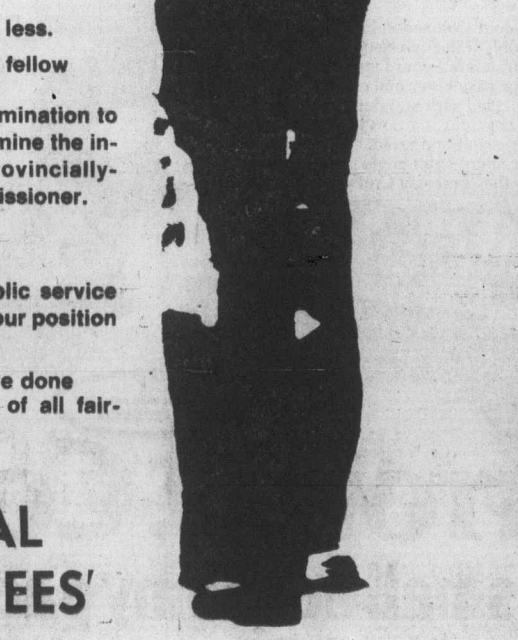

The Union has taken this stand because we feel we cannot do any less.

We owe — to our members, to our fellow hospital workers, and to all British Columbia trade unionists — a determination to resist any and all attempts to undermine the integrity and legitimacy of a provincially-appointed Industrial Inquiry Commissioner.

We have that determination.

In the weeks to come, the Hospital Employees' Union will, through public service messages such as this one, explain our position in this unfortunate dispute.

We are confident that, when we have done so, we can count on the support of all fair-minded British Columbians.

Bing Crosby treated for choking on meat

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Singer Bing Crosby, 72, was released from Riverside Hospital Tuesday following emergency treatment to remove a piece of meat lodged in his throat.

Crosby, here to play in a golf tournament, was eating dinner at the Columbus Club, a private downtown club, when he began choking on the piece of meat.

He was taken to the hospital where he spent the night.

Crosby was a house guest of industrialist John Galbreath who flew the singer into his private landing field on his farm west of the city late Monday.

Lightfoot aids Olympic team

TORONTO (UPI) — Singer Gordon Lightfoot announced Tuesday he would stage a benefit concert next month in hope of raising $200,000-plus for Canada's Olympic athletes.

Lightfoot said in a news conference at his Toronto home that the concert would be held June 11 at Maple Leaf Gardens and televised nationally the following week, on June 16, on the CBC network.

Appearing with Lightfoot on the show will be folk singers Sylvia Tyson and Murray McLauchlan and classical guitarist Liona Boyd.

Lightfoot said he launched the project recently in response to a similar show by Bob Hope and Bing Crosby at the Montreal Forum.

"This was a television benefit for American use in aid of the U.S. Olympic team, which might have been taped in New York or Los Angeles, but through some quirk of public relations ended up being taped at the Montreal Forum.

"I felt a response was necessary on behalf of Canadian athletes and that I might be, perhaps, best qualified to set the project in motion."

Lightfoot said he contacted the Canadian Olympic Association and the CBC and arranged with Maple Leafs Gardens to donate the arena free. He also arranged for Carling O'Keefe Breweries to put up $100,000 to sponsor the television show, with the whole sum going to the athletes.

He said the money raised would be split 50-50 between the Canadian Track and Field Association and the Canadian Olympic Association.

Tickets for the gardens, which will have about 9,500 seats for the concert, will be $10 and $12 with 200 "celebrity box seats" at $100 each.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Convicted murderer surrenders to police

NORTH BAY, ONT. (CP) — Convicted murderer Donald Kelly surrendered to police Tuesday after a newspaper reporter spent 3½ hours in a jail cell while Kelly brandished a toy gun.

Kelly, 37, surrendered early Tuesday after isolating himself Monday night in a corridor separated from the rest of the North Bay jail.

Don Gauthier, a North Bay Nugget reporter, said both he and the police thought the toy was a snub-nose, .38-calibre silver-plated gun

"It was a .very realistic toy," said Don Kerr, director of information services for the correctional services ministry of Ontario. It is not known how Kelly obtained the gun. Kerr said the ministry would investigate.

Kerr also said jail officials agreed to Kelly's demands that there be no retaliation for his action and that he would not lose his visiting, letter-writing and cigarette privileges.

Ministry officials said Tuesday that Kelly asked to speak to Gauthier.

Describing the atmosphere between the two men as tense, Gauthier said Kelly began telling jokes and swapping stories as the conversation progressed.

The incident ended when Gauthier said he promised Kelly he would try to visit him at the jail.

Aboriginal governor tabs TV man 'racist'

ADELAIDE (Reuter) — Australia's first aboriginal state governor was appointed today and hours later he called a television interviewer a racist and ordered him out of his home.

Sir Douglas Nicholls, who will take over as governor of South Australia Dec. 1, was interviewed at his Melbourne home by reporter Jo'in Hounslow for a television current affairs show.

The reporter's first question was to Lady Nicholls. He asked her how she thought she would be received by South Australia's "garden party set" (upper class).

Sir Douglas, 69, knighted in 1972 for his services to aboriginal advancement, was upset.

He told Hounslow: "You don't bring this stuff up to us about black and white. You're dealing with us as people. Why do you throw this up? You wouldn't throw this up to any other person."

Hounslow replied: "Let me suggest with respect, Sir, you yourself said that your appointment rocked the nation."

Sir Douglas: "We know you people are a lot of racists, you're looking for trouble. Now get out."

Design for Olympics

Kites fly a painting

By DEBORAH PHELAN

MONTREAL (CP) — Everyone is jumping on the Olympic bandwagon these days, even down-to-earth, fun-loving artists who aren't "into it for the money" such as kitemaker Claude Thibaudeau.

In a shop crowded with empty coffee cups, scraps of paper, cloth, glue, thread and candlewax, Mr. Thibaudeau, 43 has enough work to keep him and his Vancouver partner, David Faris, going till September.

The Olympic organizing committee has contracted with him to contribute to Corridart, a five-mile-long covered thoroughfare along Sherbrooke Street leading to the main Olympic stadium where local artists will display arts and crafts, chosen on a competitive basis.

Thibaudeau will decorate the street with 30 banners, made to co-ordinate with 100 kites of similar designs to be flown from the Montreal Municipal Library.

Since the library is across the street from the site of the International Youth Camp set up in connection with the Olympics, which has an $8-million budget to organize an arts and culture program, Thibaudeau hopes to use students and young people to fly the kites and to "add spark to the affair."

"The kites are made from all sorts of designs and colors to produce an abstract painting, on a kite instead of canvas," he said in an interview. Specific projects are undertaken by as many people as needed but only Thibaudeau and his partner design the kites.

Another project keeping him busy involves decorating the geodesic dome at the Man and His World exhibit in conjunction with the botanical gardens, which will decorate the ground level. Thibaudeau, who will hire about four others to work with him through the summer, will make 25 kites to cover the entire ceiling of the 250-footwide dome.

Thibeaudeau, who was sharing a shop with a candlemaker until recently now uses the whole shop as a studio to produce his unique kites, usually measuring eight feet high by four feet wide.

He recently completed a contract at Montreal's new Mirabel Airport, where he decorated a restaurant with 25 different kinds of brightly-colored kites. Radio-Canada, the French-language network of the CBC, uses his kites against the background of the logo during station breaks.

He said he is not interested in making money; he only wants enough to pay for the shop and expenses.

"People need honest pleasure—kids' play. On any given weekend in the summer you can go to a park and see parents teaching their kids to fly kites, but they're really having all the fun themselves."

Mr. Thibaudeau, who years ago owned a plant manufacturing plumbing products, said his motto is, "Whatever is earned in a day must be spent on the same day."

"This wasn't set up as a business project at all but it's turning out that way," he said. "I have to approach it as a job now because things are getting too demanding.

"That isn't my objective at all; I may have to start making something else."

However, he takes his work seriously and displays a genuine love for kites, which come in a variety of shapes—from the standard triangular shape to a hexagonal or rectangular frame with four wings. All are made from flexible aluminum with brightly-colored nylon or Dacron "parachute skin," sewn in the shop on a 1930s Singer-model machine.

Kites have been used for 5,000 years, he explained, and for reasons other than pleasure. Through the ages they have provided protection against evil gods and for battles, where opponents on opposite sides of a riverbank would fly their kites, with broken pieces of glass and pottery glued to the rope, in the enemy's territory. Kites in animal and insect shapes were widely used in parades.

The Chinese even used them to carry bombs, made out of gunpowder in a clay pot. When the kite reached enemy grounds, the rope was cut.

Denmark's Margrethe

Queen of hearts, humor

By GREGORY JENSEN

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (UPI) — There is a surprising sense of self-mockery about Queen Margrethe II of Denmark, the tall Viking queen who currently is criss-crossing the United States.

It is an unexpected trait in one so royal.

Margrethe is monarch of the world's oldest kingdom, inheritor of a crown dating back 1,000 years, surrounded by the ceremony and trappings of royalty. But she does love to poke fun at herself.

Recently the 36-year-old queen stood in regal dignity at an informal audience in Amalienborg Palace, her Copenhagen residence. She looked every inch a queen — and there are a lot of inches.

She barely misses touching six feet, and since she does not stoop, said an official biography, "she is never lost in a crowd."

Queen Margrethe was thoughful about a monarch's role in this democratic age, curious about the American small towns she is visiting, deeply serious about "my job" as Denmark's first reigning Queen in 560 years.

But over and over a smile spread beneath her green-tinged blue eyes and some gentle kidding of herself popped out.

"I am a very bad driver," said the queen, "and I have given it up. I decided to remove that risk from the roads."

"Women's lib is a subject I avoid," said the queen. "But on the personal level I really can't complain."

Isn't she bothered by royal restrictions? Doesn't she wish she could just pop out for a newspaper or a new hat?

"But I do," she said. "I do all my own shopping. We are not such rare game as all that."

She introduced her solemn sons—Crown Prince Frederik, who was eight on May 26, and Prince Joachim, 6 — with obvious pride. Prince Henrik, her French-born husband, watched from across the gilt and white palace drawing room, hung with portraits and cut-glass chandeliers.

Queen Margrethe speaks so quickly she sounds nervous, though her composure is total. Her English is flawless and unaccented, as are her French and German. She speaks three other languages with slightly less fluency.

Ordinary Danes are quick to list her other accomplishments.

She has artistic flair, her knowledge of history is vast. She is a trained archeologist with a degree from Cambridge University.

"It is my sideline," she said. "I believed I had to do something really thoroughly, otherwise I would just be a passenger everywhere."

As queen she has influence but no power. She maintains more regal distance between herself and her people than some bicycle-riding Scandinavian monarchs of the past, but the Danish people hold her in high regard.

They elected her in the first place. A popular referendum in 1953 changed the constitution so a queen could inherit. A recent poll showed 88 per cent in favor of the monarchy and the way Queen Margarethe fills it.

She does her job in some unusual ways.

The other night the Danish Red Cross — Prince Henrik is chairman — wanted some way to keep Danes at home for a 100th anniversary collection. It decided on a television program touring royal palaces, and Margrethe volunteered to be its on-camera ad lib guide.

She got high marks for professionalism, and the doorbell collection "was vast," a Red Cross official said.

Tuna fishing nets decimate porpoises

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — At least two species of porpoise, the spotted and the spinner, are in danger of being obliterated unless a 1972 federal law preventing their destruction is upheld, a spokesman for the Animal Protection Institue says.

The porpoises are in trouble because of proposed federal legislation which would overturn a 1972 federal law forbidding the killing of marine mammals by U.S. citizens or vessles after June 1, 1976. A house subcommittee is considering the legislation in Washington, D.C.

Ted Crail of the Animal Protection Institute said reversing the law "could buy more time for the tuna fishermen, but it would be a tragedy for the porpoises.

"They (the fishermen) have been given an extra break all along. They were given a two-year exemption from the Marine Animal Protection Act to adjust to the prohibition. For more than two years they received extensions. Meanwhile the spotted porpoise has been thinned out and the spinner porpoise is also in terrible danger."

Rep. Robert Leggett (D-Calif.) chairman of the house subcommittee on fisheries, wildlife conservation and environment, introduced the bill to set aside the earlier law.

Craig blamed Leggett for "opening up a subject on a crash basis after years of crusading and court action had finally produced a ruling which would have stopped the killing as of June 1.

"Reopening the issue demonstrates the full tragedy of not having an informed conservationist at the head of a subcommittee on animal protection."

A government study illustrates, Crail said, that two-thirds of all spotted porpoises have already been destroyed. Thousands more have been killed just this year.

The controversy arose because porpoises travel with tuna and often become entrapped in fishermen's nets. Last year 135,000 porpoises died in this manner, the study indicated.

The tuna fishermen are "rapidly decimating the ranks of a creature which many consider closer to man than any other species on the planet," Crail said.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: Whenever I am on the phone, my husband (age 62) walks over and says, "Who are you talking to?" Then he asks, "What does she want?" Next question: "Why bother talking about such nonsense?" After a few minutes, he says, "That's enough. Get off."

It's difficult to respond to questions when I'm on the phone, but I do my best. It is also embarrassing because the person on the other end can hear my husband badgering me.

Last night I decided to ignore him. He became furious and started to use such foul language I invented a caller at the front door and rang off. Please suggest a solution.—Up A Wall.

Dear Up: A person who is so immature that he can't be excluded from anything — not even an ordinary telephone conversation — should be treated like the child he is.

Keep a pad and pencil by the phone. When "Junior" begins to ask questions, write, "I'll tell you all about it later, dear." That should satisfy the noodnik until you get off.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm in love with a married man. Our affair started innocently. I didn't mean for it to happen and neither did George.

He married a woman he didn't love because she became pregnant (on purpose to trap him, probably). They have been living like brother and sister since a year ago February. George made up his mind to get a divorce before he ever met me.

I am eager to marry this beautiful man but I don't want people to think I broke up his marraige. My reputation is important to me and I need to protect it. What do you suggest?—Brown Eyes.

Dear Eyes: If the marriage is dead and you don't want people to think you killed it, don't hang around the corpse.

Ask George to call you when he's free — and not before. But don't stand on one foot waiting for the phone to ring.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 26 years of age, not a raving beauty but I have a good figure and have been told I am very attractive. My husband (we married when I was 21) has spent most of the time on the road as a salesman. This has led to problems I won't go into. To make a long story short I've been thinking seriously of divorcing him. He doesn't know it yet because I want to make sure I can improve on the situation. (My mother always said, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.")

Almost every evening after work I go to a little cafe-bar where there is dancing. (My mother lives with me and takes care of my two kids, so that's no problem.) Anyway, I've met some interesting men there. Everything goes fine till they see my wedding ring. When I say I'm "separated" they don't believe me.

Do you think I should leave my ring at home? I'd appreciate some advice. — Want More Out of Life Than I'm Getting.

Dear Want More: Not only should you leave your ring at home but you should stay home with your ring. No matter how you feel, you are still very much married.

Dear' Ann Landers: I'm writing mainly for those kids who didn't want their dad to get married after they lost their mom.

Our mom died three years ago. Dad was depressed for a long time. Then he started taking out young girls and was never home.

Last August Dad married a neat lady his own age. She has brightened our whole house. It is so wonderful to see Dad smile and laugh again. We are like a real family again.

I just thought your readers might want to hear from some kids who had another point of view. — Happy In Indiana.

Dear Happy: Thank you for "another point of view." It was great of you to write.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a sophomore, age 17, with girl trouble. Or I should say father trouble — hers, not mine.

Sally is 15 and very mature for her age but her old man refuses to let her grow up. She can date only two nights a week and has a 12:30 a.m. curfew. Help, Aunt Annie- — Rex

Dear Rex: You rattled the wrong cage, Bub. I'm with her dad. Two nights out a week for a 15-year-old girl is just right. So is 12:30. And I'm not your aunt.

He took them out of corsets

Poiret 'must have scared women to death'

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Paul Poiret created an international fashion commotion when he took women out of corsets an dared to show their legs.

That was 70 years ago and today the reverberations still affect the fashion world. A vintage Poiret proves just as stylish now as it was when the great French designer reigned over haute couture from 1096 through 1914.

"He revolutionized women's clothes," said Robert Riley, director of the design laboratory of the Fashion Institute of Technology, which Monday opened a retrospective of Poiret creations.

"For a thousand years women had worn structured clothing and corsets were from the knees to the armpits," said Riley. "Poiret threw that look out the window. He must have scared women to death.

"When he visited the United States, there was a great hue and cry. Poiret was destroying women's morals, women were showing their ankles for the first time.

"But he created clothes with ease of fit. Today we would call them 'body clothes'." Riley, whose career long has been is costume and the history of dress, and his staff at the institute, a teaching and exhibition centre, have gathered 80 Poiret gowns for the exhibition which will run through Sept. 11. It is open to the public.

Riley said this is the first one-man show in North America for Poiret and gowns have been lent from museums and private collections, including several from Mme. Denise Boulet-Poiret. He said Madame Poiret, a willowy beauty, was 18 when she married the designer. She bore him four children but ultimately divorced him.

Riley last saw madame Poiret in Paris in 1970 when she said of the designer, "he created me."

His lasting contributions, as Riley spelled them out in an interview, included the ease of clothes, the elimination of boning and corseting so clothes and body could move, his "sense of fun." And for those who think modern designers created the pants and boots looks, check Poiret. He was doing them in his peak years in Paris. he was also bobbing women's hair.

The First World War eclipsed the couture, which actually began with the House of Worth in the 1850s. After the war, Poiret continued his designing, still getting as much as $1,000 for a gown — "a lot of money for one dress in those days," said Riley.

But there was another designer on the horizon, Gabrielle Chanel, who did away with opulence and gave fasionable women "a lean and hungry look — little clothes, like the uniforms of telegraph boys."

"Suddenly," said Riley, "Poiret was out of mode."

Poiret dressed many famous and wealthy women. One was Mrs. Henry Clews, whose dress in the exhibit shows his interest in things Persian and Oriental. It's called "masquerade costume" with silver gauze tunic and trousers in cerise chiffon, a turban of lavender brocade, with feathers and pearls, and slippers of brocade and rhinestones. The date is 1911.

Represented also are gowns worn by the late cosmetics queen, Helena Rubinstein, a red silk with elaborate black embroidery on the bodice, long flowing black chiffon sleeves, and a silhouette unfitted except at the low waistline, sort of like the "blouson" shapes of a few years ago.

A cape from Madame Rubinstein's arch rival in cosmetics, Elizabeth Arden, is in bright purple lined with magenta;

A combination cape-coat owned by the late Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Pennsylvania governor and eminent conservationist. It is in a dark taupe velour with a sheared fur bordering the cape's hem;

A deep ivory chiffon gown with beaded bodice, owned by the dancer Isadora Duncan, its silhouette the high-waisted empire which shows throughout Poiret's clothes and sketches.

The tribute to Poiret is for reasons of fashion — and more, said Riley.

This is America's bicentennial year and since France was America's ally against Britain in the American revolution, a French designer exhibition seemed fitting.

Countess de Brantes, sister-in-law of French President Giscard d'Estaing, was to help open officially the Poiret exhibition at a gala, black tie vernissage. In addition, France's couture group, the Chambre Syndicale, is participating with famous names of today from Balmain to Venet, alongside Americans such as Frank Olive who has created hats of the Poiret era. Some of Poiret's hats also are used.

Riley said he personally thought Poiret was due the tribute also because " like the guy. He was a most vital, juicy, lavish man. A Renaissasce man in the true sense — designer, fabrics designer, painter, party giver, gourmet cook, even a cookbook author."

In a way Poiret's lavish existence was his undoing. He died in the 1940s, never having come back totally after the First World War, said Riley. "When he was out of mode, the bankers moved in."

CALORIE-CONSCIOUS COOKING

By Barbara Gibbons

With the strawberry season straight ahead, you'll want to start your collection of berry-good sweets and treats. They're such a favorite, it's easy to forget that strawberries are also one of the least fattening nutrition-rich foods there is.

A whole cupful of strawberries is only 55 calories, yet strawberries are high in valuable food fiber and vitamin C. Kids love them for their jewel-bright color and tangy sweet taste.

Today we preview the strawberry season with the simplest of snacks and sweets, all calorie-wise.

INSTANT PUDDING

1 and one-half cups ripe strawberries, hulled
1 cup skim milk, chilled
4-serving package instant strawberry pudding mix.

Whip strawberries and milk in covered blender. Then add pudding mix, cover and blend smooth. Spoon into four parfait glasses and chill until set. Garnish with additional berries if desired. 137 calories each.

STRAWBERRY GELATIN

1 cup cold water (about)
1 cup sliced ripe strawberries
1 cup bottled red unsweetened grape juice optional: honey, sugar or sugar substitute to taste
1 envelope plain gelatin.

Combine gelatin and cold water in a saucepan. (To the pan, add any overripe or crushed berries.) Wait one minute, then gently heat, stirring until all gelatin is dissolved. Remove from heat and stir in sweetener if desired. Stir in chilled grape juice. Refrigerate until syrupy. Stir in sliced berries. Spoon into a bowl or four dessert cups. Chill until set. Serves four, 62 calories each (without sugar).

SWISS YOGURT

5 or 6 very ripe berries
granulated sugar substitute to equal 2 teaspoons sugar
1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
a few drops of vanilla (optional).

With a fork, crush berries and sugar substitute together, then stir into chilled yogurt, along with a little vanilla if desired, only 150 calories instead of the 259 calories in sugar-sweetened "fruit" yogurt.

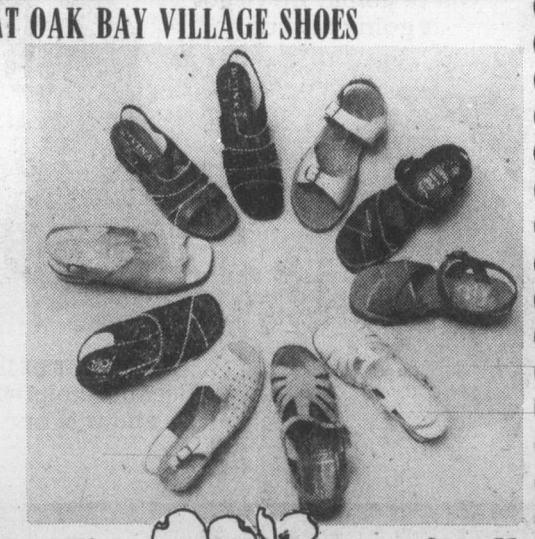

Berry Favorite Breakfast: one and one-half cups high-protein unsweetened cereal, one-half cup sliced fresh strawberries, three-fourth cup skim milk, sweetener to taste. Only 216 calories.

Berry Favorite Lunch: 1 cup 99 per cent fat-free cottage cheese, 4 tablespoons crushed juice-packed pineapple, one-half cup sliced fresh strawberries, few drops vanilla, sweetener to taste, 225 calories.

And, for the kids:

Berry Fondue: shake a pint of hulled fresh strawberries in 4 tablespoons brown sugar. Impale each berry on party toothpicks. Fill a small bowl with vanilla yogurt and surround it with "berries on a pick." The kids will know what to do! Serves four, 125 calories each.

Pink Milk: No chemical colors, no fake flavors! Fill a one-cup measure with ice cubes, then fill to the top with cold water. Put in blender container. Add one-third cup dry skim milk powder. Add 5 or 6 very ripe hulled berries sweetened with a little honey, and blend smeth. (May be if desired. 98 calories.

Pat's world titlist in carving ducks

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Five years ago at the Sportsmen's Show in Toronto Pat Godin got hooked on carving ducks.

Recently his devotion to his chosen craft got him crowned No. 1 carver, decorative duck category, in the World Championship Carving Competition at Salisbury, Md.

Pat came away from the event $1,700 richer—the amount the sponsors paid him for his winning pair of decoys, a drake and a hen. They were put in a museum with past winners of the competition.

"It's the biggest award in North America for decoy carving," said Pat, 23, whose handiwork is also displayed in the Museum of Natural History in Los Angeles.

Pat came to carving ducks by way of animal taxidermy which he has been doing for about eight years. The inspiration to carve decorative decoys came about five years ago at a Sportsmen's Show in Toronto.

Pat soon began winning competitions, first as a novice and amateur and then, last year, in the professional classes.

Earlier in the year he bested 350 entries at the Sportsmen's Show.

When not carving ducks, Pat studies fisheries and wildlife biology at University of Guelph and has nearly completed his degree.

He has managed to wangle a summer job this year which is taking him to the Delta Wild Fowl Research Station near Portage la Prairie, Man. He'll be working, of course, with wild fowl.

Being champion does not mean Pat is without further challenge. He has his eye on another carving competition for decorative full-bodied birds of prey—eagles, hawks and the like.

This year's winner in Maryland was a long-eared owl in a flying position with a mouse in its beak.

"It's quite a bit different. You have to carve different things like feet or whole wings."

Pat says his biggest difficulty with his craft is the painting part of it. He has never had art lessons, having taught himself how to carve.

He says he usually spends about 100 hours on each decoy, and sometimes more than 150 hours on a piece.

His early works were done in white pine but this tended to chip. A United States carver suggested he use basswood, a "soft" hardwood that is similar to pine.

"I haven't carved that many decoys because of the time I spend on them," says Pat.

Grandmother in the house more valuable than pills

LONDON (UPI) — A lot of family problems would be solved if parents just asked grandma to move in, according to an old-age specialist.

"The wisdom and experience of senior citizenhood has been progressively lost to the generations of the '50s, '60s and '70s," said Dr. Ivor Felstein in the doctors' newspaper Pulse.

A granny in the house is often more valuable than any pills or medical help in dealing with modern problems, he said.

Mothers of children under five are particularly affected by grandma's absence.

"This is just the group in which previous grandmother influence and aid was particularly strong — it countered stress," Felstein wrote.

Maltreatment of children by parents was "much more likely in the absence of grandmother," he said.

Troupe deals in madness

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Staff

They're mad. Really quite mad.

But don't expect to escape Codco's infectious zany outlook. The Newfoundland troupe, No. 2 of the Festival Habitat shows at The Belfry, steamrolls right through the sanest of souls.

This troupe deals in madness, not so much that of the political or commercial institutions which obsessed its sister company, The Mummers, but just plain everyday people. Unlike The Mummers — comparisons between the companies playing back to back are unavoidable — Codco isn't rooted firmly in the Newfoundland experience.

Certainly, some material deals specifically with its homebase of St. John's and the re-development of that city's core. Premier Moores tells reporters that the development will provide "hundreds of jobs for thousands of Newfoundlanders." Perhaps the inclusion of this material is as it should be, since the troupe is in B.C. for the Habitat conference on human settlement.

Much of the material seems to have been assembled without rhyme or reason other than its potential for outrageousness. The choice, according to one cast member, is anything that "made us laugh during rehearsals."

Codco's most serious failing is that few of its sketches would survive in the telling. The two-headed doctor will be remembered, or the commercial actor unable to name his product without being sick, but the details of the skits just won't stick.

Too often the sketches seem born of a "what if . . ." situation but are not tightly developed and allowed to die on the vine. It is the sprinkling of good one-liners that keeps the audience atwitter throughout.

Codco is at its best when shafting the CBC for either its variety shows — singers looking suspiciously like the Irish Rovers except these guys met at a Belfast gay lib meeting — or travelogues — an outdoors husband and wife team track down a species of single scalpel nuns.

And to show that nothing is sacred, Codco sends up Toronto's Theatre Passe Muraille, number three in The Belfry's Habitat shows, and every other earnest alternate theatre company.

Andy Jones, Maisie Rillie from Codco

The success of Codco's brand of theatre rises and falls on its company members' ability to capture and twist the foibles of those around them. At times, Codco is inspired, but most of the time it succeeds in the manner of the class cut up or the better than average school revue.

There's plenty of room for growth in this company in both style and content. Codco plays through Thursday.

Discover The National Capital Region
There's so much to go for in Ottawa, Hull and the surrounding areas.

Within the National Capital Region you can not only experience the special ambience of our two cultures in the cities of Ottawa and Hull, but explore the beautifully planned and maintained parklands and wooded stretches of Gatineau Park, the Gatineau Valley and the Outaouais district generally.

Ottawa and Hull... There's so much to enjoy.

Dominated by the gothic-style Parliament Buildings and the Peace Tower, Ottawa is one of the most gracious and rewarding cities in Canada. Impressive modern buildings blend harmoniously with the splendid showcases of the past. The wide variety of museums house historic exhibits catering to every taste. Theatres and galleries present a kaleidoscope of culture — films, plays, ballet, experimental theatre; popular, modern and classical music; folk singing and dancing. Intriguing boutiques and great stores are a shopper's dream.

Gourmet restaurants feature dishes from almost every part of the globe; take a cruise on the Ottawa River in summer, or a trip on the lovely Rideau Canal. Or just stroll through Ottawa's parks and gardens — they're a constant delight.

Special Interest

The National Gallery. Famous collection of Old Masters and the Canadian Group of Seven. Important modern works.
The National Museum of Science and Technology. A special favourite for connoisseurs of antique trains.
The National Aeronautical Collection. Relive Canada's participation in the history of flight.
The National Arts Centre. Impressive modern centre for the Performing Arts. International star attractions. Restaurants. Bars.
The National Library. Not just for bookworms.
The National Museum of Natural Sciences. See one of the best displays of dinosaurs in North America.
Canadian War Museum. Fascinating mementoes of Canada's participation.
The Parliament Buildings. Conducted tours through the Chambers.
The Museum of Man. The finest collection of Canadian Indian art in the world.
Public Archives. Check out almost anything — reputedly one of the most comprehensive and definitive in the world.
The Royal Canadian Mint. Follow the coinage process from start to finish.

General Sightseeing

Watch Changing the Guard daily at 10 a.m. during the summer on Parliament Hill. Take a cruise along the Ottawa River. Visit the Byward Market. Wander along the Sparks Street Mall window shopping or people-gazing. Visit Mackenzie King's former country estate, Kingsmere, Gatineau Park. Watch the sentries on guard at Rideau Hall — but don't expect them to chat.

Gatineau Park, The Gatineau Valley, The Outaouais District... There's so much to explore

The National Capital Region covers some of the most beautiful scenery in Canada and contains some 1,800 square miles of Eastern Ontario and Western Québec farmlands and forests, lakes and mountains, beaches, parks and excellent campgrounds.

The planners have taken great care to blend roads and parking areas into the natural surroundings and the result is an unspoiled panorama of great beauty and natural variety.

This is the area to roam at will, to take your family for memorable days of picnics and fishing in the summer months and skiing, skating, cross-country skiing in the winter along beautiful, uncrowded winding trails. A bus tour is a pleasant way to enjoy it.

Important Information For Visitors

Ask your travel agent or representatives of motorcoach lines, airlines or railways for details of "all-inclusive" packages or other tours available. Choose from one or two-day excursions to one or two-week vacations offering a wide variety of itineraries, transport and accommodation. Or include the NCR as a side trip if your vacation plans place you in the vicinity.

For up-to-date information on current exhibitions and theatre or concert performances, consult the latest issue of "What's On In Ottawa", available through tourist information centres and Ottawa hotels, motels and restaurants.

Chilly note for bowlers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Air conditioning at the suburban bowling alley was the only chilly note as more than 100 nudists from throughout Southern California gathered for a night of bowling in the buff.

"Can you picture it? One hundred and three people wearing nothing except bowling shoes? For nudists, it was like somebody going to the moon," said the social secretary of the Sun Dial Nudist Club which sponsored the evening.

He said the group rented the entire bowling alley for the evening and hired fully clothed security guards to keep out the press and the general public.

Police dropped by to check out the event, which drew about 20 bare-skinned spectators in addition to contestants.

Injuries light during panic

ATLANTA (AP) — Seventeen persons were hurt, none seriously, during a jazz festival at Atlanta Stadium when thousands fled in panic after someone yelled, "Shoot," police said.

Some members of the crowd of 40,000 apparently thought they were threatened by a gun or a bomb, officials said.

The Atlanta public safety commissioner escaped injury when part of the crowd stormed past him in a tunnel.

Flood dike collapses

MANILA, the Philippines (UPI) — Torrential rains in the aftermath of Typhoon Olga collapsed a major flood control dike Tuesday, sending floodwaters to roof level. Authorities ordered the evacuation of more than 80,000 persons.

$800,000 case in mail service

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two postal workers at Kennedy Airport have been accused of stealing parcels worth $800,000 in what authorities called the largest embezzlement in U.S. Postal Service history.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden notes

The old saying, "Out of sight, out of mind," is never more true than when it is applied to our spring flowering bulbs. From the time the young green shoots first come poking their noses through the soil surface to the glorious floral festival of blossoming time, we fuss over them, cultivate them, give them every attention.

But after flowering, we tend to lose interest and allow the plants to fend for themselves. Yet this is the very time in the life cycle of the bulbous plants when care and feeding are really necessary.

You see, the underground bulb can be looked upon as the plant's bank account, and up to flowering time, the plant is drawing upon this account. There isn't very much we can do during this period to help your plants — they are quite independent of you, and quite solvent, although spending freely.

After flowering, the first thing we must do is put a stop to further spending by deadheading the plants — by snipping off all faded flower heads before they can start making seeds, for the manufacture of useless, unwanted seeds is just a sheer waste of the bulb's already depleted resources.

At this point, with the plant's bank account almost exhausted, it is necessary to make regular deposits all through the early summer in order that the bulbs go into their dormant period with a comfortable nest egg to meet the expenses of next spring's flowers.

Fifty years ago, gardeners used a mixture of bone meal and wood ashes to make an excellent and long-lasting food for bulbs. Unfortunately, the price of bone meal has gone sky high and wood ashes are no longer freely available. There is, however, a fertilizer called Green Valley Lawn and Bulb Food with a formula of 3-15-6, and this makes a highly satisfactory substitute for the old-time mixture. Dig this in at label rates when making up permanent beds for spring-flowering bulbs, and sprinkle on the surface where bulbs are naturalized in grass.

Incidentally, the grass in which bulbs are naturalized should never be cut down until the bulb foliage has died down naturally. If the leaves are cut while still green, the flowers will become smaller and scrubbier year by year, and the stems shorter, until the whole plantation has to be dug up, scrapped and renewed.

Bulbs in flower beds which have to be moved out to make room for bedding plants should be transplanted to rows in the vegetable garden, taking up each plant with a good ball of soil around the bulb's roots and making the transfer with as little disturbance of the roots as possible.

Water them in as you plant them, using a drop or two of vitamin B-1 in the water, and do everything in your power to keep the leaves green and functioning as late into the summer as possible. If the foliage turns color within a few days of transplanting, the bulbs are not likely to put up much of a display next year.

Both in grass and in permanent borders, where the bulbs do not need to be moved, again they should be kept growing as late into the season as possible, giving plenty of water as long as the foliage remains a good green color. As soon as the color starts to fade, though, the bulbs will benefit by a good dry baking in the sun.

Ideally, the bulbs should have no more water all summer, as such dry conditions produce a state of complete dormancy, and such a deep sleep has wonderful recuperative powers.

This is difficult to achieve, though, as the other plants in the beds require their quota of moisture. Your best bet is to water the plants individually rather than by an overall soaking of the bed. This is, as I said, an ideal state of affairs and not absolutely necessary for the production of good bulb flowers.

WASHINGTON — Spiro Agnew, the fiction writer, is now flacking his book around the country. Mr. Agnew refuses to talk about his criminal activities as vice president because, he says, "I'm saving those for my memoirs."

It is a very clever ploy, but law enforcement officials all over the country are very concerned that, because of Mr. Agnew's policy, it is going to be harder than ever to get confessions out of people arrested for committing crimes.

They are predicting that many suspects will follow the Agnew line.

Louie the Lug has just been brought in for questioning after six members of the Cinecittt mob were mowed down in a garage on Mother's Day. Louie was arrested as he was trying to pay his parking ticket in the garage with a smoking machine gun.

"Okay, Louie," the detective says. "You might as well make it easy on yourself and tell us what happened."

"I'm sorry, but I'm saving all that for my memoirs."

"Look, Louie, we have an open-and-shut case. You better talk or we're going to throw the book at you."

"Speaking of books, I've just completed a novel that I think you might be interested in. It's about a hit man for a mob who gest caught up in a Zionist conspiracy and falls in love with his secretary."

"We're not interested in your novel, Louie. We want to know about the Mother's Day massacre in the Deep Throat Garage."

Louis continues, "The hit man hates the liberal press that is always writing nasty stories about him so he decides to steal an atomic bomb and blow up the Washington Post. The novel has a lot of sex in it."

"Louie, we're not interested in your blankety-blank novel. We want to know who gave you the contract on the Cinecitta mob."

"I'm sorry, but my editor at Playboy Press said I should save that for my book. I assure you, gentlemen, when it is printed it will be an entirely different story than the one that has been printed in the yellow press."

"Louie, the ballistics experts' report says that every bullet found in the bodies of the Cinecitta mob came from the machine gun you were holding in your hand."

"Gentlemen, I didn't come here to talk about that. My understanding, when you arrested me, was that we would discuss my novel. I have a scene in it where Beldon has been kidnapped by the United Jewish Appeal and they won't let him go unless he buys $1 million in Israel War Bonds."

"Look, you creep," the detective says, "we couldn't care less about your novel. Are you going to tell us what happened in the garage or do you want us to beat the living daylights out of you?"

"I have no intention of telling you anything. If you'd like to bid on the true story of the massacre, I suggest you contact my literary agent."

"Louie, this is your last chance. You tell us or else."

"Threats will get you nowhere, gentlemen. I wouldn't tell Barbara Walters on the Today show what happened, so why should I tell you?"

Sydney Harris

Herewith another clutch of Potted Biographies, delineating the more lurid aspects of famous persons' lives, but omitting the central cause of their fame. Half right is a respectable score.

1. Son of candlemaker, he studied for the ministry but became a merchant, traveling on the continent, where he was once captured by Algerian pirates near Holland. He held minor political positions under four monarchs, and was sentenced three times to stand in the pillory and to prison until his fines were paid off. He died in hiding at the age of 71 because of an old debt he had never paid off.

2. His father was a poor clergyman who died when the son was nine. Adopted by a rich uncle, he was sent to Harvard, and while he was still in his 20s his uncle died and he inherited the largest fortune amassed in New England. He wore lavender suits, rode in bright yellow coaches, loved dancing, card parties and wine. He was the greatest smuggler on the continent, and John Adams called him "a leaky vessel" who betrayed state secrets.

3. Although born of Dutch Jewish parentage, she was brought up in a Catholic convent. At an early age she tried a career in musical burlesque, but failed because she could not sing in tune. During the Franco-Prussian war, she served as an ambulance nurse. For relaxation, she would rest in a coffin at home, despite her wooden leg.

4. Son of a watchmaker, he was an infant when his mother died. Brought up by an aunt, he left school at 12 and fled home at 16, becoming a lackey, living off rich older women he made his mistresses. Through one, he was named secretary to the drunken French ambassador to Venice. He lived the last 20 years of his life with an illiterate, ugly and promiscuous hotel maid who bore him five children, all of whom he left at the foundling hospital. His last years were spent in Paris in wretched poverty, where he finally went insane from a persecution complex.

5. Born in Baden, Germany, son of a butcher, he emigrated to London at 16, to join his brother, then joined another brother in New York, where he worked as a butcher, baker's boy, furrier's clerk, and peddler. After his marriage, he was so poor he had to open a music shop in his mother-in-law's house. He died so rich that his only son became known as "the landlord of New York."

6. Born illegitimate, he was a military engineer, anticipating the modern tank. He had a notion of the principle of inertia before Galileo, speculated on the circulation of the blood a century before Harvey and theorized about earth-changes in geology long before Hutton. None of this was made known to his contemporaries, who venerated him for quite different reasons.

WASHINGTON — "It's like the lst days of Phnom Penh. When the Khmer Rouge were at the gates," said the old State Department hand, staring moodily into his Pimm's cup. "What gets you is the fear of the unknown."

"I heard a rumor today," said an aging HEW assistant director, "that when the city finally falls, he's going to march us all out into the countryside and force us to grow peanuts."

Washington is already a defeated city. It's last great hope was Hubert Humphrey. The end came when that gallant warrior, who had long pledged not to engage in any primary battles, held a major press conference to announce he would not engage in any primary battles.

Everyone here said that showed what a gallant warrior Mr. Humphrey was. But they couldn't help being disappointed and afraid. For now all that stands between this capital of the civilized Establishment and the triumphant Georgian hordes of Jimmy Carter are the untested young volunteers of Jerry Brown and the thin red line of Mo Udall's progressives (ne Liberals).

Neither is given a prayer. "It's a shame," said one grizzled Washington combat veteran, "to send kids like that out in crates like those."

The name of Jerry Ford is mentioned occasionally. About once a week. "Maybe if we formed a Democrats for Ford Committee . . ." suggested one prominent democrat listlessly.

But for the most part this once gay capital has all but given up hope. A few talk of fleeing to seek sanctuary in the outside country. But where would these refugees find people who spoke their language? And what would they do? For their years in Washington have left them unprepared for productive work.

The majority have fallen into a torpor, merely going through the motions of their daily routines knowing the end is in sight. Some are already planning to make accommodations with the enemy.

'There must be some damned way to make okra palatable," said a Georgetown hostess. And up on Capital Hill, Senator Hathaway of Maine was putting together a 'Stop Humphrey Drive."

Didn't the senator mean a Stop Carter Drive? "What do you think I am, crazy?" said Mr. Hathaway, blanching. "Besides, we southerners have to stick together."

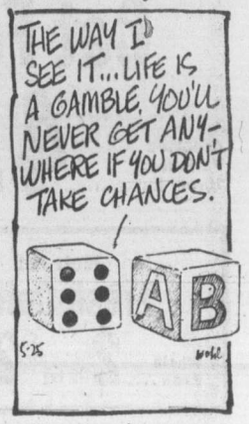

But Mr. Hathaway was from Maine.

"Southern Maine," said Mr. Hathaway with dignity, "you all."

Yet even as Washington prepares for the end there are little bands of activists burying caches of folders, staplers and mutilators, secretly stockpiling paper clips and triplicates, and even preparing to operate clandestine Xerox machines.

And one feels that the new conquerors will have no better luck than the old in stamping out this resistance. Somehow, the spirit of Washington will live forever.

Short skirts, stockings back

MANCHESTER (CP) — British women buy more panty-hose than any other women in the world — about 30 pairs a year, says a leading manufacturer of panty-hose and stockings.

"This is the result of competition, overproduction and greatly improved techniques," said Brian McMeekin, managing director of Pretty Polly, the second-biggest manufacturer in Britain.

"We produce about three million pairs of panty-hose and stockings a week at highly competitive prices in the world market. Some of our prices haven't gone up for years."

Courtaulds, another manufacturer, claim to produce more than Pretty Polly — almost 3½ million a year — and they are highly competitive too.

McMeekin said British women buy more panty-hose than any other women because they like to show off their legs in skirts — ahead of fashion in other countries, where women are still wearing slacks.

Panty-hose and stockings come in four sizes, among them a one-size model designed to give a tolerable fit to 75 per cent of the market. This embraces women with hips measuring from 36 to 42 inches, though many manufacturers are prepared to stretch these limits to between 30 and 50.

Some four out of five pairs of panty-hose are in light, medium or dark tan. The rest of the market covers every conceivable shade. The dearest, at prices over £2 ($3.60), are usually imported and make up less than 2 per cent of the market.

McMeekin said stockings account for only about 10 per cent of the total British sales of 500 million pairs of panty-hose and stockings a year. But stocking sales are increasing.

Black stockings represent only about one pair in 10 of the stocking market and are usually bought for evening wear. Women with expensive tastes wear a weight of 15 denier, the finest, and sometimes only once because they run easily.

"Twenty denier are something special," said McMeekin, "30 denier, unglamorously known as service weight, are for everyday wear, and 45 denier are the workhorses."

Campus break through excites principal

THE PAS, Man. (CP) — "What I find most exciting about this college is that it's always breaking out of the confines of its concrete campus and reaching out to communities of the north," says Lois Britton, Keewatin Community College's new principal.

"At Keewatin we are really bursting at the seams," she said. "There are 525 students on campus taking full-time courses and 375 in evening classes."

But off campus, more than 1,000 students are taking satellite evening and adult courses in 30 communities from Gran Rapids and Easterville in the southern part of the region to Pukatawagan and Churchill in the north.

The Pas, in the southern section of the region, is 450 miles northwest of Winnipeg.

The college gives a miner's apprenticeship course in Thompson and in Flin Flon, aided by the participation of all northern Manitoba mining companies and unions.

A small motor maintenance and repair course, tailored for fishermen, trappers and others living in remote communities, is given at Cranberry Portage.

At the community level, Ms. Britton said, the college works through local co-ordinators who are able to interpret what the people want and are often able to find local people qualified to teach the courses.

Ms. Britton said extending the college to the community is more important than adding new buildings.

"Right now we're working on our budget and there is no way we will put more money in concrete. The only way we can expand is cut the whole northern community.

"A community college is different from a university or any other post-secondary institution where you can more or less set your own course. Here you are responsible to governments. In a sense you are a training arm of government."

At Keewatin flexibility is necessary since many of the students are native people faced with the task of adjusting to different styles of life.

Audio-visual aids reduce psychiatric clinic load

MONTREAL (CP) — The need to reduce overcrowding in a psychiatric outpatient clinic has given rise to a new method of training neurotic patients using audio-visual aids and non-psychiatrists.

Called short-term dynamic psychotherapy, the method is credited to Dr. Habib Davanloo, director of external services in psychiatry at Montreal General Hospital. A recent symposium hailed the Davanloo approach as revolutionary.

Intended to cut the period of treatment and so alleviate overcrowding at the clinic, the method calls for patients to be televised in sessions with therapists. Experimental groups of therapists—which may include psychiatric nurses, psychologists, or family practitioners—then discuss the results of the sessions.

Davanloo estimates that the average number of sessions needed is 25. With traditional methods, patients have been in psychotherapy for as long as five or six years.

Prospective patients are screened to determine whether short-term psychotherapy can be used on them. No medications are used during the sessions.

"The severity of the illness is not the issue," Davanloo said. "However, patients cannot be psychotic. They must be motivated and believe their problems stem from psychological difficulties within themselves."

With this treatment the area of conflict is immediately put into focus, and the tendency on the part of the patient to avoid the problem is eliminated.

"We try to establish a therapeutic alliance," said the doctor. "Our therapists confront and challenge the patients—force them to bring the problem out into the open and face it.

"If they sit there expecting the therapists to give them all the answers, they're mistaken. Therapy is a two-way street."

He said the treatment works for about 25 to 30 per cent of the psychiatric population at the hospital.

"We like to have feedback," Davanloo said, adding that there is a follow-up period of five years after treatment is completed.

All results are sent to Harvard University in the United States and Tavistock Clinic in London for proof and verification in medical research.

"This is no miracle cure and it works for a limited number of people," Davanloo said. "But it has helped to break the cycle of long-term psychotherapeutic treatment —and the results have been impressive."

Funerals her business

FERGUS, Ont. (CP) — Women's liberation was unheard of 20 years ago when Mary Thomson blazed a trail in the all-male world of morticians.

"There was no need for women's lib," said Miss Thomson. "I was accepted as an equal. As a matter of fact, I wonder if women today would accept a man into their world as readily as the undertakers did in my case."

It was a desire to keep a long-established funeral business in the family that sent Miss Thomson to the Canadian School of Embalmers in 1954. She emerged a full-fledged mortician in 1956, the only girl in the class.

Today women undertakers are not uncommon. Nearby Elmira has two but Miss Thomson said she believes she is the only woman owner of an undertaking business in Canada.

The John Thomson and Sons Funeral Home which she operates was established 104 years ago by her great-grandfather. It was passed down to her grandfather then to her father.

"I had no brothers," Miss Thomson said. "It was either taking over the business myself or handing it over to someone else. I decided to carry on."

Miss Thomson is one of the busiest undertakers in the area. She never leaves the community for more than a day. "I never know when I will be called."

Some officials at airports and railway stations still do a double-take when they see the matronly looking woman drive up in her station wagon to collect a body but the inhabitants of Fergus, a town of 5,000, have long become accustomed to the woman in her neat black suit directing funerals at churches.

Despite her 20 years as an undertaker, Miss Thomson cannot take for granted the grief of bereaved families

"My heart goes out to them. In a small community like this you know everyone. You can't remain impersonal."

Tremblor in Asia like war

MOSCOW (UPI) — Pravda has compared the damage caused by an earthquake that devastated the central Asian town of Gazli to the ravages of wartime bombing.

The newspaper said only six persons died in the temblor and credited an April 8 earthquake with possibly preventing further loss of life.

It said most of the population was living in tents and temporary homes following the earlier earthquake.

The newspaper said two persons in Gazli died in the earthquake itself, and four others — including three women — died "carrying out their duties" on the two natural gas pipelines of which Gazli is the originating point.

Pravda did not say how they died, but it seemed likely they perished in the fires which raged as gas lines ruptured.

How many persons were killed by the earlier temblor was not reported, nor did Pravda give a total death count for last week's quake, which affected three central Asian republics.

The newspaper praised what it called the heroism of workers who raced to close compressors and spin stop-valves even as the ground jolted and flames burst skyward.

"During the war I saw the destruction caused by aerial bombardment and Gazli was just like that," Pravda quoted the minister of gas production, S. A. Orudzhev, as saying.

If you care about what you see on TV in Greater Victoria, take the time today to attend the Canadian Radio-TV and Telecommunications Commission hearing at the Empress or watch it on Cable 10, which has it listed to start at 9 a.m. (while the CRTC tells me it's 9:30).

This isn't the Greater Victoria cable licence hearing, which must await the outcome of the Capital Cable Co-op's court case against the CRTC and Victoria Cablevision. It's about rate increases and mid-band viewing, and one ground rule only should be made clear.

The CRTC's policies mean we'll have mid-band viewing (with converters if we want) regardless of who has the licence. Today's hearing, therefore, is only about cable rates on the face of it. But I suspect all sides will get in some licks for the licence hearing later.

Bureau of Useless Information: Saturday's answer—Ransom Eli Olds, who lived from 1864 to 1950, gave his name to two ears and I supplied you with one, the Oldsmobile. The other was the Reo, from the initials, and if you've never heard of the Reo, you don't do crossword puzzles.

Today's question—Remember Ann Sheridan, the Oomph Girl? Name her leading man in Dodge City, Good Sam, I Was a Male War Bride, Kings' Row and They Drive by Night with two each for the last two. Five of seven is passing; the answers Thursday.

"It's a rerun of some technical difficulties, but we've already seen it."

Wednesday highlights

• 9:00 a.m.—Live broadcasts all day of the Canadian Radio-TV Commission hearings on Victoria Cablevision's application for mid-band viewing and rate increases, with opposition by the Capital Cable Co-op. Leading actors should include Len Charlish, Herschel Hardin and Peter Pollen. Cable 10 will not broadcast this evening—10.

4:30 p.m.—Baseball, Montreal at Philadelphia—2, 6.

7:00—PBS previews Vancouver's Habitat conference—9.

8:00—CBS shows a plane-down pilot which didn't make the fall schedule, Stranded, with Kevin Dobson of Kojak—7, 12.

9:00—KING repeats its essay on over-eating—5.

9:00—PBS Great Performance features a Florida company in The Patriots, with Thomas Jefferson vs. Alexander Himilton—9.

Wednesday movies

12:45 noon—The Lost Man (poorish 1969 trouble-black drama), Sidney Poitier. No, Matilda, it has nothing to do with the CRTC or today's Victoria hearings, nor even with the average viewer—8.

1:00 p.m.—Fear Strikes Out (only fair 1957 "true" baseball drama). Tony Perkins as Jimmy Piersall, Karl Malden as his father; which reminds me, the reporter's god is not Karl Marx but Karl Malden because he's nosy—11.

3:30—Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte (1965 Bette Davis chiller, conclusion). Ham can be fun, even without rye—5.

9:00—Dynasty (1975 James Michener family epic), Stacy Keach, Sarah Miles. I missed it first time around; was it any good?—8.

9:00—There's No Business Like Show Business (harmless 1954 musical), Monroe, Merman, Gaynor, many more. Tell that to the CRTC—11.

11:30—Playmates (missable 1972 romanticomedy), Alan Alda, Barbara Feldon, Connie Stevens, Doug McClure. The old Kay Kyser song Playmates was better than this and it wasn't much—4.

11:30—Female Artillery (silly 1973 western fantasy), Dennis Weaver, Ida Lupino, other victims. Ever realize that the First War German gun Big Bertha ended that name for girls?—12.

12:00—murder, He Says (dated, dull 1945 mystery-comedy), Fred MacMurray. The old Betty Hutton song was bad and it fits—2.

12:00—Mr. and Mrs. Bo Jo Jones (so-so 1971 romantic stuff), Desi Arnaz, Jr., Chris Norris. Makes 1971 seem like eons ago—6.

12:00—Deadlier Than the Male (mostly awful 1967 cheap Bond), Richard Johnson, Elke Sommer. Watch this and you'll watch anything—8.

12:30 a.m.—The Running Man (1963 swindle suspenser, fair at best), Laurence Harvey, Lee Remick, Alan Bates. As of now, everybody can hit the sack except hurricane fans—7.

2:00—Hurricane (not bad 1974 TV epic), Jessica Walter, Martin Milner, scads more. Only the storm scenes are any good—6.

2:05—The Last Blitzkrieg (sub-par 1959 war adventure). Van Johnson leads Nazis making like Americans, or is it vice versa?—8.

2:30—Hurricane (quite good 1937 Hollywood hokum), Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor, Raymond Massey. Actually, it's bad until the terrific storm at the end and it's faked compared to the 1974 reality—7.

Wednesday radio

9:00 p.m.—Concern previews Habitat—CBU (690).

9:00—The CBC looks at Russian-American composer, conductor and writer Nicholas Slonimsky—CBU-FM (105.7).

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. Off and again, a leaf blown
by the wind

Falls on the broad ocean
and sinks below,

'Tis never lost; where'er it
fate may blow,

The imprint of its settling's
left behind,

And so with every life,
whate'er its kind,

It shapes itself a place,
'tis destined so,

If hence in peace or turmoil
it should go,

Its influence ever lives,
as 'twas designed.

398-A CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep appreciation to the nurses and helpers of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, for their great consideration and kindness to my beloved wife and our mother, during her recent fatal illness, and a special thanks to Doctors H. P. Marshall and R. N. Young, H. E. Draper and family.

309 IN MEMORIAMS

OUR SON, DAVID KNIGHT—
The shades lengthen, evening comes
The busy world is hushed,
The fever of life is over,
And our work is done.
Then Lord, grant him safe lodging
And peace at last in Jesus name.
From his loving family,
WE LOVED HIM.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Sooke, Royal Oak top tournaments

Alden Govenlock's one-out, bases-empty home run in the ninth inning lifted Sooke Merchants to the championship Monday in the rain-shortened Stuffy McGinnis men's softball tournament.

Merchants became the only undefeated team of the six-team tournament when Govenlock's homer gave them a 5-4 win over Ingraham Hotel at Central Park.

The remaining two games of the round-robin tournament were cancelled and the officials awarded final placings. Ingraham was second (4-1), followed by Juan de Fuca Builders (2-2), Mikes Sports Shop (1-3), Matthews Heating (1-3) and Nanaimo Longhouse (1-4).

A similar situation at Port Alberni resulted in Royal Oak Sporting Goods of the Stuffy McGinnis League being declared winners of a seven-team tournament.

Royal Oak's defeated Nanaimo A and B Construction, 3-0, and Quality Speed of Port Alberni, 10-3, and gained the title by edging Port Alberni Beauforts, 2-1.

Meanwhile, the Victoria League won three of four exhibition senior women's matches at Hyacinth Park. CJVI Vicettes thumped Duncan, 19-2, London Boxing Club blanked Duncan, 12-0, and Stockers North Americans split a doubleheader with Nanaimo Cedarettes dropping the opener, 6-3, but rebounding to score a 10-9 victory.

Trophy shared

Richmond and a combined Albion-Nanaimo entry were named co-winners of the Chris Rowe Shield when rain halted Monday's final match of the eight-team, single-knockout cricket tournament at Beacon Hill Park.

Each team will get the trophy for six months.

Richmond reached the final with a win over acombined Alcos-Oak Bay team while Albion-Nanaimo defeated Comox in the other semi-final.

Hunters extend streak

Saanich E. J. Hunters extended their unbeaten string to five games and took over first-place in the Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League Tuesday.

Greg McInnes scored three goals and added two assists as Saanich downed winless Juan de Fuca Whalers, 18-8, at George Pearkes Arena and moved one point ahead of Esquimalt Buccaneers, who dropped an 18-13 decision to Nanaimo Timbermen at Fuller Lake Arena.

Charlie Randall scored six goals and Jim Ferguson and Geordie Robertson scored four goals each for Nanaimo while Geoff Whitney-Griffiths and Bobby Darin scored three goals ahead of Esquimalt.

Victoria Strathcona Stingers picked up their first win of the season Monday, edging the Whalers, 11-10, at Juan de Fuca Arena.

West Indian bowlers mow down batters

LONDON (Reuter) — The West Indian fast bowlers gave England another frightening preview of what to expect in next week's first cricket test when they mowed down MCC batting at Lord's on Tuesday.

As in the first innings, Michael Holding, Andy Roberts and Vanburn Holder were too quick for the MCC batsmen and the West Indians won by 219 runs for their third successive victory. Set 303 to win in 3½ hours, MCC could only muster 83, with 21 extras the major contribution.

Scores: West Indians 251 for nine declared and 248 for three declared. MCC 197 and 83.

Brazil sneaks by England

Roberto blasted in a 10-yard shot from the right side with 2½ minutes to play to give Brazil a 1-0 weekend victory over England in the first game of the American Bicentennial Soccer Cup series at Los Angeles. The 22-year-old Roberto, who entered the game at half-time, took a pass from Gil and shot the ball past a diving English goalkeeper Ray Clemence.

It was the sixth victory for Brazil's National team over England in nine games. Two games ended in ties, and all of them have been low scoring. And the teams appeared as evently matched as they were in 1970, when Brazil defeated England 1-0 in a World Cup semi-final game in Guadalajara.

In a cup game at Washington, Italy, running smoothly fro mstart to finish, trimmed Team America, 4-0.

Trailer court stays empty

By NEVILLE SHANKS
Colonist Correspondent

PORT HARDY — While close to 100 trailer owners search desperately for a place to park their homes, a 137-pad trailer court sits empty, and it has sat that way for six months.

The reason: no one can afford the $150 a month rent demanded by the owner — the provincial government.

The rental figure is based on the cost of developing the pads, which was between $15,000 and $16,000 each.

"That's simply ridiculous," said deputy mayor Brian Welchman. "We asked Housing Minister Hugh Curtis some time ago to hold an inquiry into the matter, and at our last council meeting we got word that he had asked his comptroller general to undertake it. It's going on now."

The trailer court is built on land sold by the municipality to the housing department for $550 an acre. The department was responsible for its construction, with Underwood, McLellan and Associates acting as engineers, and Standard General Construction as general contractor.

The original estimate for the job, which was begun two years ago, was $1.1 million. Last summer this was raised to $1.6 million. But the final cost turned out to be $2.2 million.

As a contrast, a 100-pad trailer court, built by a local contractor for Utah Mines Ltd., was started on adjoining property at about the same time as the provincial project. It was finished nine months sooner at an average cost of less than $9,000 a pad.

Rent there is $86 a month, and the court was filled as soon as it was finished. In another part of the municipality a privately owned, 100-pad court charges a rental of $75 a month, half the province's demand.

"The province offered to sell some of its pads for about $3,000 below cost," Welchman said, "but that can't be done under our bylaws. The services are excellent, there's no complaint on that score, but it's laid out as a rental trailer court.

"For instance, the roads are only 33 feet wide, instead of 60 feet as required in a residential subdivision, and the 4,000 square foot lots are far below the minimum size for individual building lots."

Meanwhile, as municipal officials ponder the financial fiasco, they are faced with a continuing demand for trailer space. More than 30 families who have been living in a trailer court maintained by MacMillan Bloedel were given until May 1 to move, as the company develops the area into a housing subdivision. They are still there because there is nowhere else to go.

McClelland expands cancer facilities

The provincial government has approved a $15-million expansion project for facilities of the cancer control agency of B.C. in Vancouver, says Health Minister Robert McClelland.

Approval has been given to increase the number of acute beds to 100 and begin planning support treatment and service areas, ambulatory care, and some educational and research facilities.

The minister said it was decided to expand the existing facilities at Heather Street and 10th Avenue to save money and also because of the centre's location near Vancouver General Hospital.

Concorde can use Gander

HALIFAX (CP) — The French-made supersonic Concorde plane will be allowed alternate landing privileges at Halifax and the British-made Concorde will use Gander, Nfld., as an alternate landing field, an Air Canada official said Tuesday.

The supersonic aircraft will land at the Canadian airfields only if weather prevents them from landing at Dulles International Airport in Washington, D.C.

The decisions on the alternate landing sites for the Concordes were reached at meetings here May 10 and May 17 between representatives from both airlines and Canadian transport officials.

B.C. pledges 12,000 new jobs

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The co-ordinator of the Provincial Rehabilitation and Employment Program (P.R.E.P.) says he intends to find 12,000 jobs in the next three months.

Ron Stew, former job finder in the municipality of Surrey, made the statement Tuesday when Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm unveiled his new job-finding program.

The minister isn't as optimistic as Stew, but says "Whatever jobs we find, whatever we come up with, will help."

Promised months ago, the job-finding program will be administered by a staff of 50 who will seek jobs as well as make referrals for employable welfare recipients.

The program will cost an estimated $700,000 a year on a 50-50 shared basis with the federal government.

Vander Zalm said it was estimated there were 24,000 people on welfare who could be working. Stew said half of those would be working three months after the program gets going.

Welfare recipients refusing work found for them by P.R.E.P. will automatically be removed from the welfare rolls.

"If there's a job available, the recipient of welfare will be expected to take it, whatever his previous training," Vander Zalm said." If it's a choice between welfare or work, he will have to take the job."

The same rule will apply if the job offered is in a community other than the community in which the welfare recipient resides.

"We shall have to apply careful reason in that field," Vander Zalm said. "Obviously if the recipient is a married man with a family and roots in the community, we won't force him to move. But generally speaking, the recipient will go where the work is or lose his welfare payments."

The minister said the 24,000 employable recipients were costing the provincial taxpayer $250,000 a day or $35,000 an hour. "We have to reduce that expenditure and finding jobs is one way of doing it," he said.

He admitted that most of the jobs he expects to find would be in the low-paying category or at the minimum wage level.

Asked what would happen if a trained technician on welfare, unable to find work in his own trade, was offered a low paying job as a strawberry picker, Vander Zalm said. "Well that's an extreme example, but basically if there's work available he will be expected to take it even though it's lower paying than his own trade."

Part of the new program promises a stepping up of apprenticeship training programs but Vander Zalm said he had only had preliminary discussions with trade unions sponsoring such programs.

Vander Zalm said another aspect of his job finding program would be a dial-a-worker project which he hoped would be by local organizations like the Chamber of Commerce.

"The telephone system will allow local employers to call into a pool of workers for short term or part-time employment," Vander Zalm said.

As in other aspects of the program, welfare recipients refusing to take the temporary work will lose their welfare benefits.

Manpower has promised to work in close co-operation with the provincial government by making an unstated percentage of current jobs available to P.R.E.P.

Neither Vander Zalm nor his aides appeared to know how the new program would affect the estimated 100,000 B.C. workers at present unemployed and drawing Unemployment Insurance payments.

Property tax probe ordered to report

The commission of inquiry on property assessment and taxation has been asked to submit its final report to the provincial government by the end of July.

The commission was appointed in April, 1975, and has been conducting public hearings throughout the province since then.

"It has completed all of its scheduled public hearings now," says Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy. "I feel that in the interests of seeking an early solution to the problems under consideration it should submit its report at the earliest possible date."

Robert McMath of Vancouver is chairman. The commission was set up by the former New Democratic Party administration to review various aspects of assessment and real property taxation procedures.

Old plays favorites with trouper couple

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — For the second time in 25 years Hume Cronyn will play in London, Ont., where he was born, and this time he won't get caught with his pants down.

In 1951, he and his English-born wife Jessica Tandy appeared at London's Grand Theatre while touring in The Fourposter.

"In one scene I had to undress and put on a nightshirt for bed," said Mr. Cronyn. "I always wore longjohns underneath—back in those days you didn't dare go any further than that.

"The night we opened, I got down to my trousers when to my horror I realized that I had forgotten the longjohns. I slipped the nightshirt on, pulled it down over my trousers and very carefully took my trousers off under the nightshirt."

Next October, he and his wife will open Theatre London's season with The Many Faces of Love after spending the summer playing at the Stratford Shakespearean Festival.

Cronyn appeared here in 1969 where he played the title role in Hadrian VII, which opened at the Avon Theatre.

This season he will play the best-known bad actor in dramatic literature, Bottom, the weaver, in A Midsummer Night's Dream. The great-grandson of London's first Anglican bishop, Cronyn also will play fiction's most famous Jew — Shylock in The Merchant of Venice.

Miss Tandy will create the title role in her first Canadian play, The Book of Eve, about a woman who leaves her husband. She also is cast in the dual roles of Titania and Hippolyta in A Midsummer Night's Dream and as the man-hungry Lady Wishfort in William Congreve's The Way Of The World.

In 1931, Cronyn made his professional debut in Washington, D.C., in a play called Up Pops The Devil. Since then he has played in Richard Burton's 1964 Hamlet, in which he won a Tony award for his portrayal of Polonius, and has worked in many films, including The Seventh Cross, which brought him an Oscar nomination in 1944.

Miss Tandy won a Tony award for her Broadway performance as Blanche Dubois in A Streetcar Named Desire. She also received an Obie for her off-Broadway solo success in Not I.

Although they both have worked in classical theatre, they are regarded as specialists at originating new roles.

"About 90 per cent of our work has been in original production," Cronyn said.

Both performers feel a sense of security with the Stratford roles in that they're "not coming up to an opening night with the knowledge that the play might be closed in four days," Miss Tandy said.

"With Shakespeare there is no last-minute rewriting and no third-act revisions."

"No midnight meetings in gloomy hotel rooms," said Cronyn. "No endless conferences over cold coffee."

Tango man scores success

CANNES, France (AP) — Bernardo Bertolucci, director of the controversial Last Tango in Paris, has scored a triumph at the Cannes Film Festival with Novocento 1900, a monumental fresco of Italian politics from the turn of the century.

The film — the longest ever shown at the festival — runs five hours and 20 minutes and was shown in morning and afternoon installments.

France's Gerard Depardieu and Italian-American Robert de Niro play the key roles of peasant and wealthy landowner born on the same day in 1900. The film follows the two men to the end of fascism in Italy in the Second World War.

Bertolucci traces the class struggle in a village, Italy's transformation from agricultural to industrial society and the lingering death of traditional values.

Bertolucci gives a masterly picture of the lives of the rich and poor of the village, the early quasi-feudal epoch and the dawn of a new era, the farm workers' union and the predominant role of the Communist party among the peasants.

Sordidly erotic in spots, sentimental and melodramatic by turns, Bertolucci excels in many scenes, particularly one of the burial of peasants massacred by Fascists.

Major supporting roles are played by Dominique Sanda, Laura Betti, Sterling Hayden, Stefania Sandrelli, Donald Sutherland and Alida Valli.

The film — which took two years to make — was backed by United Artists, Twentieth Century Fox and Paramount.

The director told a packed news conference after the screening he had "used the style and code of the 19th-century novel, and the narrative of that century, but in a different manner and above all with a different objective.

"In the 19th-century novel, the goal was always psychological, but in my film it is ideological."

Whales evade trackers

SEATTLE (AP) — The scientific tracking ship Propeller has returned to Seattle with two killer whales, the objects of its search, still misplaced.

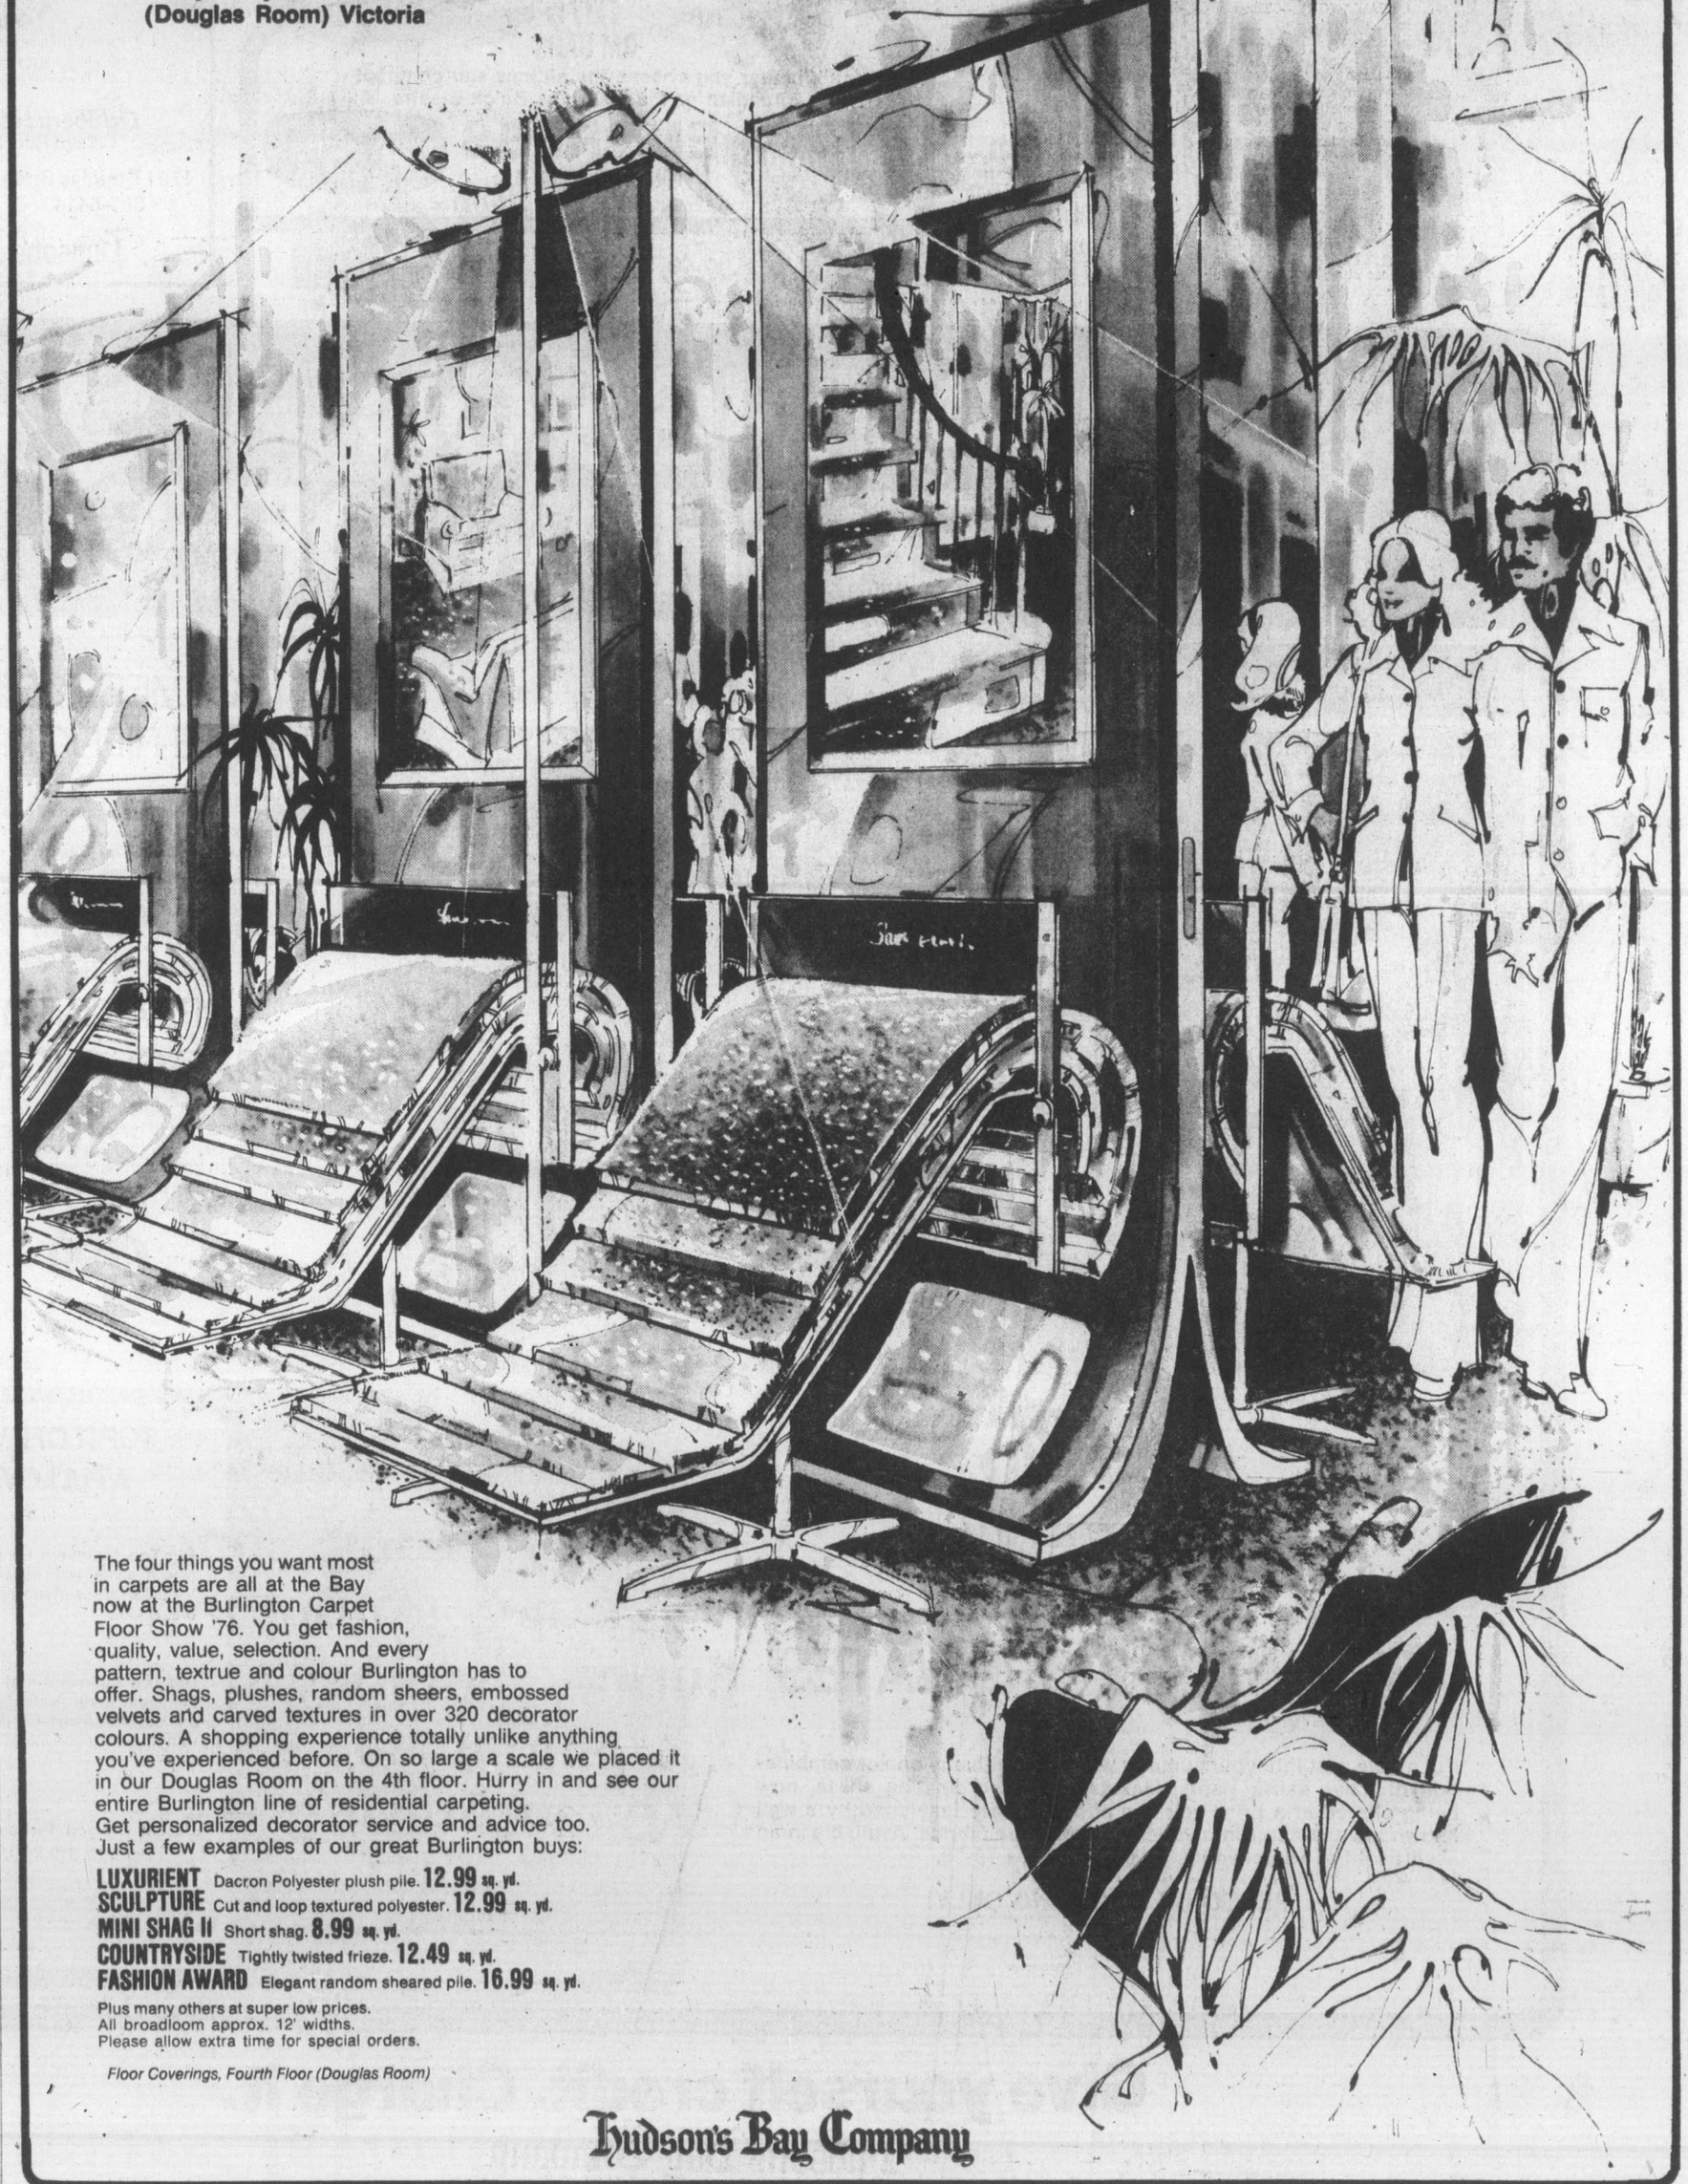

The last time the two whales, both carrying radio transmitters attached to their dorsal fins, were seen was May 15 in Jervis channel in Canadian waters.

"Neither our whales, nor any other whales were sighted during our four-day search," said Dr. Al Erickson, wildlife professor at the University of Washington college of fisheries. However, he hopes the whales will return to the area.

'Inflation still big foe'

Budget hits out at jobless benefits

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald announced tougher unemployment insurance rules Tuesday night in a budget that otherwise breaks no new ground in taxation or economic management. (See also Pages 6 and 7).

Inflation remains the main enemy, the 44-year-old minister told the Commons in his first budget. And there are to be no drastic policy shifts despite the country's high rate of unemployment.

"I'd rather be seen as unimaginative rather than foolhardy," Macdonald told reporters who quizzed him about the absence of major new measures.

The budget includes only minor changes affecting individual taxpayers. But the total take from personal income tax is forecast to increase by about 26 per cent this fiscal year to $16 billion because of rising taxable incomes.

There are tax breaks for companies, including small business, and an end to a current dividend freeze in October.

A projected budget deficit of about $5 billion—roughly the same as last year—on total spending in excess of $41 billion, will have a "mildly stimulative" impact on the economy, Macdonald said.

Proposed changes to the operation of the unemployment insurance program will stretch the qualifying period for benefits to 12 weeks work from the present eight weeks. The changes require legislation before taking effect.

As an energy-conservation measure, the budget will extend a special excise tax currently levied against heavier automobiles to lighter vehicles. The proposal will add an extra tax ranging from $70 to $1,020, depending on weight, to anything bigger than a compact car by 1979.

Child - care tax allowances for working women and single-parent fathers are doubled to $30 a week per child or $1,000 a year, to a total maximum per family of $4,000. The change is effective for the 1976 tax year.

Unemployment, which touched a 15-year high of 7.4 per cent of the work force in April—761,000 jobless—is being monitored closely, Macdonald said.

But estimated 250,000 new jobs will be created this year as the economy grows at a real rate of five per cent and the jobless rate will gradually decline.

The government believes its goal of reducing the annual inflation rate to eight per cent from nine by year-end is within reach. And it does not want to risk a return to double-digit inflation by introducing spending measures to reduce unemployment, the minister said.

The budget includes measures to tighten price controls under the eight-month-old anti-inflation program. The changes aim to prevent some companies from justifying price raises simply by showing that costs have risen.

In future, all companies regulated by the anti-inflation board will be limited by law to yearly profits equal to 85 per cent of those during previous years. This is down from 95 per cent previously allowed.

At the same time, companies now may measure profit margins either on the previous five-years average or on 1975 levels, whichever benefits them most.

Over-all, these changes, effective in July, should make the controls apply more effectively against business, the finance minister said. He denied the changes were included to seek labor support for controls.

Government spending is projected at about $42.15 billion, up from $37.23 billion in the financial year ended March 31. The deficit on all operations—cash needs—is expected to be about $4.5 billion, a slight decline from last year, when all transactions are calculated.

Mr. Macdonald said federal spending this year will be up by about 14 per cent from last year—less than first projected because 1975-76 spending west higher than predicted. The rate of increase should be held to 11 per cent in the financial year starting April 1 1977, he said.

Macdonald said federal spending this year will be up by about 14 per cent from last year—less than first projected because 1975-76 spending was higher than predicted. The rate of increase should be held to 11 per cent in the financial year starting April 1, 1977, he said.

Extending to 12 weeks the work qualifying period for receiving unemployment benefits will save up to $300 million a year in costs, Macdonald estimated. Unemployment benefits last year totalled $3.4 billion and they are projected to reach $3.78 billion this year.

About 330,000 people now eligible to receive benefit payments after eight to 11 weeks' work would be affected by the change when introduced in legislation. Macdonald said an effort will be made to grant longer benefit payments to claimants in high-unemployment regions. Operations of the manpower department and the unemployment insurance commission will be integrated in the interests of efficiency.

Among the corporate tax breaks announced in the budget is removal of the 12-per-cent federal sales tax on energy-saving equipment such as windpowered electrical generating gear.

The present two-year fast write-off on capital equipment is extended to include machinery bought between now and 1980 that uses industrial or municipal waste as a fuel source.

These were part of a package to encourage energy conservation. Macdonald also said all companies that tion between now and July 1, 1979, will be permitted to write off costs at 100 per cent against taxes. Previously, companies whose principal business was not exploration could claim only up to 30 per cent annually.

The tax changes to promote conservation included the special excise tax on cars and a $100 tax on vehicle air conditioners.

For small business, the budget raised by 50 per cent to $150,000 the limit on annual profits they may earn to qualify for a reduced 20-per-cent tax rate.

Capital-cost allowances, under which companies can write off equipment purchases against taxable income, were raised to 30 per cent from 20

B.C. ferries still in sea of troubles

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Transport Minister Jack Davis and ferry workers appeared to be sailing on different seas Tuesday as a continuing labor dispute kept the B.C. Ferries fleet an hour and a half to two hours behind schedule.

While Davis was telling the Legislature he had no knowledge of layoff orders being rescinded, a union spokesman was claiming that almost half the 420 orders were being withdrawn.

The slowdown has come as a result of the decision to cut staff and services June 1 as a means of reducing the fleet's deficit.

A major meeting of both licensed and unlicensed ship personnel was scheduled for Victoria this morning to plot the next move, which the union says could be an attempt to re-open discussions with the Public Service Commission.

Meanwhile, strike votes were beginning to "trickle in" Tuesday and a count was to be made Thursday.

But the prospect of a full-scale walkout early in June seemed highly unlikely. Both Davis and Labor Minister Allan Williams have indicated special legislation would be used to block any such action and union leaders say they don't want to give the government the opportunity to make the move.

The most likely avenue appeared to be continued delaying tactics by the union.

The work-to-rule campaign started Friday by the licensed officers at the beginning of the Victoria Day weekend was continued Saturday and Sunday, but lifted Monday to allow holidayers a chance to arrive home on time.

It began again Tuesday in what the Government Employees' Union says is an ongoing basis. It involves head counts of passengers in accordance with the Canada Steamship Act, and in some cases, single-lane loading of vehicles.

By 8:30 p.m. Tuesday ferries on the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay route were up to two hours late and an hour and a half behind schedule between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen.

There was one cancellation involving the 8 p.m. sailing from Horseshoe Bay to Langdale on the Sunshine Coast.

Davis was asked in the Legislature by Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) if he was considering a union proposal that layoffs be held in abeyance until September.

Davis repeated an earlier statement that overtime was the crux of the problem and

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A woman security guard and an arriving passenger were killed at Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion airport Tuesday when the passenger's suitcase blew up while being examined.

Ten other persons in the crowded arrival hall were injured.

A second suitcase accompanying the passenger, who arrived on an Austrian Airlines flight from Vienna, exploded harmlessly as security guards dragged it with a rope from the terminal building.

The blast shattered windows, sending shards of glass flying across the building like shrapnel. Hundreds of persons fled the building in terror.

Bigfoot's victim?

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — Cherie Darvell, 23, of Redding, Calif., reported abducted in rugged mountains by a hairy, ape-like creature known as Bigfoot, has shown up screaming outside a rural resort, but apparently unhurt.

"She's not in too bad a shape," Humboldt County Sheriff Gene Cox said, adding he believed the whole affair was a hoax.

Miss Darvell's friends said she was an unemployed beautician who also used the name Cherie Nelson.

She was one of five members of an independent film crew trying to photograph Bigfoot.

Highlights from budget

- Tighter rules proposed for unemployment insurance, including a qualifying work period of 12 weeks instead of eight.
- Some tax breaks provided for corporations, especially small businesses, and current freeze on corporate dividends ends in October.
- Minor changes in personal income tax include doubled allowances for child-care costs and increased limits for tax-free retirement investments.
- Current tariff cuts extended another year on imports of drugs, sugar, some fresh vegetables and applied temporarily on fresh pork, ham and macaroni.
- Special energy conservation tax on heavy cars increased and extended to smaller vehicles, along with new $100 tax on automobile air-conditioners.
- Anti-inflation rules governing prices and profits altered to block loopholes.
- Eight-per-cent air transportation tax applied in Canada extended to 2.3 million travellers buying tickets outside Canada.
- New registration rules ordered for charities to maintain tax-free status.
- Inflation remains the prime enemy in economic planning but high unemployment will be monitored carefully.
- Total government outlays to exceed $41 billion in 1976-77, with $5 billion deficit up slightly from last year.

Retirement savings aid brings cheer in Victoria

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

The retirement industry, a major one in Victoria, appeared to be somewhat cheered about Tuesday's latest budget proposals, particularly with regard to retirement income.

"Boy, that's a big one," enthused Alan Aldous, manager of Royal Trust, when told about the proposal to end the freeze on dividend income as of Oct. 15, limiting an increase in dividend payments to 8 per cent.

"There's nothing wrong with that limit," Aldous said. "It puts it on a par with wages and that's fair.

"You know that kind of income is important here. People, however, still seem to think that investors are people in high silk hats, but they're not. They're everybody these days."

The increase that is to be allowed in registered retirement savings plans contributions was also greeted warmly by the Royal Trust manager. They go from a limit of $4,000 to $5,500 and those in company pension plans can increase their RRSP contribution to $3,500 from $2,500.

"Many of our clients, I'd say easily more than half, have been demanding this kind of thing," he said.

"Anything that will encourage thrift and deter spending these days is welcome," Aldous added.

The trust company manager went on to say that the Registered Home Owner Savings Plan (RHOSP) changes don't mean all that much, although he could see why they might be needed.

"Our experience with them is that they're more of a tax-saving thing rather than a retirement item," he said.

Taking a slightly different tack on the subject of dividends was James Bassett, manager of Midland-Doherty investment brokers. Speaking as the retiring chairman of the Victoria Investment Dealers Association, he said it was "unfortunate" that the dividend increases were to be limited to 8 per cent.

"You have to consider that inflation could be running at more than 10 per cent. We (the association) had been trying to get this," he said.

Bassett added that other investment dealers were bound to be as disappointed as he was that there was no mention in the budget speech of government adopting their recommendation with regard to accounting for inflation.

"But they're recognizing the effects of inflation by allowing a wider scope in RRSPs," Bassett said. "That and widening the scope of qualified investments is bound to enhance the raising of capital for investment purposes."

Victim couldn't even thank his rescuers

LITTLESTONE, England (CP)—Victor Haisell found himself in a most embarrassing situation when he swallowed his false teeth while out in his dinghy.

A fishing boat rescued him and took him ashore to a waiting ambulance. A coast guard spokesman said: "He couldn't say a word."

Hays admits Ray 'relationship'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressman Wayne Hays admitted in an emotional house speech Tuesday that he had "a relationship" with Elizabeth Ray, the woman who claims Hays maintained her as his mistress on the congressional payroll.

But Hays, addressing some 300 colleagues in the hushed house chamber, said he had broken off the relationship and said "My conscience is now clear."

"My first reaction was to protect my marriage," the recently-wed 64-year-old Ohio Democrat said. "I have committed the grievous error of not telling all the facts."

Hours before the confessional speech, Hays again denied having an affair with Miss Ray, a 33-year-old blonde who made $14,000 a year until Hays fired her Monday from the house subcommittee staff position he obtained for her, and demanded the house ethics committee "clear his name" by investigation.

"Six weeks ago I married the woman I love more than anyone else," he said in his floor speech. "Prior to that time I had a relationship with Elizabeth Ray."

"I was then legally separated and single and it was voluntary on her part and on mine," said Hays, a divorcee who married Patricia Peak, a secretary in his Ohio congressional district office, in mid-April.

Hays
. . . grievous error

"I have been called more names in the press and elsewhere than any member of this house. I have been called arrogant, ruthless, cold-blooded, vicious, tempermental and mean. I am also capable of emotion and error and I have erred," said Hays.

"My conscience," he said, "is now clear."

Some members came up and shook his hand and patted his shoulder. Others just sat quietly, then left the chamber.

Hays said he still denies he hired Miss Ray in his capacity as chairman of the house administration committee just so she could serve as his mistress — as she claimed in the account carried in Sunday's Washington Post. She said her only duties were to have dinner and sex about once a week with Hays.

The justice department has ordered the FBI to investigate Miss Ray's allegations and determine whether federal funds were misused.

Hays told his colleagues Miss Ray had been hired for

Hays admits 'relationship'

He said Davis placed her on his office staff "for a brief period of time." At some unspecified time, she transferred to the administration subcommittee headed by Davis, from which job Hays fired her Monday.

"When I proposed to my bride, I explained to Miss Ray that our relationship was ended, and indeed it had ended before then," Hays said.

"I said I would continue to help her but she became hysterical and threatened suicide and threatened blackmail and to destroy my marriage. My first reaction was to protect my marriage and my dear wife."

"I'm now 65 and I have been in the house for 27 years," Hays said, his voice occasionally catching with emotion.

"My days on earth are numbered and my service in this room may also be.

work on his committee staff on April 22, 1974, but left in November of that year and then returned to ask for her job back in the summer of 1975.

He said he took her to the office of Congressman Mendal Davis of South Carolina and she was hired on Hay's recommendation that "she was able to perform normal office duties.

"I also said that she had some personal problems but I did not tell him about my relationship with her."

per cent for computers and to 100 per cent for so-called software like computer programs. But the rate was reduced to 25 per cent from 40 per cent for aircraft.

At the same time, Macdonald announced that charitable organizations qualifying for tax advantages in future will be required to pay out at least 80 per cent of the funds for which they have issued receipts for tax purposes. This change follows a study initiated after the last budget.

There were small changes to encourage personal saving and raise pension plan contribution limits.

The maximum contribution available to reduce taxable income for registered pension plans is raised to $3,500 from $2,500 for 1976 and after.

Changes will be made to let owners of registered home ownership savings plans to freely transfer them between institutions to get the highest rate of return.

Tariff changes to remove or reduce rates applied against about $100 million of food and drug imports, mainly from the United States, were extended to June 30, 1977. Finance department officials said the savings are to be passed on to consumers.

Tariff changes to remove or reduce rates applied against about $100 million of food and drug imports, mainly from the United States, were extended to June 30, 1977. Finance department officials said the savings are to be passed on to consumers.

Macdonald said the government is committed to a "deliberate and persistent" approach to increasing the economy's competitive ability.

And he called for co-operation from the private sector, if it wants to avoid more controls.

"If government alone is held responsible for the performance of the economic system, then government will be driven increasingly into the regulation of the private sector," Macdonald told the Commons.

He repeated that the government wants to remove its wage and price controls as soon as possible, but not until it feels the danger of renewed inflation has passed.

An international economic recovery under way will benefit domestic exports this year, but the economy may not have the competitive ability to take full advantage of a recovery.

A government priority is to come up with tax incentives to encourage more investment in high-technology industries that could improve the economy's growth rate, Macdonald said.

fees up in camps

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy doubled camping fees in 23 provincial parks Tuesday — but called it "a surcharge."

The camping fee jumps from $2 a night to $4 effective June 1.

Mrs. McCarthy said the increases apply to parks with heavy camper use "because they offer outstanding recreation opportunities and because they are near population centres."

She also stated the increase was necessary to meet increased maintenance patrol and security costs.

There are 320 provincial parks of which 120 contain developed camping facilities.

that efforts were still being made to find a solution.

Asked if he had withdrawn any of the proposed layoff notices, he answered: 'Not to my knowledge, but I'll take the question as notice."

However, BCGEU assistant general secretary Cliff Andstein told the Colonist there had been an apparent change of mind where at least 183 of the 420 layoff orders were concerned.

He said the notices had gone out without apparent planning and that management had suddenly realized it was laying off 33 engine room oilers — about half the number employed.

"We received information last week that all of these orders had to be rescinded," Andstein said.

"Then we received information that another 150 were being rescinded because they had gone to people who just can't be replaced."

On Tuesday the union learned that another 30 to 40 ferry workers were either resigning or retiring.

Andstein said it now appeared the ferry service had found it was "having to back off" with its planned layoffs.

The union says it has been told layoffs wouldn't be necessary if the ferry workers were willing to work 10-hour days, 10 days at a time without overtime.

"I've been involved in this for six weeks and I've yet to see where the hours of work have anything to do with the need for layoffs," Andstein said.

He said the union had agreed to take any time owing in time off.

Earlier, the union instructed those earmarked for layoff to report for work June 1 as usual. Out of this came a motto: "If one worker is laid off, all are off."

But Andstein said Tuesday there was no intention to stage a walkout.

"That would be exactly what the government is looking for. While we're not afraid of a fight, we're not exactly stupid, either."

The ferry workers claim their head counts have disclosed several cases of overloading on the ferries.

Elderly and ferries

Free travel cut

The elderly have had their free travel on B.C. Ferries trimmed by two day.

Transport Minister Jack Davis admitted in the Legislature Tuesday that as a "refinement" to his earlier free travel announcement he had now decided to confine free ferry travel to weekdays.

Persons 65 and over travelling on weekends will pay the going rate.

"I think they can plan their travel arrangements so that they can travel on weekdays without hardship," Davis said.

He made the statements in response to questions from Gordon Gibson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) who said outside the house that he had been informed of the new regulations over the weekend.

"A friend of mine was trying to make arrangements to bring a group of senior citizens to Victoria and was informed the free rates applied only to weekdays," he said.

Bomb kills two

Hugo Mueller, was taken to a special security room adjacent to the customs hall where an unidentified woman security guard asked him to open his luggage.

In Vienna, a police spokesman said the baggage of Hugo Mueller, reported killed in the Tel Aviv blast, contained nothing but soiled laundry during a pre-flight security check. He said Mueller booked his flight only hours before its departure.

"Our people remembered Mueller very well, because they had a full hour to check the ten passengers on the Tel Aviv flight," the police spokesman said.

"They told me when they opened his fiberglass suitcase, it contained nothing but soiled laundry and toilet articles," he said.

All passengers flying to Israel have to undergo thorough security checks, including opening their baggage, the spokesman said.

He said police were investigating how bombs or explosive materials could have passed through the checks undetected.

A thunderous explosion rocked the arrival hall as the suitcase was opened in Tel Aviv.

"What have you done to me! What have you done to me!" screamed a woman whose hair was set on fire by the blast. A customs officer pushed her to the ground and used his body to smother the flames.

The dead and injured were taken to nearby Tel Hashomer and Assaf Harofe hospitals by ambulances and helicopters.

Two more suspicious suitcases were also blown up.

The blasts came almost four years after three Japanese Maoist guerrillas sprayed incoming passengers at the airport, then known as Lod, with bullets and grenades, killing 26 persons and wounding 79.

Alberta pleased

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government's reaction to the new federal budget is generally favorable and it is particularly pleased with a move to allow investors in resource-based industries to write off 100 per cent of their investment, Provincial Treasurer Merv Leitch said at a news conference Tuesday.

Kentucky-fried Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford scored a major upset in Kentucky, threatened a second in Tennessee but lost Arkansas Tuesday in his bitter GOP fight with Ronald Reagan. Jimmy Carter romped to victory in all three southern and border states.

But early returns indicated trouble for both Ford and Carter in Nevada and Idaho as vote totals straggled in from the western states in the record six - primary showdown. No tally was available for Oregon.

Reagan, the conservative crusader from California, took strong leads over Ford in both Nevada and Idaho. Frank Church was crushing Carter in his native Idaho and Carter was running behind California Governor Edmund Brown Jr. in Nevada.

Reagan
. . . strong leads

Ford
. . . breakthrough

Ford's victory in Kentucky was a crucial breakthrough into Reagan's "sun belt" stronghold and came in a state where the former California governor earlier was a heavy favorite to win.

But Ford picked up strong momentum last week with landslide victories in Michigan and Maryland and moved into a commanding lead in the number of pledged delegates when party leaders — including Nelson Rockefeller — moved huge blocks of uncommitted delegates into the president's corner.

Carter was reaping 103 delegates, giving him 848 of the 1,505 needed for nomination by UPI's count. Reagan was leading Ford 82-63 in delegates chosen Tuesday. In all there were 179 Democratic delegates up for grabs, 176 Republicans.

Leger urges caution

WHITEHORSE, Yukon (CP) — Northern Canadians may have good reason to feel impatient and frustrated but should not lose faith in the political system, Governor-General Jules Leger said Tuesday.

"Canadians have evolved and learned to use political institutions which are flexible enough to permit change while respecting the different attitudes and needs of various parts of the country," he said in a written statement issued on the final full day of his 10-day first official northern tour.

Legers at Old Crow ceremony

By supporting the principles of the political system and directing their actions through it, the people of the North will achieve a meaningful future, he said.

Durinng the governor-general's tour, officials in both territories have said privately that the northern economy is suffering and will continue to hurt until the land claims are settled.

Kennedy flays Carter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Senator Edward Kennedy Tuesday charged Jimmy Carter was being "intentionally . . . indefinite and imprecise" on many issues, but hedged on whether he was part of a "stop-Carter" movement.

"Mr. Carter has in his appearance before the democratic platform committee intentionally made his position on some issues indefinite and imprecise, as far as I was concerned," Kennedy, also a Democrat, told reporters.

But the Massachusetts senator dismissed published reports that he was part of an active "stop-Carter" movement. "I cannot stop any speculation . . . and I suppose there will continue to be speculation until the last vote is taken at the Democratic convention," he said.

Arriving at the Americana Hotel to receive the national Father of the Year award, he reiterated his pledge not to seek the presidential nomination.

"I have taken a position — over a year ago — and my position is unchanged," Kennedy said.

He added he was too busy campaigning for re-election to the U.S. Senate.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Reds 'violated' arms control

Colonist Wire Services

HONOLULU — A senior defence department official said Tuesday the Soviet Union technically has violated S.A.L.T. arms control procedures, and that the United States "is closely monitoring" the situation. The official, who asked that his name not be used, said the non-compliance involved the Soviets' failure to fully dismantle some land-based missile silos before it put four missile-firing submarines to sea.

Running battle in Athens

ATHENS — Battle-clad riot police and striking demonstrators fought running battles in Athens Tuesday in the worst rioting since Premier Constantin Caramanlis replaced the military dictatorship with a civilian government. A 65-year-old woman was run down and killed by a police armored car and more than 60 persons were injured in the rioting which erupted during an attempted march on Parliament to protest a bill to forbid wildcat strikes.

Holes in Henry's policy

TORONTO — A leader of the black guerilla movement in Rhodesia said Tuesday that political pressures in the United states were forcing President Ford to back down from his policy of supporting majority rule in Africa. Michael Mawema, organizing secretary of the Zimbabwe African National Union, said there were noticeable holes in U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger's statements supporting liberation movements during his recent African tour.

French offer doomed?

PARIS — Opposition from the Arabs and mounting hostility within France will force President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to abandon his offer to send peacekeeping troops to Lebanon, Arab diplomatic sources said Tuesday. In Beirut, president-elect Elias Sarkis met President Suleiman Franjieh to discuss handing over power and France's offer of troops.

Jupiter special profiled

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Jupiter's Great Red Spot, an immense feature first observed in 1665, appears to be a column of rising gases that whirls like a gear between winds blowing in opposite directions. Scientists believe its deep red color comes from traces of phosphorous which condense out of the rising atmosphere at heights five miles above the surrounding cloud deck. The oval spot, three times the size of earth, was profiled Monday at the opening of three-day symposium on Jupiter at the U.S. Space Agency's Ames research centre.

Pipeline caution urged

WASHINGTON — U.S. Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe said Tuesday it would be a mistake for U.S. Congress to pass legislation now specifying an Alaska natural gas pipeline route. He said it would be better to allow the president to choose a delivery route late next summer, after all government agencies finish evaluating the alternatives.

Rhodesia reports deaths

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Rhodesian security forces Tuesday reported 11 persons killed in the past 24 hours in growing guerrilla warfare, including three black civilians who died only 40 miles northeast of the capital. The communique said eight guerrillas were killed and eight Rhodesian troops injured during the fighting.

Seven seek East seat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven persons had filed when nominations closed Tuesday in a provincial byelection June 3 called to give New Democratic Party leader David Barrett another crack at a seat in the 55-seat Legislature.

Joining Barrett on the ballot will be a representative from each of the three major parties, two independents and one member of the North American Labor party.

But restraint goals being met

Ottawa spending more than ever

By MICHAEL LAVOIE

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is spending more than ever before and has added $700 million to estimated total outlays for last year but tough austerity measures are beginning to take hold, Finance Minister Donald Macdonall said Tuesday.

In his first budget speech, Macdonald told the Commons that total 1976-77 spending of more than $42.1 billion remains within the restraint goals set by cabinet last year.

The figure represents a 14-per-cent increase over total spending for 1975-76, which ended March 31, he said. Planning for next year is based on a further rise of 11 per cent, bringing projected 1977-78 spending to about $46.7 billion.

The government expects a deficit this year of about $5 billion compared with about $4.5 billion last year.

Outside the Commons, Macdonald told reporters the increase in spending over last year was cut to 14 per cent from an original estimate of 16 per cent because last year's spending was about $700 million higher than expected.

This was because of miscalculations, totalling about $500 million of the amounts the government departments would have left in their budgets to return to the central revenue fund at year's end, he said.

The rest was due to payments of about $200 million which were made earlier than expected to Petro-Canada, the government oil company, and to the Export Development Corporation, a government agency which helps finance the foreign purchase of domestic goods.

Macdonald told the Commons that expected spending increases this year and next meet the government's goal of keeping spending growth lower than the over-all growth in the gross national product, the total value of all goods and services produced in the country.

Macdonald said the austerity program announced last December, together with further measures including reductions in unemployment insurance costs and a ceiling on growth of federal-provincial shared-cost programs, are part of a plan for basic changes in the pattern of federal spending.

"Our objective is to achieve a major shift in the pace of growth of the government sector in a deliberate, susained fashion," h esaid.

The December austerity measures included the scrapping of Information Canada, the Company of Young Canadians and the Opportunities for Youth program and the reduction of growth in the civil service work force to a level of 1.5 per cent annually.

Macdonald, Trudeau with budget

Variety of breaks for some firms

OTTAWA (CP) — The new federal budget Tuesday included a variety of tax breaks for companies as well as an end to the freeze on corporate dividends.

The measures:

—Allow corporate dividends to increase by eight per cent annually after Oct. 15;

—Increase the amount of money a small business can earn while retaining special, low income tax rates;

—Extend special exploration incentives to all taxpayers, not just those companies whose principal business is exploration;

—Change capital cost allowance rates on a range of items, including increases for computers and reductions for aircraft.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald noted in his speech that corporate dividends have been frozen, except in special circumstances, since the anti-inflation program went into effect Oct. 14.

Among major changes in business taxes, the budget will allow small companies to earn up to 50 per cent more and still qualify for special reduced taxes.

Mr. Macdonald said the maximum income allowed will be increased to $150,000 a year from the current $100,000.

If it stays under the maximum, a company will pay taxes of 20 per cent for a manufacturing business or 25 per cent on other enterprises. The regular tax rate is 40 per cent for manufacturing and 4 per cent for other types of business.

The measures apply to companies controlled in Canada.

As part of its effort to increase the search for new supplies of petroleum and minerals, the government has allowed companies whose principal business is exploration to write off 100 per cent of exploration costs in a year.

Mr. Macdonald said that effective Tuesday night, all taxpayers will be given the 100-percent write off for three years ending July 1, 1979. Previously, such taxpayers could only write off 30 per cent of exploration costs annually.

In another measure for the energy industry, Mr. Macdonald amended the income tax act effective Tuesday night to make it clear Ottawa won't levy a tax on incentives provided to the companies by the provinces.

Mr. Macdonald said the government has completed a review of capital cost allowances — under which a taxpayer can claim the costs of assets as a deduction on income tax.

He said the capital cost allowance will be increased to 30 per cent from 20 per cent for computers and related equipment.

The allowance for offshore drilling platforms will be increased to 30 per cent from 15 per cent.

The allowance for taxis and for portable equipment rented out temporarily will go to 40 per cent from 30 per cent while the rate for a jetty will increase by one percentage point to five.

The budget decreased the allowance on aircraft to 25 per cent from 40 per cent; on radio, television, radar and electrical generating equipment to 20 per cent from 25 per cent; on powered earth-moving equipment to 30 per cent from 50 per cent and on leased advertising signs to 20 per cent from 35 per cent.

'No real effort' Wolfe judgment on federal bill

The federal budget lacks real effort to create jobs, solve housing problems, or build up trade, provincial finance minister Evan Wolfe said Tuesday.

Wolfe said he had only had a perfunctory look at the budget, but he was pleased to see that the anti-inflation program will be paying more attention to pricing.

"The program needs increased credibility on the price side," said Wolfe.

The government is especially interested in the provisions as it is about to enter into an agreement with Ottawa to implement the guidelines in British Columbia.

"We have said a good program needs visible fairness," said Wolfe.

He agrees that the two main concerns of government are inflation and unemployment, but questioned whether the budget goes far enough.

"I don't see any real effort to create more jobs."

However the additional tax incentives for small businesses could create some jobs.

Criticizing the budget he said: "Job creations could have been represented and there could have been more on housing and something on the trade side."

He noted that federal expenditures will increase over 14 percent to $42.5 billion, with a $4.5 billion deficit.

He is concerned with the deficit programs over the long range, and question if there is any real restraint indicated in that size of a budget.

Tariff on pork possible saving

OTTAWA (CP) — The temporary removal or reduction of tariffs on about $100 million worth of food, mostly from the United States, were among changes announced in the federal budget Tuesday as inflation-fighting steps.

The major change is removal of a half-cent-a-pound tariff on about $77 million worth of pork annually from the U.S., a finance department spokesman said.

"Hopefully, whatever saving there is will be passed on to the consumer," he said. But it was up to the food industry to make that decision.

A tariff was also removed from bacon, and ham mostly imported from the U.S. from hearts, kidneys, tongues and liver, mostly imported from Australia and the U.S.

Tariffs were reduced on canned pork, canned ham, canned luncheon meats and macaroni, which Canada imports mainly from member countries of the European Economic Community (EEC).

These changes, all effective immediately, will increase to $1.6 billion the $1.5 billion worth of imported goods currently affected by tariff reductions announced in February, 1973.

Charity rules set

OTTAWA (CP) — A new federal tax law affecting fund-raising for charities, including churches, universities, medical institutes, theatres and the like, will go into effect next Jan. 1, Finance Minister Macdonald announced in his budget Tuesday night.

The new tax rules are little different from proposals made almost a year ago by former finance minister John Turner. Their announced aim is to ensure that charities are used for their proper purposes and not as a means for wealthy corporations or individuals to hide money from the tax collector.

The new law will require charities registered with the national revenue department to be classified as charitable organizations, private foundations or public foundations.

Charitable organizations are the active bodies that actually do charitable work. Foundations are set up mainly to supply funds to the active organizations. A foundation whose money comes primarily from one person or family will be called a private foundation. Public foundations will be those drawing their money from a variety of sources.

Federal tax law has for many years exempted registered charities from taxation on their incomes and has given tax relief to those who make donations to them. This continues to be the basic principle of the new law, Macdonald said.

However, private foundations will be required to pay out 80 per cent of their annual income to charitable organizations, or five per cent of their assets each year, whichever is greater. This is designed to ensure that the private foundations are not used as a haven for accumulating tax-free income.

Charitable organizations and public foundations will also be required to use at least 80 per cent of their annual income for charitable purposes. This is to ensure that not more than 20 per cent of their income is spent on fund-raising activity.

Background papers tabled by Macdonald said there are 35,000 registered charities in Canada, about two-thirds of them religious organizations. All taxpayers are permitted a standard $100 income deduction for tax purposes to cover medical exemptions and charitable donations. Donations in excess of $100 can be claimed as income deductions when backed up by receipts.

Little reaction either way to document

By The Canadian Press

Early reaction to the federal budget Tuesday night ranged from slight praise to mild criticism.

Doug Peters, chief economist with the Toronto Dominion Bank, saw it mainly as a standpat budget.

"I don't really see any major changes. Some of the minor changes are quite positive ones."

However, he took issue with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's forecast reduction of the annual inflation rate to 8 from 9 per cent by the end of the year.

"There does not seem to be anything in this budget that would change drastically our estimate of 9 per cent in 1976," he said.

In a press release from Ottawa, Joe Morris, just-re-elected president of the Canadian Labour Congress, said:

"The government has demonstrated with this budget that it has no confidence in its own program of price controls. In the circumstances, we had expected the government to come in with an expansionary budget to deal with the serious levels of unemployment and make use of the full capacity of our economy.

"Instead, we have been presented with a budget which relies on expansion in the United States to stimulate growth. The budget fails to do anything about unemployment."

The president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce said that the budget contained few surprises and little good news for business.

"We were not surprised at the budget, because we realized Mr. Macdonald was in the difficult position of not wanting to overheat the economy on one hand and not wanting to dampen it on the other," said Gerald Pearson, of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

"One thing that concerns us is the suggestion that we in the private sector have to create 250,000 jobs," Pearson said in a telephone interview. "I think the private sector will have difficulty doing it because we've done a lot in Canada to destroy the incentive to gamble, to take risks."

Gordon Woodman, president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta, said in Edmonton he disagrees with those who described the federal budget announced Tuesday as "a nothing budget."

"The budget contained a lot of disincentives," said Woodman, "and any time there are disincentives, that's a big concern."

He referred specifically to the new measure making all companies regulated by the Anti-Inflation Board limited to yearly profits equal to 85 per cent of those during previous years, down from the 95 per cent previously allowed.

"We must keep the profit before tax not only level, but must decrease it from the base level," said Woodman. "It's hard to see how this could be anything but discouraging to the business community or Canadians in general."

Canada's independent petroleum operators are pleased with budget measures they feel will increase Canadian investment in resource industries, John Porter, general manager of the Independent Petroleum Association said in Calgary.

Saskatchewan hails rain --- but not budget

REGINA (CP) — "I think the rain is going to be a heck of a lot more significant to us than the federal budget," Saskatchewan provincial secretary Elwood Cowley said Tuesday night.

Giving reporters the provincial government's reaction to the budget, Cowley called it "a relatively innocuous document" that failed to take a wide range of steps that could have been taken.

He said there should have been measures to reduce housing costs and mortgage interest rates and to alleviate unemployment.

Tory calls for an end to 'this spending spree'

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, called Tuesday's federal budget "smug, uncaring and totally indifferent to the real problems faced by Canadians."

Broadbent said the country needed measures to create jobs instead of what he termed a marginally negative, restrictive budget.

The government could have created jobs without causing inflation through tax cuts because manufacturers are operating at only 80 per cent of capacity, he added.

"It's a nothing budget," Broadbent said outside the Commons. "One wonders why they spent the time and money to prepare it and why they used up the time of members of the House to listen to the damn thing."

Changes to tighten operation of the unemployment insurance commission were indicative of an anti-worker mood in government, he said.

There was no economic justification for the budget, Broadbent said. Finance Minister Donald Macdonald should have stimulated the economy.

Switch, save on RHOSP; little else for housing

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal tax change will allow future homebuyers to switch their registered home ownership savings plans from one financial institution to another.

Homebuyers who want to get a better return from savings plans can shop for a better deal under the changes announced by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald in his budget speech Tuesday.

The measure should also help people who move to new communities not served by the carriers of their plans.

The change in the home ownership savings plan is one of the few items directly affecting housing in the budget. The finance minister also announced that the long-promised Federal Mortgage Exchange Corp. (FMEC) is again being postponed.

Under the home ownership savings plan, homebuyers can put aside $1,000 a year tax free, up to a lifetime limit of $10,000, towards buying their first homes.

The minister raised the annual limit for tax-free savings permitted under registered retirement savings plans to $3,500 from $2,500 but he left the homeownership savings ceiling untouched.

Asked about this, Mr. Macdonald said the retirement savings plan program is older and it is time for a change.

The mortgage exchange corporation, created by legislation almost three years ago, was deferred once again because of government financial restraints, the minister said.

It was designed to give mortgage lenders a market for selling mortgages when they need cash. Mortgages could also be bought through it.

Questions about federal budget asked, answered

OTTAWA (CP) — Questions raised by Tuesday's federal budget:

Q—What's it going to cost me?

A—You've heard most of the bad news already in the form of provincial tax increases and last week's federal announcements of higher costs for gasoline, heating oil and stamps. There's some good news in the budget.

Q—Where?

A—Day care decuctions will be doubled to $30 a week or $1,000 a year per child and to $4,000 maximum per family. You'll be able to invest more tax-deductible savings into registered retirement savings plans. The new limit is $3,500, up from $2,500, and if you don't belong to a pension plan, it goes to $5,500 from $4,000. You can also save by changing your buying habits.

Q—How?

A—As an energy saver, a new tax of $100 is being imposed on air conditioners for autos, station wagons, vans and smaller trucks. The government says air conditioners can add as much as 20 per cent to your gasoline bill. They're also saying now that as of Aug. 1, it will cost you more money to buy any car weighing more than 4,250 pounds.

Back in 1974, remember, they clapped an excise tax on bigger cars and the existing no-special-tax level is 4,500 pounds. By 1979, the limit will be down to 3,500 pounds when only compact and sub-compact autos would escape the tax.

If you buy a 4,500-pound car after Aug. 1, you'll pay $120 more in tax. The tax on such full-size cars as a Buick Electra, Chrysler Newport, Dodge Monaco or Ford LTD would range from $30 to $240, depending on weight. By 1979, it would range from $420 to $660. The government says that's an incentive to manufacturers to stop building big cars.

Q—What about my home?

A—Federal sales taxes will be eliminated on windmills, wind-powered systems for generating mechanical or electrical energy, as the government puts it. But if you're not quite ready for that, or a solar furnace, you might consider a self-timer for your heating system. Time controlled thermostats are said to save 10 to 15 per cent in energy. Also recommended are thermal insulation for pipes and ducts, solar cells to charge batteries and heat pumps. No sales tax on these.

Q—And food costs?

A—Some food costs should go down. Farmers may complain but import tariffs are being cut on fresh pork, ham and bacon. And on macaroni. Tariff cuts are being extended on many basic foods — some fresh vegetables, sugar — as well as drugs, plumbing fixtures and so on.

Q—What's going up?

A—Tariff reductions on tires and tubes are said to have hurt Canadian manufacturers and their employees and are being removed. That means higher prices for imports. The tariff on scissors also goes higher. And if you fly, you'll have to pay the air transportation tax of a maximum $8 a flight if you buy your ticket outside Canada and use a Canadian airport for arrival.

Q—I can't get a job. What about that?

A—The Unemployment Insurance Act is being changed "to encourage those with jobs to stay with them and those who are unemployed to seek suitable jobs." The outlook is for current high unemployment to remain stable, then decline. Meanwhile, the message seems to be take anything you can get.' To qualify for unemployment insurance, you'll have to work at least 12 weeks, not eight.

If you work the minimum, then claim insurance, you won't get it for long. It's going to be related to actual time worked. The idea is to get those "who have only a marginal attachment to the labor force" off the rolls. Severance pay will be treated as savings and won't affect eligibility for unemployment insurance, a break for long-time employees out of work. The UIC office and the Canada manpower centre are being united as an economy measure to cut costs.

Q—My uncle, the small businessman, says his taxes are too high.

A—If his business is Canadian-controlled, he'll be able to pay tax at a reduced rate of 20 per cent on profits up to $150,000 a year up to a cumulative total of $750,000. That's an increase of 50 per cent.

Q—He raises funds for charities.

A—He may have a problem. Some charities have spent so much on fund-raising that they haven't had much left for charity. They'll have to distribute, charitably, at least 80 per cent of the funds for which tax receipts have been issued. They'll also have to disclose publicly more about their finances and activities.

Q—My brother drives a taxi and, what with car costs and gas, it's really hurting. Anything for him?

A—By this time next year, he'll be paying 6.5 cents more a gallon for gas, although he can claim some deductions. This budget will allow him to write off the cost of his car faster, one of the many capital-cost allowances in the budget. Higher depreciation claims also may be made for offshore drilling platforms, computer hardware and software, runways and roads. Depreciation rates will be cut for airplanes, radio television and radar equipment, leased advertising signs, earth-moving equipment, and electrical generating equipment.

Q—Is the anti-inflation board working?

A—Yes, says Finance Minister Macdonald. But he says it will pay more attention to prices and profits with new regulations to keep them in line. Some firms evidently have been able to dodge present regulations. The new rules will be announced shortly. Meanwhile, he says, wages and salaries have been held within the guidelines for the most part and prices, while still increasing, aren't rising as fast as they had been last October, when the program was announced. The main forces pushing the consumer price index up are governmental, he indicated. They include retail sales taxes and public services. The price of meat and imported food had declined and the board had seen that the savings were passed to consumers, he says.

Money can't buy jobs for students

The provincial labor department is pumping $362,051 into student summer employment programs but the outlook is described as "bleak."

The employment programs branch of the labor department has announced three separate grants to be made available through Canada Manpower for students.

The breakdown is:

- $177,444 to municipalities within the Capital Region.
- $154,922 to assist small farms and businesses under Phase One plan.
- $29,684 to Capital Region District and improvement districts.

Student Manpower director Anne Walker said Friday that 4,500 students are expected to be on the job market this summer from University of Victoria alone.

More than 2,000 are already listed with the Student Manpower office at 546 Yates Street and only 270 have been placed in jobs so far.

Under the municipal grants allocations is $11,627 to Greater Victoria to hire 13 students, all but one to be involved in summer playground programs. One student will be hired as a stagehand at McPherson Playhouse.

Esquimalt has been allocated $18,264 to hire 20 students, mostly for playground programs and laborers in parks and on beaches.

Oak Bay's allocation is $45,339 to hire 48 students, 30 for playground supervising, 16 for laboring projects within the municipality and two to work with the Oak Bay police force.

Saanich has been given $82,303 for 83 students, 42 for playground supervision and the remainder with the municipality in labor, clerical and recreation worker jobs.

North Saanich receives $2,495 to hire three students to supervise playground activities while Sidney gets $4,140 for three playground workers and one for the museum.

Under the Phase One plan (Phase One is for projects outside governmental employment), the $154,922 will enable businessmen to hire 154 students and farmers to hire 36 in the Greater Victoria, Sidney and the Gulf Islands.

In addition, $60,000 has been made available to the societies program, making 33 positions available for handicapped youths.

The funds for the Capital Region District and improvement districts will be used to hire 15 students to act as lifeguards, playground supervisors and landscapers for the recreation branches of Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and Juan de Fuca areas.

Colwood Fire Protection District has also received $3,289 to hire two students as assistant firefighters, while Langford and View Royal fire districts have been given $3,327 each to hire four students as firefighters.

Salt Spring Island, Beddis waterworks district and Fernwood waterworks district have been granted $831 each to hire one student to assist in operations and improvement to water systems.

Information about available positions may be obtained from the student placement centre at 546 Yates or by phoning Debbie Brooks, field project co-ordinator, at 387-6676.

Airline's relocation 'distinct possibility'

COURTENAY — The possibility of Pacific Western Airlines relocating its Comox operation in Campbell River, was raised during a recent meeting of the Courtenay-Comox Chamber of Commerce.

Robert Nikolaisen suggested the chamber "keep a close eye on the PWA setup" because of the distinct possibility of the company closing down its Comox operation and handling everything from Campbell River.

He made the remarks during discussion of a letter from Air-West Airlines, which sought the chamber's endorsement of a proposal to operate a new service between Comox-Powell River and Vancouver.

The chamber was told that PWA has recently eliminated Powell River from its Vancouver-Powell River-Comox schedule.

The chamber agreed to support the application by Air West providing the new service does not endanger existing PWA service to this area.

Members agreed that because of ferry rate hikes travel by air from Comox to Vancouver will become more popular.

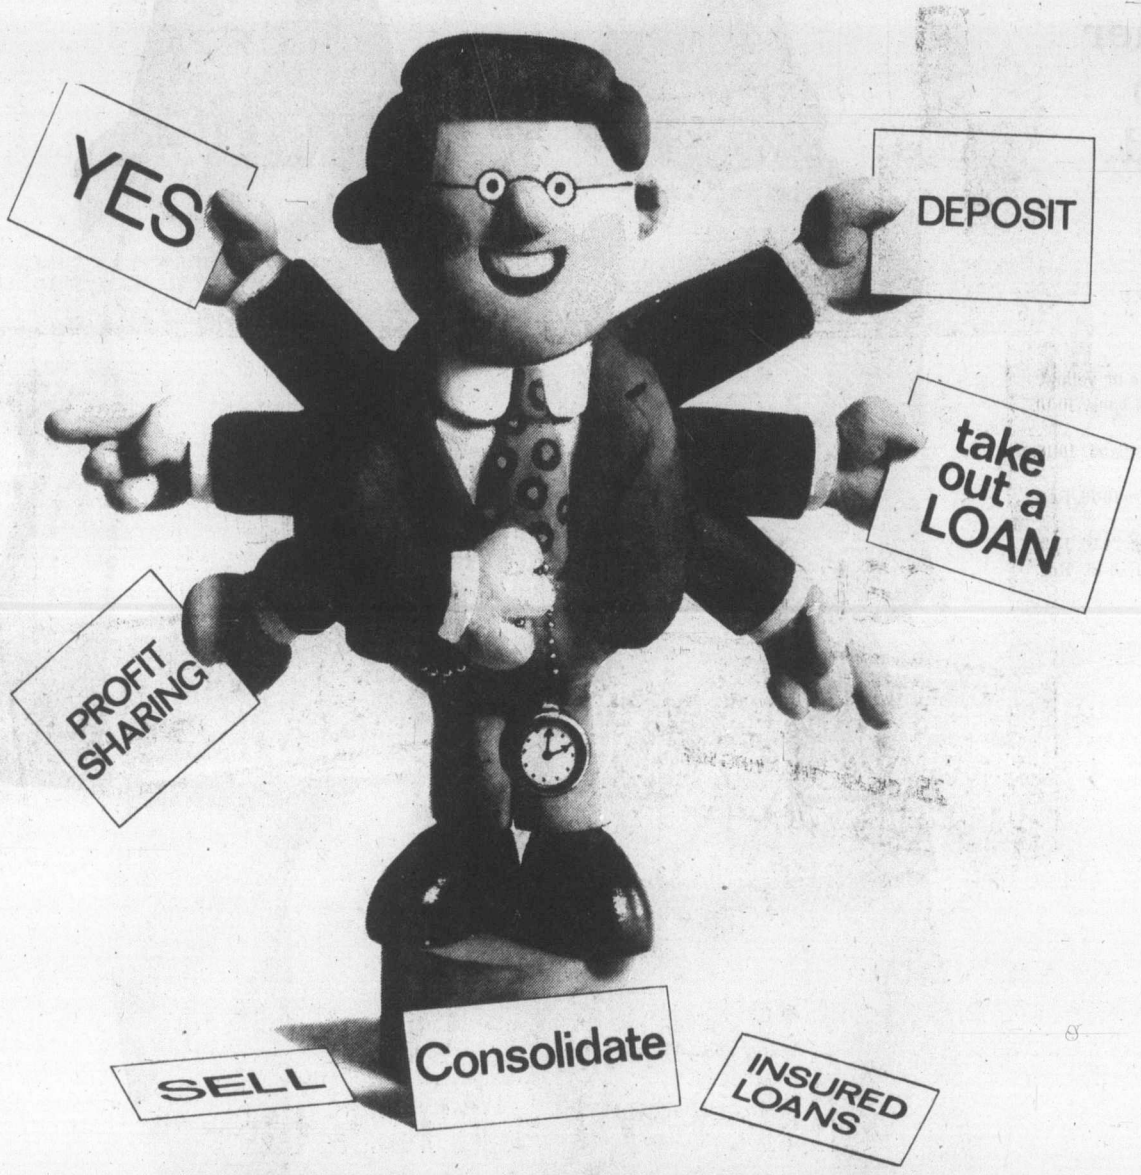

Communications unit's exercise starts Friday

NANAIMO—Exercise Can-Do 3, involving militia communications units from Thunder Bay to Nanaimo, will take place over the weekend in the Prince of Wales Armoury at Edmonton.

Approximately 100 communicators from reserve communications squadrons; 732 Lakehead Thunder Bay, Communications Group 73 Winnipeg, 746 Calgary, 744 Vancouver, 741 Victoria-Nanaimo troop, and 745 Edmonton supported by a troop from Red Deer will participate in the brigade level exercise. The reservists will utilize all current types of radio, teletype and telephone equipment available to the Canadian Forces.

The exercise is designed to train and test the key elements of a Canadian Signal Squadron.

This summer the named units will provide the communications needed for a brigade level concentration of militia Pacific area elements at Fort Lewis Washington.

WAITING FOR TENANTS — 137-pad trailer court in Port Hardy. An enterprising trailer dealer placed 10 trailers on lots but, like rest of trailer court, they remain unsold and empty as they have been for six months.

Province-owned trailer court empty in high-demand area

By NEVILLE SHANKS
Colonist Correspondent

PORT HARDY — While close to 100 trailer owners search desperately for a place to park their homes, a 137-pad trailer court sits empty, and it has sat that way for six months.

The reason: no one can afford the $150 a month rent demanded by the owner — the provincial government.

The rental figure is based on the cost of developing the pads, which was between $15,000 and $16,000 each.

"That's simply ridiculous," said deputy mayor Brian Welchman. "We asked Housing Minister Hugh Curtis some time ago to hold an inquiry into the matter, and at our last council meeting we got word that he had asked his comptroller general to undertake it. It's going on now."

The trailer court is built on land sold by the municipality to the housing department for $550 an acre. The department was responsible for its construction, with Underwood, McLellan and Associates acting as engineers, and Standard General Construction as general contractor.

The original estimate for the job, which was begun two years ago, was $1.1 million. Last summer this was raised to $1.6 million. But the final cost turned out to be $2.2 million.

As a contrast, a 100-pad trailer court, built by a local contractor for Utah Mines Ltd., was started on adjoining property at about the same time as the provincial project. It was finished nine months sooner at an average cost of less than $9,000 a pad.

Rent there is $86 a month, and the court was filled as soon as it was finished. In another part of the municipality a privately owned, 100-pad court charges a rental of $75 a month, half the province's demand.

"The province offered to sell some of its pads for about $3,000 below cost," Welchman said, "but that can't be done under our bylaws. The services are excellent, there's no complaint on that score, but it's laid out as a rental trailer court.

"For instance, the roads are only 33 feet wide, instead of 60 feet as required in a residential subdivision, and the 4,000 square foot lots are far below the minimum size for individual building lots."

Meanwhile, as municipal officials ponder the financial fiasco, they are faced with a continuing demand for trailer space. More than 30 families who have been living in a trailer court maintained by MacMillan Bloedel were given until May 1 to move, as the company develops the area into a housing subdivision. They are still there because there is nowhere else to go.

On top of that, there are more than 100 trailers scattered through the municipality, all of them in unsuitable situations, but allowed to stay there under temporary, six-month permits.

Because there is nowhere for the trailers to go, the permits are renewed almost automatically. Some of them have been in their locations for several years.

"If someone would come in here and build a big trailer court with reasonable rents, or if the government would reduce its demand even to $100 a month, I'd guarantee to fill every space in six months," said Mayor Brian Klaver.

There are other similar projects in the province carried out by the same department, with the same general contractor and the same engineer. One of them is at Squamish, where there are 240-trailer pads finished last summer and still empty.

The reason, said Squamish Mayor Dave Stewart, is the same. The rents demanded are too high.

"The rent is $100 a month, plus, plus, plus," Stewart said. "The final figure can go as high as $150 a month."

He added that lots elsewhere in his municipality rent for $75 to $85.

Welchman said, "Whatever it might reveal, the inquiry isn't going to reduce the cost of the lots. The loss to the province, however you look at it, is going to be tremendous.

"If you figure interest at only eight per cent, they're paying $176,000 a year on their investment. If they'd rent the lots at $100 a month they could fill them all, and at least get most of the interest back," Welchman said,

The foreman of a local contracting firm made the following comparison:

"It's our own Montreal Olympics," he said.

Nanaimo strike continues

Decision on talks today

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — A new round of talks aimed at finding grounds for settlement of the civic, regional and school worker strike here, is due to begin here today.

The last session adjourned Friday night for the long weekend and, at that time, provincial mediator Clark Gilmour issued a set of guidelines under which the talks would resume today. Included in the guidelines was a stipulation that the attitudes of delegates from both sides must indicate that they are willing to undertake serious bargaining.

When talks adjourned Friday, spokesmen said little progress had been made in the session which continued for three days.

Meanwhile, a statement issued by the Nanaimo District Teachers Association Monday, said it was imperative for the good of the community that the dispute be settled quickly.

The statement said that the association is deeply concerned over alarming lack of student progress, increasing high school student dropout rate, drastic drops in attendance, the doubling or tripling of the failure rate at secondary levels and dirty classrooms and washroom facilities.

"The association recognizes and acknowledges that some good educational efforts are being attempted during the dispute.

"But," the statement said. "It also acknowledges that the adverse conditions existing far outweight the good, and will continue to grow steadily worse as the dispute continues."

The president of Local 401 of The Canadian Union of Public Employees, Stan Boshier, used h v of rsumption of talks to issue a strong attack against the Mid-Island Public Employers Association.

The local of the union represents civic and regional employees, and the association is bargaining agent for the employers.

"MIPEA is resisting a solution to the current labor dispute," Boshier said. "Until the elected representatives of this community take a stand against MIPEA's destructive attitude toward collective bargaining, a settlement of the dispute is going to be difficult to achieve."

Boshier said that the union will not accept proposals which, he said, have been put forward by the employers in previous negotiations that would "take away their rights as set out in the labor code of the province, nor do they intend to delete working conditions from a new contract which they have gained at the bargaining table in the past."

He said MIPEA and school board chairman Joe Kilner and other members of the association are "chasing rainbows" if they believe that a settlement can be reached at a level lower than that which was in existence before the strike.

Boshier also said that after the meeting between the disputing sides and Labor Minister Alan Williams two weeks ago, the employers had not changed their bargaining position "one iota" when talks resumed last week.

A decision on whether talks will continue or be abandoned will be made by the mediator later this morning.

62 oysters

Brother new champ

DENMAN ISLAND — Three-time world champion oyster shucker Kenneth Barkley of Union Bay was dethroned Sunday by his younger brother, Leonard.

Leonard, 19, shucked 62 oysters in the five-minute time limit, highlight of the two-day Denman Island oyster festival, to capture the trophy.

He had 50 points (12 cuts) while his older brother shucked 48 oysters (no cuts) to finish in runner-up spot. Another member of the Barkley clan, Mrs. Barbara Barkley, shucked 47 oysters while daughter Patricia finished in fourth spot with 44 points.

Another Barkley, Laurie, finished in eighth place in the field of 12. She had 34 points.

Las year, Barkley shucked to commercial standard (without a cut) 59 oysters in five minutes.

The fifth-annual event, sponsored by the island's recreation commission, attracted about 3,000 visitors despite overcast skies and frequent rain showers.

Missing Link rally

Duncan mayor among winners

PORT HARDY — Jim Rice of Courtenay and Shane Wiegerinck of Victoria were the overall winners in the annual Missing Link car rally held over the weekend. The two-man team won top scores in the novices and experts categories.

In the politicians' class the winner was Duncan Mayor Kenneth Paskin. The awards were presented by Port Hardy Mayor Brian Klaver, who claimed the second place. Third-place team was Victoria alderman, Murray Glazier and his wife.

Twenty-two cars took part in the rally which started Saturday in Victoria and ended here Sunday night.

The Missing Link rally was named after the 48 miles of rough road — the missing link in the north Island highway, between Gold River and Woss Camp.

Plane's wing hit during air show

COMOX — A minor mid-air collision involving two of the aerial acrobatic Snowbirds came close to marring the Canadian Forces Base open house held Sunday.

The near-tragedy occurred about midway through the 28-minute Snowbirds performance as the jet aircraft were flying in formation but out of view of most of the more than 10,000 spectators.

The wing of one of the Tutor jet aircraft touched the fuselage of another team member's plane.

The aircraft with the damaged wing tip was forced to leave the formation and there was a slight pause in the program due to what the show commentator said was "slight malfunction of one of the aircraft."

The open house, the first held at Comox in five years, attracted a larger than anticipated crowd to watch a two-hour air show and visit numerous ground exhibits.

No talks in hotel dispuute

PARKSVILLE — No talks have been held to resolve the Island Hall Hotel strike since last Wednesday, spokesman for the union told the Colonist Tuesday.

"The mediator Kenneth Albertini, is trying to get us back together again," said Tony Gerussi, business agent for the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union, Local 835, which has been locked out since Dec. 11.

Some of the issues were resolved by the last round of talks, but several items remain in dispute, Gerussi said.

"We are willing to go to binding arbitration or to an industrial inquiry commissioner, but management has so far refused," he said.

One of the main points of dispute was who would choose the chairman of any arbitration board.

Between 50 and 60 employees are affected by the dispute.

New activity centre teaches basic skill

CAMPBELL RIVER — Our Place, a new activity centre for the physically and mentally handicapped, which opened its doors last month, is, according to assistant administrator Mary Elderkin, a "glowing tribute to the tenacity of Campbell River residents."

The centre has 17 members who spend up to six hours a day learning skills which help develop a sense of belonging.

The centre, located a short distance from the downtown area on Greenwood Road, is divided into three major adult activity areas; the dining room, craft and recreation area and the woodworking shop.

Participants are taught basic living skills in the dining room by staff and volunteers.

They receive kitchen training — routine everyday tasks, like making tea or coffee, washing dishes and preparing a table.

In the crafts room, weaving and sewing skills are developed, and in the adjoining woodwork room, carpentry instructor Thomas Alexander teaches how to construct simple pieces of furniture.

Small electrical appliances are also repaired at the centre.

Mrs. Elderkin said the ability to be together and relate to one another is most therapeutic and aids handicapped people in gaining self-sufficiency in addition to giving them the incentive to do more for themselves.

Money needed to build the complex had been raised by Campbell River people, except for a $40,000 donation from the provincial government.

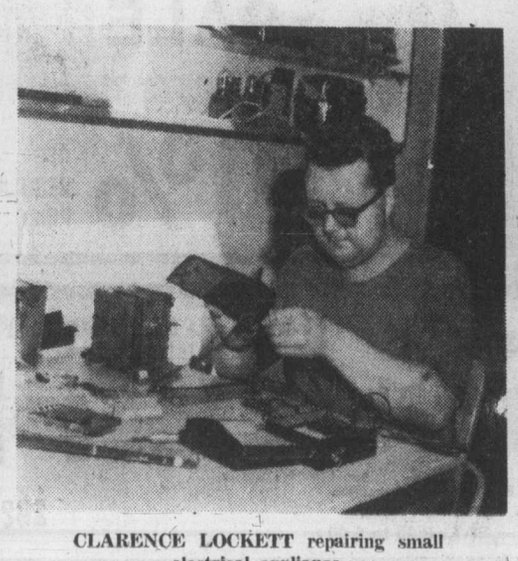

"The building stands as a tribute to the tenacity of residents of this district," Mrs. Elderkin said.

The community effort was spearheaded by the Kinsmen Club, Rotary Club and the Knights of Columbus.

The Lions Club has been responsible for providing the Easter Seal bus which transports the members to and from the centre, and to recreational facilities in the area.

Susan Vickery, a newcomer to Campbell River, heads the pre-school department.

Physical development and co-ordination is what she and her volunteer assistant, Sue Butters, teach the six children attending the centre.

Ferries hit again

NANAIMO — The work-to-rule campaign, reinstituted by licenced officers of B.C. Ferries Tuesday, resulted in ferries leaving Nanaimo for Horseshoe Bay running about one hour behind schedule late Monday afternoon.

The campaign was suspended for the long weekend after single-lane loading, double-head counts and other safety factors were emphasized by the ship's officers, to show their displeasure with the lack of progress in negotiations between the provincial government and the B.C. government Employees Union on a new contract.

When the campaign resumed Tuesday, the first vessel was about 30 minutes late leaving Departure Bay, and the continued practice of taking the extra precautions had ships about one hour late Tuesday evening.

The marine component of the BCGEU also reported a turnout of about 90 per cent of the total Departure Bay based ferry employees for a strike vote here Saturday.

The results of the vote will not be known until all the ballots are counted from all locations on the coast. A union spokesman said this will be Thursday at the earliest.

Once served as HEU lawyer

Judge to mediate hospitals

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

A judge who once served as lawyer for the Hospital Employees' Union has been given the job of trying to lead the union and Hospital Labor Relations Association to peaceful settlement of a dispute that touched off an escalating hospital strike.

With the combatants into the fifth day of an enforced 21-day cooling off period Tuesday, the provincial cabinet appointed County Court Judge D. E. McTaggart as special mediator in the dispute.

The cooling off period was announced last Thursday by Labor Minister Allan Williams 16 days after the beginning of strike action that spread to seven hospitals, including Royal Jubilee and Victoria General.

McTaggart, who is to report back to Williams within 10 days, will review the recommendations of industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blaire and compare them with maximum increases allowed in similar circumstances by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

Until his appointment to the bench in recent years, McTaggart provided legal services to HEU.

The Blair Report recommended an 8 per cent wage increase over one year in keeping with the minimum AIB guideline.

However, cost-of-living features and other benefits swelled to increase to 13.6 per cent by union figures and 15.15 per cent, according to HLRA.

The union voted acceptance of the package, but HLRA rejected it as inflationary, touching off the strike.

Although the judge's recommendations are to be non-binding, Williams has already indicated special legislation would be used to make them binding if there was no settlement by the June 10 end of the cooling-off period.

Williams also said earlier that the government would not tolerate any resumption of the strike that was halted with his order last Thursday.

At the same time, the 16,000-member union has said it will continue to take strike votes at various hospitals among the 99 it faces in master agreement negotiations.

Originally, HEU secretary-business manager Jack Gerow had opposed introduction of a third-party on the basis that Blair had already served that function.

After Tuesday's announcement, however, he agreed the third-party concept would be "different" because McTaggart would have at his disposal the recommendations of "another third party"—Blair.

"We would then be attending any hearings called by him with the purpose of discussing the Blair recommendations," Gerow said.

It was expected McTaggart would try to arrange meetings between HEU and HLRA as early as today.

The judge has had considerable experience in industrial relations. Among his accomplishments was a binding arbitration award which settled the Vancouver Island propane dispute earlier this year.

Meanwhile, hospitals caught up in the strike had returned to near-normal conditions by Tuesday. In most instances, elective surgery—suspended during the strike—was underway again.

There were some trouble spots during the weekend, including the union's claim that Royal Jubilee disposed of food without providing any for its employees or visitors.

Ken Black, chairman of the HEU unit at Royal Jubilee, said food was served only to student nurses Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Black said about 235 servings on pancakes and fresh pancake batter were "dumped down the garburator" along with 75 to 100 turkey and vegetable pies and other food.

And veal that was left over was put back in the refrigerator, but not served," he said.

He said he had "at least 10 phone calls" from members of the public "who thought we were at fault for this."

During the weekend the public and employees had nothing more than tea, coffee, hot chocolate, cheese, crackers and ice cream to choose from, he said.

He said he phoned Royal Jubilee executive director Dr. A. C. Pickles and was told by Pickles that "he had no control over what goes down the garburator."

Pickles could not be reached for comment Tuesday night. He said earlier that employees had been asked to take their lunches until a proper food supply was on hand. Black said most employees didn't get the message.

According to the union, its members working in the cafeteria had been told by someone in management to dump the food.

MP quotes Caesar on murder

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP drew on a quote from Shakespeare Tuesday to express his opposition to the death penalty as the Commons debated for the ninth day a bill to abolish it.

Marke Raines (Burnaby-Seymour) quoted the words of Caesar in the play Caesar and Cleopatra: "To the end of history, murder shall breed murder, always in the name of right and honor and peace, until the gods are tired of blood and create a race that can understand."

Raines called the death penalty a barbaric practice that has "no place in a civilized society."

Don Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) said he would oppose the bill, calling it a waste of time designed to divert public attention from the failure of the government to deal with the economic problems.

He's walking history

The oldest member of Victoria's Jewish community has more memorabilia from his days in the Great War than from his Jewish past.

Although Ben Grossman feels like a member of the traditionally close-knit ethnic group, he has yet to see the Jewish historical exhibition on display until the end of the month at the Provincial Archives.

He might be excused for not having gone to see it.

Grossman turned 90 last Christmas Day, and though the man who sold cars in the city for 49 years still drives his own, he doesn't go far, he said last week.

The impressive exhibition brought to the city by the Jewish Historical Societies of B.C. and Western Canada mentions Grossman as one of the provincial community's oldest and most colorful personalities.

He has a wealth of stories that begin with early days of Russia, the country of his birth, before his Rumanian-born father was forced to move his family for the Czarist-proclaimed crime of alternate citizenship.

Stories, pictures and a plaque which he says is the only one in Canada all bring back his years in the war during which he spent almost two years on motor patrol in the Libyan desert.

Signed by King George V, the plaque is notice of honorable discharge after disablement in Europe.

An old photograph shows Grossman chauffeuring Edward Duke of Windsor on a visit to Canada.

That picture also goes along with a story lodged in Grossman's memory.

He said the then royal prince, later Edward VIII, kept confiding in him that "he didn't want to be king. He told me that a dozen times. He said he'd rather be footloose."

Now Grossman, the self-made salesman, who left family in Vancouver to move to Victoria in 1907, spends much of his time at synagogue functions.

She predicted all the suffering that occurred through war in the Middle East from her Bible interpretations, he said, adding "the religion has nothing to do with politics."

It has much to do with com-

It's almost 60 years since he joined the Victoria group, and he said the biggest change is increased membership.

Some of those members—notable Jews in the city—are among those cited at the exhibition that can be seen from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. today to Friday.

Long-time oil manager dies at Rest Haven

A memorial service for H. Dudley Foster, long-time manager of Imperial Oil's coastal area, will be held Friday at Holy Trinity Anglican Church beginning at 2 p.m.

The former Sidney resident died Monday in Rest Haven Hospital.

He was a member of the Victoria Rotary Club for 21 years and a member of the Nelson Rotary Club before that.

He was born in Vancouver. Foster's last address was 316 Coal Point Lane.

He is survived by his wife Marjorie and sister Elizabeth McPherson of Victoria.

Donations may be made to the Victoria Cancer Clinic, 1900 Fort.

King sees trouble

Health Minister Robert McClelland will be to blame if there is another confrontation between union and management in the hospital dispute at the end of the three-week cooling off period, William King (NDP—Revelstoke) told the Legislature Tuesday.

King repeatedly asked McClelland to give assurances that money would be made available to pay the costs of any collective agreement worked out between the Hospital Employees Union and Hospital Labor Relations Association, and approved by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

McClelland did not answer.

The minister, King noted, has told the hospitals that he will allow a maximum 8.5-per cent increase in health costs.

The minister should consider separating the cost of health increases from the cost of any collective agreement which is negotiated, King said.

Noting that the government has said all public service agreements will go to the Anti-Inflation Board for scrutiny, King said: "Surely the government is duty-bound to apply that approach as a criteria and benchmark for collective agreements in the public sector."

The hospitals need to know that they can negotiate whatever level of income and fringes they think is realistic, subject to the Anti-Inflation Board, he said.

Charlottes part of Trudeau visit

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will visit the remote Queen Charlotte Islands off the coast of British Columbia this week as part of a fiveday visit to the province.

The visit will include a speech at the opening ceremonies of the United Nations Habitat conference on human settlements which begins in Vancouver May 31 and runs until June 11.

He will be the first prime minister to visit the Queen Charlottes, 200 miles northwest of Vancouver, part of the Skeena riding of Liberal Iona Campagnolo.

Trudeau is to arrive Thursday and stay with Mrs. Trudeau and their children in a private cabin at Tlell on Hecate Strait and will visit Masset on the northern part of the islands, as well the nearby reserve of the Haida Indians.

Saturday, he will open the Queen Charlotte Museum, in the city of Queen Charlotte, a museum devoted to the preservation of Haida cultural artifacts.

Later the prime minister and Mrs. Trudeau will board HMCS Restigouche, a Canadian destroyer making a week-long surveillance patrol in the area, and will travel overnight on the ship to Powell River, 80 miles northwest of Vancouver.

Later Sunday, he will travel by helicopter to Port Alberni where he will visit a youth festival. He will return to Vancouver Sunday night.

Monday, following a speech to the Habitat conference, he will be host at a reception for more than 130 delegations expected to attend the conference.

First load

What is believed to be first crude oil ever shipped to North America from Soviet Union is off-loaded at Portland, Maine. The 48,000-ton Soviet tanker Khulio Antonio Melya, right, delivered 348,000 barrels of Romashkinskaya blend crude from Black Sea port of Novorossiysk to Portland terminus. From there it goes to Gulf Oil Canada's Montreal East refinery by pipeline for evaluation. Gulf is considering Russian crude as possible supplementary source.

Labor cornerstone under legal seize

WASHINGTON (AP) — The union shop, a cornerstone of labor's strength for more than 100 years, is under a legal siege that threatens its survival in the United States.

The outcome of the battle is far from certain. But union lawyers say that a recent California federal court decision, if upheld by higher courts, might seriously weaken or destroy union-shop agreements under which all workers must join the union.

If the ruling is upheld in full, "I don't see how the unions will be able to operate," says Joseph Rauh, the chief union lawyer.

The decision was a major victory for the National Right to Work Committee, one of labor's chief antagonists.

In a counter-attack, 10 of the biggest unions in the U.S. have sued the committee, saying that it is an illegal, anti-union front for employers out to weaken union bargaining power.

In the California case, U.S. District Judge Leland Neilson of San Diego ruled earlier this year at the request of a group of Western Air Lines that their union, the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, misspent dues for political and other purposes.

The lawsuit is being financed by the right-to-work committee. During the years, similar lawsuits filed by the committee group have established the principle that a union may not use dues from "union-shop" or "agency-shop" labor contracts for political or ideological purposes. "Agency shops" require dues payment but not union membership.

But the courts have approved rebate systems under which dues payers get back that portion of their dues used for political purposes.

But Judge Nielson went much further when he also ruled the union's rebate plan invalid, and said that money collected from workers who object to paying dues can be used only for the direct cost of collective bargaining. Dues money for organizing, union conventions, newsletters and per-capita dues to the AFL-CIO were ruled out.

In the legal complaint challenging the right-to-work advocates, the unions say that the group has gone beyond its avowed purpose of fighting compulsory unionism.

Rauh, who also represents the union-plaintiffs in that case, contends the committee is an anti-union organization whose actual purpose is to "weaken the strength of labor unions."

U.S.-China trade hike seen

NEW YORK (AP) — A China authority with top-level trade contacts predicts a huge increase within two years in commerce between that country and the United States, now about $500 million a year.

Impetus for the trade will be the rapid industrialization of the People's Republic, caused partly be enormous oil reserves recently discovered there, said Harned Pettus Hoose, China agent for several U.S. concerns.

He forecast that U.S.-China trade, which amounted to $450 billion in 1975, will swell to $5 billion or more by 1980, and that by about 1985, U.S. sales alone to that country will reach more than $5 billion.

"One current deal, by itself, if consummated, would involve payments by China to an American consortium in the billions of dollars, enough to generate many thousands of man-years of work for Americans," said Hoose.

Read our Report!

This latest analysis from Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities examines the firm base for future growth being established during the current market lull. Send for our new Investment Policy Report, today!

WE BELIEVE the current lull in the market, predicted in our last Report, will be temporary. It gives investors the opportunity to improve their portfolios with selective purchases of good quality issues.

Although economic recovery in North America has been better than anticipated, we believe it will be even stronger during the second half of the year.

That's why you should send for our latest Investment Policy Report. You'll learn about timely opportunities for capital appreciation. You'll also get a helpful insight into economic conditions and trends in Canada and the U.S.

This new in-depth Report is based on information gathered both here in Canada and from our parent company's research department in New York.

Here are some of the questions that the Report answers in more detail.

1. Will the U.S. recovery continue?

There is little need for concern about the continuing upward trend. Policy makers recognise the importance of a steady recovery, hence their monetary and fiscal policies are not expected to choke off recovery or rekindle inflation.

2. What forces are at work on the Canadian economy?

On the negative side there are still relatively high interest rates, the current account deficit and slow export markets. However, these are offset by stronger consumer spending than anticipated, worldwide economic developments and the positive effect of the U.S. recovery.

3. What opportunities are there for the aggressive investor?

Now is an ideal time to give greater consideration to selected issues in Natural Resources and Consumer Goods. Our Report contains a detailed discussion of current opportunities and lists 18 selected issues.

4. Do you have any concern about the forthcoming Federal budget?

We don't believe the Government will make any significant changes and the effect on the stock market will be largely neutral. But don't rule out the penchant that finance ministers have for coming up with unexpected, and unpleasant, surprises!

5. Do you recommend changes in portfolio structure?

No. Cash reserves of 10% should be maintained and another 10% should be used to capitalize on the still liberal yields of bonds and preferred issues.

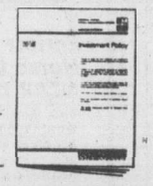

Bear in mind that every professionally guided portfolio has its own characteristics and objectives. We cannot give a definite answer without a thorough scrutiny of your portfolio.

To capitalize on the current market and expected trends, write for our 8-page Report right now. You'll get valuable investment information and our latest evaluation of 27 different issues.

Fair Play awards presented to three

PARIS (AP) — The international Fair Play award was presented Tuesday to Emil Zatopek, a winner of four Olympic gold medals in distance races, Bob Mathias, twice an Olympic decathlon winner, and Victor Niederhoffer, United States squash champion.

The committee making the awards is headed by Jean Borotra, a former French tennis champion. The ceremony was held at the headquarters of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Mathias, a former congressman from Tulare, Calif., and Zatopek, of Czechoslovakia, were honored for the sportsmanship which marked their over-all careers. Mathias won the Olympic decathlon titles in 1948 and 1952. Zatopek was the legendary winner of 5000 meters, 10,000 meters and marathon at Helsinki in 1952.

Niederhoffer was cited for an incident in the 1975 North American open squash championships in Mexico City. His opponent was Sharif Khan of Toronto. Niederhoffer was leading two sets to one when Khan, who had been the victor in all their previous encounters, experienced trouble with a contact lens.

Although the time needed for Khan to return to the match was far beyond the one hour allowed by the rules, Niederhoffer insisted that his opponent take all the time necessary to resume play. Niederhoffer eventually won the match.

CAHA clears Oil King move

PENTICTON (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association cleared the way Tuesday for the transfer of a Western Canada Hockey League junior franchise to Portland, Ore. from Edmonton.

The CAHA adopted legislation at its annual meeting which makes it possible for an American-based, but Canadian majority-owned team, to compete for the Memorial Cup in the national major junior championship.

It had been speculated for some time that Edmonton Oil Kings of the WCHL would transfer to Portland for the 1976-77 season because of dwindling attendance in the face of competition from a World Hockey Association team in the Alberta capital.

President Ed Chynoweth of the WCHL said Monday the league will consider transfer applications at a meeting June 9 in Brandon. The legislation was opposed by both British Columbia and Alberta delegates, but is passed by a two-to-one margin.

Sciarra Vancouver-bound

VANCOUVER — B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League are expected to announce the signing of quarterback John Sciarra today. The Lions have called a noon press conference, and it has been reported that Sciarra, who led University of California at Los Angeles to a Rose Bowl victory over Ohio State, is on his way to Vancouver. Sciarra was taken by Chicago Bears in the National Football League draft and attended the Bears' rookie camp this spring but didn't sign an NFL contract.

Assault on fan brings fine

LONDON (CP) — Defenceman Kevin McCloskey of St. Catharines Black Hawks was fined $250 in provincial court Tuesday after being found guilty of assaulting a London fan during an Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series game last fall.

McCloskey was charged by provincial police after Gary Johnson, 16, of London received cuts and a black eye in a fight between players and spectators during a Black Hawks-Knights game Nov. 14 at London Arena.

Judge Glenn Marshman said he imposed the fine to deter other players from becoming involved in incidents of rowdyism. Coach Paul Emms of the Black Hawks and another St. Catharines player, Robert Manno, pleaded guilty May 11 with two other spectators to charges of causing a disturbance by fighting. Judge Marshman discharged them, saying at the time he thought the hockey business had to discipline itself.

Robinson reaps rewards

Two players, Greg Holst of Providence Reds and Pierre Mondou of Nova Scotia Voyageurs will share the Red Garrett Trophy as rookie-of-the-year in the American Hockey League. They each received 49 points in balloting, the first time there has been a tie in the 29-year history of the trophy.

Capital Builders tourney titlists

Capital Builders won the rain-delayed Heywood Avenue Men's League softball tournament Tuesday.

Laurie Acorn hit a three-run triple in the fifth inning to give Capital a 7-4 win over Castle Properties in the tournament final at Heywood Avenue Park. The final had been postponed from Monday.

Castle jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning when John Cocciololi led off with a home run and Ken Mireau and Ron Maber scored runs. But both teams scored once in the fourth inning and Capital scored six times in the fifth inning.

In the Senior Women's League, Stockers North Americans extended their unbeaten streak to 14 games with an 8-3 decision over CJVI Vicettes while Hygrade Radio took sole possession of second place by beating MacDonald Furniture Seniors, 3-0.

Debbie Derkson, who pitched for Vicettes last year, scattered six hits for the Stockers victory and Sandy Ferguson hit a pair of singles, drove in one run and scored once.

Cathy Wilkinson pitched a one-hitter for Hygrade and Lori Skinner had three hits, drew a base-on-balls, scored once and drove in one run.

In the Sidney Men's Association Bob Vanderkratch pitched a two-hitter and Harvey's Sporting Goods edged Sidney Hotel, 2-1, at Sanscha Park.

Bakers snap tie with fine display

Victoria McDonalds, coming through with one of their best performances of the season, broke a tie for the Western Canada Junior "A" Lacrosse League lead on Tuesday night.

Bouncing back from a 10-13 setback by Burnaby Cablevision in a Mainland game on Sunday, the Bakers gave 850 Esquimalt arena fans a fine show in wresting the lead from New Westminster Salmonbellies with a 15-7 triumph.

Both goalkeepers stood out in what was rated the best spectator action of the season. Victoria's Al Radley stopped 46 shots while Jim Poelzer not only got in front of 53 shots but had four earned assists

However, Salmonbellies had no one in this game to match the Victoria club's one-two punch of Kevin Alexander and Bob Cool.

Alexander bumped his league-leading total to 54 points with five goals and three assists, and Cool matched the total with three goals and five assists.

John Entzminger and Kevin Kennedy had two goals each for the winners and Steve Buckley, Dave Louden and Ken King all had a single scoring shot. Mario Govorchin, who did it twice, was the only player to beat Radley more than once.

McDonalds yielded the first goal, cashed in twice on power-plays to end the first period at 6-3, and then took control as Alexander scored twice and Entzminger once to stretch the lead to six goals.

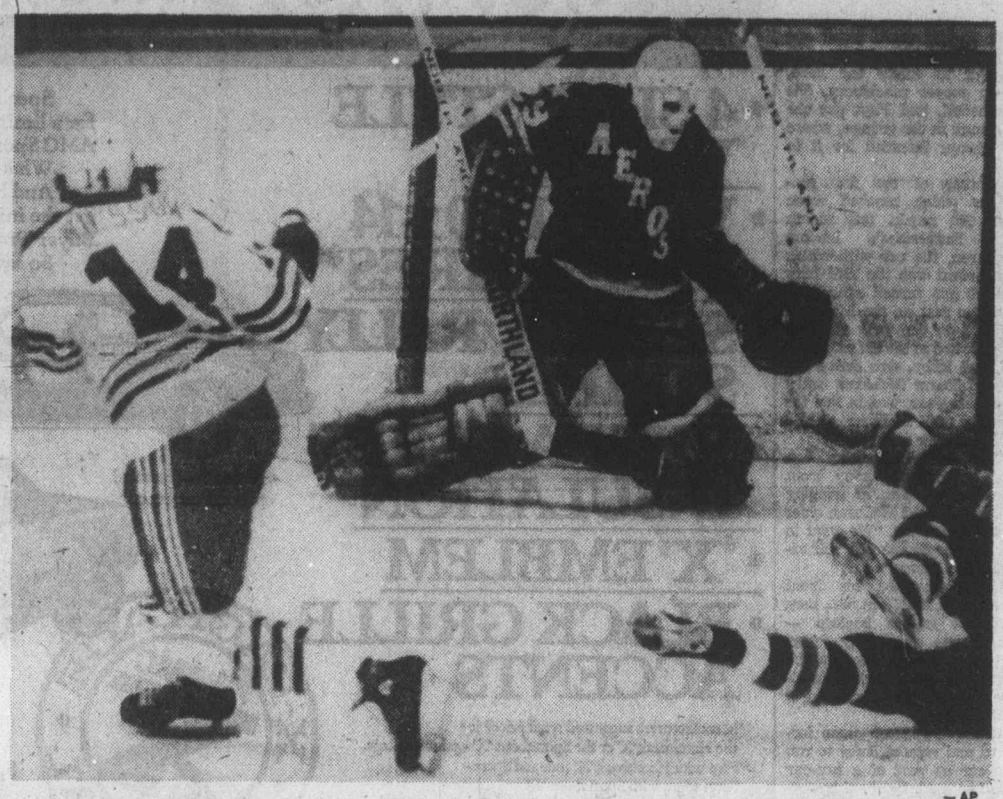

On Sunday, a bad first period proved a bit too much for the Islanders. They were 1-7 after 20 minutes, closed to 4-9 in the second period and chopped another two goals off the lead in the final 20 minutes.

Alexander had three goals and four assists to lead both clubs. Cool scored twice and Buckley, Scott Browning, King, Mike Hardy and Kennedy once each. Dan Perreault had four goals to lead the Burnaby club within a point of the lead.

McDonalds play their third game in four days tonight, traveling to Coquitlam for a tussle with the Jayhawks.

European Jets give Aeros fits

WINNIPEG — Bobby Hull won the first two games with late tie-breaking goals but Houston Aeros are having even more trouble with European imports in what appears to be a losing effort to win a third successive World Hockey Association championship.

Swedish-centre Ulf Nilsson, the playoff leader with 23 points, scored a goal in every period Tuesday night to make the difference in the 6-3 conquest which gave Winnipeg Jets a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final.

But there was more from the Jets' European contingent. Sweden's Anders Hedberg and Finland's Veli Ketola each had a goal and an assist, Sweden's Mats Lindstrom had two assists and Lars-Erik Sjoberg of Sweden and Hexi Riihiranta of Finland each had one assist as a sellout crowd of 10,384 looked on.

On Sunday night in Houston, where Hedberg opened the scoring on a pass from Nilsson and Lindstrom shot the 2-2 goal, Thommie Bergman shared the hero role with Hull. The Swedish defenceman helped set up Lindstrom's scoring shot, scored the 4-4 goal and then drew an assist on the play which ended with Hull cashing his own rebound to bring the Jets a 5-4 decision. A crowd of 15,256 watched.

Penalties played a big role in the Tuesday win, the Jets scoring twice on power plays and Nilsson's first two goals coming while he was out as a penalty killer.

Nilsson boosted the Winnipeg lead to 2-0 only 14 seconds after teammate Larry Hillman had been penalized early in the first period. After Mark Howe had sliced the lead in two, Hedberg and Peter Sullivan scored power-play goals to give the Jets a 4-2 lead for the second period.

The killing goal came in the eighth minute of the second period, Nilsson scoring just as Hedberg was leaving the penalty box. Don Larway got the first of his two goals later in the period, but Nilsson got that one back early in the third period and the Jets had no trouble in staying safely in front.

Fourth game of the series is scheduled here Thursday night.

Veterans help Sox, Phillies

Boston Red Sox, still below .500 and third in their division, and Philadelphia Phillies, threatening a runaway in the National League East, both got another big contribution from a veteran Tuesday as they continued to surge.

Carl. Yastrzemski, whose home runs, three of them in one game, brought two victories last week, hit a two-run blast Tuesday to give the Red Sox their 11th win in 14 games — a 2-0 decision over Detroit Tigers which was the 39th shutout of veteran Luis Tiant's major league baseball career.

And Jim Lonborg, former Red Sox righthander, straightened out after a three-run first inning to give himself a 7-0 record for the season by pitching the Phillies to an 8-4 win over New York Mets.

It was the 24th win in 30 games for the Phillies, who now lead Pittsburgh Pirates by eight games on the losing side and at 25-9 have handily the best record in either league.

Yastrzemski connected in the fourth inning after Carlton Fisk had drawn a base on balls. Tiant, touched for eight hits but matching that in strikeouts and issuing no bases on balls, made the lead stand up without serious trouble.

Jay Johnstone had a home run and three other hits, drove in two runs and scored three times in Philadelphia's defeat of New York ace Tom Seaver, now 4-4 for the season.

Montreal Expos again proved tough for the Pirates, ending Bob Moose's unscored-on streak in its 14th game. Moose, a one-time starter now working out of the bullpen, hadn't yielded a run in relief this season but the Expos got to him for four runs in the 11th inning, winning by 6-3.

Another highlight Tuesday was a ninth victory for San Diego lefthander Randy Jones, who pitched the Padres past Los Angeles Dodgers, 5-2. Jones, who led the National League in earned-run average last season while compiling a 20-12 record, is now 9-2 for the season and has lowered his earned-run average to the 2.24 which tops the league.

Four-game sweep

Bates pull away

Victoria Bates are running away in the Pacific Coast Fastball League.

The defending champions swept four games on a weekend road trip to boost their unbeaten string to 14 games and their lead over Vancouver Magicians to 4½ games.

Bob Burrows and Bob Holness hit home runs Sunday as Bates downed winless New Westminster Royal Tower Blues, 5-3 and 3-0, at Moody Park.

On Saturday, Bates swept a doubleheader from the Athletics at Abbotsford with Stan Kern and Dave Ruthowsky tossing five-hitters and Burrows and Harvey Stevenson hitting home runs.

Bates managed 33 hits in the four games and now have outhit the opposition 107-65 and outscored it 84-18.

Former Bates catcher Bill James made his debut for New Westminster, catching both games. A pair of games scheduled for Saturday between Vancouver and New Westminster was rained out.

This weekend Bates host Abbotsford for games at 7 and 9 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park and New Westminster for games 1 and 3 p.m. Sunday.

The Athletics announced Tuesday that in the future they would be called Fraser Valley instead of Abbotsford and then they went out and dropped the Magicians to five games behind Bates by edging the Vancouver team, 1-0, at Abbotsford.

Corny Unrau pitched a two-hitter and Rudy Teichrob drove in the run with a single.

Victoria rowers on Olympic team

Victoria Day weekend was a busy time for selection of athletes for the 1976 Olympics at Montreal.

Canada's rowing, fencing, sharpshooting and weightlifting teams were announced following Olympic trials held in various parts of the country.

Four Victorians were named to the rowing team which was announced following pre-Olympic competition Sunday at Montreal.

Linda Schaumleffel, Ina DeLure and Sandra Kirby were named to the women's team while Mike Cullin was named to the men's team.

Miss Schaumleffel, a physical education instructor at Oak Bay, qualified in the cox four along with Joy Fera of Vancouver, Monica Draeger of London and Gail Cort of St. Catharines. They beat the Olympic standard by five seconds with a time of 3:36.

Mrs. DeLure, a University of Victoria student, earned a berth on the eights crew along with Nancy Higgins and Becky Stevenson of London, Chris Newland and Tammy Biernacki of St. Catharines, Rhonda Ross andWendy Pullan of Vancouve and Jane Pal of Brockville, Ont.

Miss Kirby, also of UVic, made the women squad with Elaine Bourbeauof Boucherville, Guylaine Bernier of Chomedy ad Barbara Boettcher of Calary.

Cullin, a forrer Canadian singles champion now rowing for Brentwood College, finished second in the trials to Brian Thorpe of St. Catharines.

The oarsmen will not take part in meets a Bled, Yugoslavia, and Lcerne, Switzerland.

No Islanders vere selected to the shooting weightlifting or fencing teams

Kansas City gets short NHL reprieve

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Hockey League served notice Tuesday that the financially-troubled Kansas City Scouts franchise is ready to be terminated, but gave city officials 10 days to come up with an acceptible plan to keep hockey there.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said the Scouts had received a complaint note from the league informing the club that it had failed to pay dues and also had failed to repay a $300,000 loan secured from the league to complete the 1975-76 season.

Campbell said that Kansas City owner Edwin Thompson had informed the league that the present ownership of the club is "unable to continue operations and that it has no desire to try to reorganize its finances."

Campbell added that the league had no desire to take over the Scouts.

The fate of the troubled California Seals franchise also was discussed during the one-day session but the status of the franchise's sale remains uncertain, said Campbell.

The Seals have been financially troubled under several owners since the team was admitted to the league in 1967. Campbell said Seals owner Mel Swig has informed the league that he intends to exercise his option either to sell the club or move it from Oakland.

The NHL official said the 10-day extension was granted to Kansas City officials who appeared before the NHL's board of governors to "express their desire to keep the team in Kansas City.

"Mayor Charles Wheeler (of Kansas City) said he is interested in taking whatever action is necessary to help to retain the club," Campbell said. "He didn't say he and his staff would be successful, but he said he felt the people of Kansas City want hockey."

After the meeting, Wheeler said he was happy with the way the board of governors responded to his request and said he is confident that the city will keep franchise.

The league had been expected to terminate the franchise after Kansas City Kings of the National Basketball Association withdrew an offer to purchase the Scouts.

The Kings, who had shared the city's new Kemper Auditorium with the hockey team, apparently were set to buy the Scouts but a major stumbling block developed in negotiations when City Manager Robert Kipp rejected a request to provide the Kings with an escape clause in case the Scouts became financially burdened.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford bring the desired results do so you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Off and again, a leaf blown
by the wind

Falls on the broad ocean

'Tis never lost: where'er it
fate may blow,

The imprint of its settling's
left behind.

And so with every life,
whate'er its kind,

It shapes itself a place,
'tis destined so,

If hence in peace or turmoil
it should go,

Its influence ever lives,
as 'twas designed.

308-A CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep appreciation to the nurses and helpers of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, for their great consideration and kindness to my beloved wife and our mother, during her recent fatal illness, and a special thanks to Doctors H. P. Marshall and R. N. Young. H. E. Draper and family.

309 IN MEMORIAMS

OUR SON, DAVID KNIGHT—
The shades lengthen, evening comes
The busy world is hushed,
The fever of life is over,
And our work is done.
Then Lord, grant him safe lodging
And peace at last in Jesus name.
—From his loving family,
WE LOVED HIM.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

'Inflation still big foe'

Budget hits out at jobless benefits

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald announced tougher unemployment insurance rules Tuesday night in a budget that otherwise breaks no new ground in taxation or economic management.

Inflation remains the main enemy, the 44-year-old minister told the Commons in his first budget. And there are to be no drastic policy shifts despite the country's high rate of unemployment.

"I'd rather be seen as unimaginative rather than foolhardy," Macdonald told reporters who quizzed him about the absence of major new measures.

The budget includes only minor changes affecting individual taxpayers. But the total take from personal income tax is forecast to increase by about 26 per cent this fiscal year to $16 billion because of rising taxable incomes.

There are tax breaks for companies, including small business, and an end to a current dividend freeze in October.

A projected budget deficit of about $5 billion—roughly the same as last year—on total spending in excess of $41 billion, will have a "mildly stimulative" impact on the economy, Macdonald said.

Proposed changes to the operation of the unemployment insurance program will stretch the qualifying period for benefits to 12 weeks work from the present eight weeks. The changes require legislation before taking effect.

As an energy-conservation measure, the budget will extend a special excise tax currently levied against heavier automobiles to lighter vehicles. The proposal will add an extra tax ranging from $70 to $1,020, depending on weight, to anything bigger than a compact car by 1979.

Child - care tax allowances for working women and single-parent fathers are doubled to $30 a week per child or $1,000 a year, to a total maximum per family of $4,000. The change is effective for the 1976 tax year.

Unemployment, which touched a 15-year high of 7.4 per cent of the work force in April—761,000 jobless—is being monitored closely, Macdonald said.

But an estimated 250,000 new jobs will be created this year as the economy grows at a real rate of five per cent and the jobless rate will gradually decline.

The government believes its goal of reducing the annual inflation rate to eight per cent from nine by year-end is within reach. And it does not want to risk a return to double-digit inflation by introducing spending measures to reduce unemployment, the minister said.

The budget includes measures to tighten price controls under the eight-month-old anti-inflation program. The changes aim to prevent some companies from justifying price raises simply by showing that costs have risen.

In future, all companies regulated by the anti-inflation board will be limited by law to yearly profits equal to 85 per cent of those during previous years. This is down from 95 per cent previously allowed.

● Full budget coverage, Pages 6, 7, and 9.

At the same time, companies now may measure profit margins either on the previous five-year average or on 1975 levels, whichever benefits them most.

Over-all, these changes, effective in July, should make the controls apply more effectively against business, the finance minister said. He denied the changes were included to seek labor support for controls.

Government spending is projected at about $42.15 billion, up from $37.23 billion in the financial year ended March 31. The deficit on all operations cash needs is expected to be about $4.5 billion, a slight decline from last year, when all transactions are calculated.

Macdonald said federal spending this year will be up by about 14 per cent from last year—less than first projected because 1975-76 spending was higher than predicted. The rate of increase should be held to 11 per cent in the financial year starting April 1, 1977, he said.

Extending to 12 weeks the work qualifying period for receiving unemployment benefits will save up to $300 million a year in costs, Macdonald estimated. Unemployment benefits last year totalled $3.4 billion and they are projected to reach $3.78 billion this year.

About 330,000 people now eligible to receive benefit payments after eight to 11 weeks' work would be affected by the change when introduced in legislation. Macdonald said an effort will be made to grant longer benefit payments to claimants in high-unemployment regions. Operations of the manpower department and the unemployment insurance commission will be integrated in the interests of efficiency.

Among the corporate tax breaks announced in the budget is removal of the 12-per-cent federal sales tax on energy-saving equipment such as windpowered electrical generating gear.

The present two-year fast write-off on capital equipment is extended to include machinery bought between now and 1980 that uses industrial or municipal waste as a fuel source.

These were part of a package to encourage energy conservation. Macdonald also said all companies that embark on new exploration between now and July 1, 1979, will be permitted to write off costs at 100 per cent against taxes. Previously, companies whose principal business was not exploration could claim only up to 30 per cent annually.

The tax changes to promote conservation included the special excise tax on cars and a $100 tax on vehicle air conditioners.

For small business, the budget raised by 50 per cent to $150,000 the limit on annual profits they may earn to qualify for a reduced 20-per-cent tax rate.

Capital-cost allowances, under which companies can write off equipment purchases against taxable income, were raised to 30 per cent from 20

Highlights from budget

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

- Tighter rules proposed for unemployment insurance, including a qualifying work period of 12 weeks instead of eight.
- Some tax breaks provided for corporations, especially small businesses, and current freeze on corporate dividends ends in October.
- Minor changes in personal income tax include doubled allowances for child-care costs and increased limits for tax-free retirement investments.
- Current tariff cuts extended another year on imports of drugs, sugar, some fresh vegetables and applied temporarily on fresh pork, ham and macaroni.
- Special energy conservation tax on heavy cars increased and extended to smaller vehicles, along with new $100 tax on automobile air-conditioners.
- Anti-inflation rules governing prices and profits altered to block loopholes.
- Eight-per-cent air transportation tax applied in Canada extended to 2.3 million travellers buying tickets outside Canada.
- New registration rules ordered for charities to maintain tax-free status.
- Inflation remains the prime enemy in economic planning but high unemployment will be monitored carefully.
- Total government outlays to exceed $41 billion in 1976-77, with $5 billion deficit up slightly from last year.

B.C. ferries still in sea of troubles

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Transport Minister Jack Davis and ferry workers appeared to be sailing on different seas Tuesday as a continuing labor dispute kept the B.C. Ferries fleet an hour and a half to two hours behind schedule.

While Davis was telling the Legislature he had no knowledge of layoff orders being rescinded, a union spokesman was claiming that almost half the 420 orders were being withdrawn.

The slowdown has come as a result of the decision to cut staff and services June 1 as a means of reducing the fleet's deficit.

A major meeting of both licensed and unlicensed ship personnel was scheduled for Victoria this morning to plot the next move, which the union says could be an attempt to re-open discussions with the Public Service Commission.

Meanwhile, strike votes were beginning to "trickle in" Tuesday and a count was to be made Thursday.

But the prospect of a full-scale walkout early in June seemed highly unlikely. Both Davis and Labor Minister Allan Williams have indicated special legislation would be used to block any such action and union leaders say they don't want to give the government the opportunity to make the move.

The most likely avenue appeared to be continued delaying tactics by the union.

The work-to-rule campaign started Friday by the licensed officers at the beginning of the Victoria Day weekend was continued Saturday and Sunday, but lifted Monday to allow holidayers a chance to arrive home on time.

It began again Tuesday in what the B.C. Government Employees' Union says is an ongoing basis. It involves head counts of passengers in accordance with the Canada Steamship Act, and in some cases, single-lane loading of vehicles.

By 8:30 p.m. Tuesday ferries on the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay route were up to two hours late and an hour and a half behind schedule between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen.

There was one cancellation involving the 8 p.m. sailing from Horseshoe Bay to Langdale on the Sunshine Coast.

Davis was asked in the Legislature by Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) if he was considering a union proposal that layoffs be held in abeyance until September.

Davis repeated an earlier statement that overtime was the crux of the problem and

Tel Aviv bomb kills two

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A woman security guard and an arriving passenger were killed at Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion airport Tuesday when the passenger's suitcase blew up while being examined.

Ten other persons in the crowded arrival hall were injured.

A second suitcase accompanying the passenger, who arrived on an Austrian Airlines flight from Vienna, exploded harmlessly as security guards dragged it with a rope from the terminal building.

The blast shattered windows, sending shards of glass flying across the building like shrapnel. Hundreds of persons fled the building in terror.

Authorities said the suspicious passenger, carrying a Dutch passport in the name of Bigfoot's victim?

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — Cherie Darvell, 23, of Redding, Calif., reported abducted in rugged mountains by a hairy, ape-like creature known as Bigfoot, has shown up screaming outside a rural resort, but apparently unhurt.

"She's not in too bad a shape," Humboldt County Sheriff Gene Cox said, adding he believed the whole affair was a hoax.

Miss Darvell's friends said she was an unemployed beautician who also used the name Cherie Nelson.

She was one of five members of an independent film crew trying to photograph Bigfoot.

Retirement savings aid brings cheer in Victoria

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

The retirement industry, a major one in Victoria, appeared to be somewhat cheered about Tuesday's latest budget proposals, particularly with regard to retirement income.

"Boy, that's a big one," enthused Alan Aldous, manager of Royal Trust, when told about the proposal to end the freeze on dividend income as of Oct. 15, limiting an increase in dividend payments to 8 per cent.

"There's nothing wrong with that limit," Aldous said. "It puts it on a par with wages and that's fair.

"You know that kind of income is important here. People, however, still seem to think that investors are people in high silk hats, but they're not. They're everybody these days."

The increase that is to be allowed in registered retirement savings plans contributions was also greeted warmly by the Royal Trust manager. They go from a limit of $4,000 to $5,500 and those in company pension plans can increase their RRSP contribution to $3,500 from $2,500.

"Many of our clients, I'd say easily more than half, have been demanding this kind of thing," he said.

"Anything that will encourage thrift and deter spending these days is welcome," Aldous added.

The trust company manager went on to say that the Registered Home Owner Savings Plan (RHOSP) changes don't mean all that much, although he could see why they might be needed.

"Our experience with them is that they're more of a tax-saving thing rather than a retirement item," he said.

Taking a slightly different tack on the subject of dividends was James Bassett, manager of Midland-Doherty investment brokers. Speaking as the retiring chairman of the Victoria Investment Dealers Association, he said it was "unfortunate" that the dividend increases were to be limited to 8 per cent.

"You have to consider that inflation could be running at more than 10 per cent. We (the association) had been trying to get this," he said.

Bassett added that other investment dealers were bound to be as disappointed as he was that there was no mention in the budget speech of government adopting their recommendation with regard to accounting for inflation.

"But they're recognizing the effects of inflation by allowing a wider scope in RRSPs," Bassett said. "That and widening the scope of qualified investments is bound to enhance the raising of capital for investment purposes."

Victim couldn't even thank his rescuers

LITTLESTONE, England (CP)—Victor Haisell found himself in a most embarrassing situation when he swallowed his false teeth while out in his dinghy.

A fishing boat rescued him and took him ashore to a waiting ambulance. A coast guard spokesman said: "He couldn't say a word."

Hays admits Ray 'relationship'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressman Wayne Hays admitted in an emotional house speech Tuesday that he had "a relationship" with Elizabeth Ray, the woman who claims Hays maintained her as his mistress on the congressional payroll.

But Hays, addressing some 300 colleagues in the hushed house chamber, said he had broken off the relationship and said "My conscience is now clear."

"My first reaction was to protect my marriage," the recently-wed 64-year-old Ohio Democrat said. "I have committed the grievous error of not telling all the facts."

Hours before the confessional speech, Hays again denied having an affair with Miss Ray, a 33-year-old blonde who made $14,000 a year until Hays fired her Monday from the house subcommittee staff position he obtained for her, and demanded the house ethics committee clear his name by investigation.

"Six weeks ago I married the woman I love more than anyone else," he said in his floor speech. "Prior to that time I had a relationship with Elizabeth Ray."

"I was then legally separated and single and it was voluntary on her part and on mine," said Hays, a divorcee who married Patricia Peak, a secretary in his Ohio congressional district office, in mid-April.

Hays
. . . grievous error

"I have been called more names in the press and elsewhere than any member of this house. I have been called arrogant, ruthless, cold-blooded, vicious, tempermental and mean. I am also capable of emotion and error and I have erred," said Hays.

"My conscience," he said, "is now clear."

Some members came up and shook his hand and patted his shoulder. Others just sat quietly, then left the chamber.

Hays said he still denies he hired Miss Ray in his capacity as chairman of the house administration committee just so she could serve as his mistress — as she claimed in the account carried in Sunday's Washington Post. She said her only duties were to have dinner and sex about once a week with Hays.

The justice department has ordered the FBI to investigate Miss Ray's allegations and determine whether federal funds were misused.

Hays told his colleagues Miss Ray had been hired for

Slam at Wallace's 'interest' draws 'guttersnipe' retort

A Social Credit backbencher Tuesday night accused Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) of "just looking after his personal friend Fraser McColl" in pushing for the Douglas-McKenzie site for Victoria's third hospital.

The government has told the Capital Region board that it will approve a Helmcken Road site instead.

The accusation that Wallace was "just looking after his personal friend Fraser McColl," came from James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) as the house debated health estimates.

McColl, he said, was a former executive of the Oak Bay Conservative party association.

Wallace did not answer the accusation in the house. But he said later outside that he had expected that the government would resort to "guttersnipe tactics."

He said: "The facts speak for themselves. I just feel sure . . . I am completely convinced of the reasonableness of the arguments I presented, not the least of which is the fact that the health and hospital planning commission of greater Victoria decided by an 11-1 vote to recommend the McKenzie-Douglas site."

He continued: "I just assumed that I would be dealing with the kind of guttersnipe tactics you can expect from the Social Credit party; when all my reasonable arguments couldn't be refuted any other way, someone would come in in the way Chabot did and present this simply as a conflict of interest."

Wallace said the municipality of Saanich is currently negotiating with commercial developers to use that property as a commercial site in which case it would be worth close to double its value as a hospital site.

Owners of the 25 acres are Fraser McColl and Gordon Rolston, partners in Rand and M Development Co., Ltd.

Earlier, Health Minister Robert McClelland told the house that the owners of the McKenzie-Douglas site paid $374,000 less than three years ago for the property which the Capital Region Board had been asked to pay $2.5 million for.

"We are being asked to pay $100,000 an acre for land purchased for about $13,000 an acre," he said.

"This government can't support that kind of speculation."

He had been replying to Wallace who continued to ask why the minister wanted the hospital built on the Helmcken Road site.

Access to a hospital at Helmcken Road would be difficult, Wallace said, since it was located close to the greatest bottleneck in the Victoria area on the Trans-Canada Highway.

He noted that all obstetrics would be moved to the new hospital.

"In light of documented evidence of traffic problems, there would be a real chance that we will have a higher incidence of babies being born en route to hospital," Wallace said.

McClelland said that while access would be more difficult from the east and south, it would be easier from the north and west.

Decision today

A new round of talks aimed at finding grounds for settlement of the civic, regional and school worker strike here, is due to begin here today.

The last session adjourned Friday night for the long weekend and, at that time, provincial mediator Clark Gilmour issued a set of guidelines under which the talks would resume today. Included in the guidelines was a stipulation that the attitudes of delegates from both sides must indicate that they are willing to undertake serious bargaining.

When talks adjourned Friday, spokesmen said little progress had been made in the session which continued for three days.

Meanwhile, a statement issued by the Nanaimo District Teachers Association Monday, said it was imperative for the good of the community that the dispute be settled quickly.

The statement said that the association is deeply concerned over alarming lack of student progress, increasing high school student dropout rate, drastic drops in attendance, the doubling or tripling of the failure rate at secondary levels and dirty classrooms and washroom facilities.

"The association recognizes and acknowledges that some good educational efforts are being attempted during the dispute.

"But," the statement said. "It also acknowledges that the adverse conditions existing far outweight the good, and will continue to grow steadily worse as the dispute continues."

The president of Local 401 of The Canadian Union of Public Employees, Stan Bosher, used h v of rsumption of talks to issue a strong attack against the Mid-Island Public Employers Association.

Rock promoter, police at odds

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

A rock-music promoter and Saanich police are at odds following Monday's free concert at Mount Douglas Park.

Victoria promoter Frank Dimarzio of Scorpio Productions was incensed Tuesday after learning that Saanich police intend to recommend to Saanich council that no further permits be issued for rock concerts at the park.

"Is this a free park for public use or is this a park for council to recommend who to use?" Dimarzio asked.

Insp. Ted Owens of the Saanich police said Tuesday that the open-air concert drew 8,000 people for the six-hour period, that traffic congestion would have prevented any emergency vehicles from getting through had the need arisen and that there were complaints of open use of liquor and drugs.

Owens said, however, that a check Tuesday morning by his department showed that the cleanup after the concert was a "good job" and that ground keepers reported no major damage.

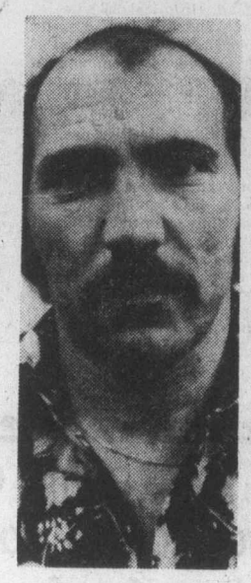

Dimarzio said Saanich police patrols did not stop once at the concert but only drove by. There were no arrests.

He objected strenuously to Owens' crowd estimate and said the concert was "lucky if there were 2,000 there."

Owens said he was not there personally — the figure of 8,000 came from his officers' reports.

On the use of liquor, Dimarzio admitted there "was some drinking going on, but not that much."

"Pot? I couldn't quite pinpoint anybody on that," Dimarzio answered.

Building a rubble-rouser

By ELEANOR BOYLE

Not many people know how to knock down a building in the middle of a city.

Even the experts run into problems — and Campbell Building demolition superintendent Stu Glendinning had one of the first of his 30-year construction career Tuesday.

Part of a brick wall fronting on Douglas Street broke out from under the seventh-storey floor where columns were being removed about 3 p.m., hurling bricks to the street below.

No one was injured but one girl whom Glendinning said appeared deaf mute and did not jump out of the way, was momentarily frightened and almost fainted.

He said about 200 bricks fell to the ground while much of the wall caved inward. It was scheduled to have remained intact until the floor above had been taken out.

But Glendinning said the 1912 structure is fragile and has only four inches of reinforcing bar through ceilings where most buildings have at least two feet of it.

"You can't read a building if you don't have the blueprints," he added. "The way it was built I don't think there were any blueprints."

Precautions are taken during city demolitions so similar incidents seldom occur.

Passersby are normally protected from flying rubble by planks on scaffolding, but they only accommodate the material that should fall down — not the stuff that comes down accidentally.

Glendinning has a crew of eight on the job, hauling away tons of broken concrete and odds and ends of the landmark each day.

A Vancouver resident, he moves around the province on just such projects because few other people have his expertise.

Under his belt are jobs such as one in Calgary recently where three feet of sidewalk was all the leeway he had for taking down a 150-foot building in the heart of the city.

In Victoria he has five feet of room on each side.

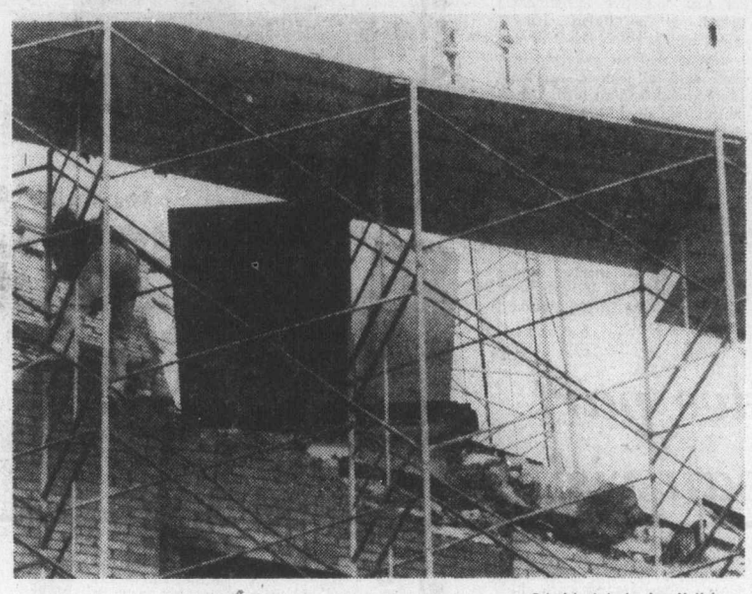

There are, of course, tricks to the art, Glendinning said on the job site this week.

First, don't let the huge crane bucketing rubble away swing out over Fort or the sidewalk — take a little more time and keep the action within the rear workspace.

Secondly, shield any sidewalk below with planks and plywood on the outside scaffolding when walls are being jackhammered.

And use the knowledge that walls can be pulled inward as easily as pushed outward.

Shaving the concrete and brick building step by step, Glendinning of the Johnston Terminals-owned Merchants' Contractors and his workers have so far lopped more than 14 feet off an estimated 120 that made it Victoria's tallest structure when it was completed in 1912.

Penny arcade law almost sure to pass

A proposed new bylaw to bring penny arcade operators under stricter controls is virtually assured of approval in principle at Thursday's meeting of Victoria city council.

Mayor Michael Young made a strong case Tuesday in favor of the new bylaw.

The mayor told aldermen at the weekly "caucus meeting" that city council should get involved in regulating such businesses.

Referring to juveniles operating pinball machines, the mayor asked: "Where do they get the money from and what do they do when they run out of money?"

Ald. John Hayes expressed some doubts as to the effectiveness of the bylaw which would prohibit anyone under 17 from entering a pool hall or penny arcade.

"If they are dispersed, where else will they congregate?" he asked.

But the majority of aldermen was in favor of "at least trying" to bring the situation under control.

Ald. Ronald McKenzie told the meeting that city police recently picked up a 12-year-old boy in a downtown amusement centre.

The boy had 70 cents on him when he was driven to his Esquimalt home by police. It was later found out that he had taken $20 from his mother's purse, McKenzie said.

He added that the owner of the establishment had promised the mother to reimburse her for the $20 loss.

The business in question, he said, was the Marble Machine at 1320 Broad.

Harvey Carter, the owner, said last week if council approved the bylaw he would be out of business.

Worley

That wonderful world soon home for Worley

Ron Worley didn't get a formal Socred farewell Tuesday.

The new generation of a B.C. political party that was his lifeblood for the 20 years he worked alongside "the old man" as he calls W. A. C. Bennett, didn't give him a platform as he attended what may be his last Social Credit meeting.

Worley, 55, tanned and smiling as he anticipated a move to San Diego, Calif., had hoped to say just a few words to Saanich and the Islands party members meeting at Royal Oak school.

The main speaker, riding MLA Hugh Curtis, knew he was in the audience but did not acknowledge it, and Worley said later, he'd intended to make his presence known with a question or two but "you don't embarrass a minister."

It was almost understandable he didn't get a chance to rival Curtis.

Worley has little good to say about the new Socred government, and in an interview after the meeting partly blamed its "heavy handed" economic tactics for B.C.'s cost of living.

That's part of the reason he's moving to the warmer climes he has been visiting for years as a B.C. tourist promoter — and where he will assume a position as director of a company he would not name.

Elaborating in a paper written to clarify a recent "rumor" in the Legislature that he had been fired, Worley listed moves by the new government that had shown "arrogance and brutal means . . . lack of competence and humanity.

So Worley, on his 25th anniversary — to the day — that he joined the party, walked away from a meeting full of faces he hadn't recognized.

Author of The Wonderful World of W. A. C. Bennett, he'll be off before September for a new home, career and another wonderful world.

Robbery a fadeout

If there is anywhere in the world of crime a rulebook on holdups, a man who staged one Monday in Saanich has not read it.

Such a rulebook, if it exists, would contain (a) never let a customer interrupt you and (b) never try to escape by a locked door.

Saanich police said both those strange things happened after a man entered Shoppers' Drug Mart, 3575 Douglas, about 6 p.m. Monday and walked up to cashier-clerk Ada Del Rosario, 20, with one hand under his jacket as if there was a gun there.

Police said the man said "I want it all in bills" but, before the clerk could say or do anything, the only other customer in the store — another man — walked up with a handful of batteries for purchase.

The holdupman stepped back to let the customer go ahead. In the process of making his purchase, the customer asked the clerk if the batteries were any good and the holdupman took it upon himself to reply, "Oh yeah, they're okay."

The clerk said nothing to the customer about the holdupman and the customer made his purchase and left. The holdupman walked forward again and the clerk asked, 'Are you sure?" The reply was, "Oh yeah, I'm sure."

About $130 was handed over and the holdupman turned to a nearby door for a quick exit. It was locked. As he tried it several times, the clerk sounded an alarm and called to a nearby pharmacist for assistance.

Police said the ma nthen returned toward the clerk and threw the money back on the counter. Officers arrested a man in the store and found no gun.

In Victoria provincial court Tuesday, a Saanich charge of robbery with threat of violence was read against Michael James Loeppky, 20, of 834 Royal Oak. At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel William McElmoyle, he was remanded one week by Judge Blake Allan for further hearing.

Saanich to air Quadra plans

Saanich council will discuss a development proposal for 28 acres on upper Quadra Street Thursday.

The proposal, from D.B.C. Estates, was tabled Tuesday at a meeting of the lands, planning and housing committee. The committee, which includes all Saanich aldermen, will include the proposal in a lengthy session Thursday called to look at the Quadra area in general.

The property is on the east side of Quadra, straddling the Victoria and Lake Hill districts boundary.

In a letter to the committee, D.B.C. Estates has suggested mixed housing for the site, including low-profile rental apartments near the Quadra Street frontage, zero-lot-line homes in the centre, some townhouses, and conventional single-family homes on high ground at the eastern boundary.

Demolition permit takes cake

Victoria city council aspired to the difficult, if not impossible Tuesday — eat its cake and keep it.

At their weekly informal caucus meeting, the aldermen hesitantly decided not to hold up any longer a demolition permit for a Samuel Maclure-designed house at 913 Burdett.

At the same time, they instructed Ald. Ronald McKenzie to talk the owners out of demolishing the house.

The decision to approve the issuing of a permit came after a lengthy debate during which Mayor Michael Young insisted that council didn't have the right to withhold demolition permits.

A lawyer himself, the mayor instructed council in the finer points of the law. Council could regulate, but withholding a demolition permit might be interpreted as discrimination, he said.

His point was directed particularly at Ald. Murray Glazier who had said the city shouldn't issue any demolition permits unless the applicants had a plan for a better or higher use of the property.

In many cases, he said, a developer will demolish a good home, leave the site vacant for a while and then apply for rezoning.

"The record shows that they are successful in getting properties rezoned," Glazier added. But Young maintained that the city didn't have the right to ask for future plans at the time of demolition permit application.

Cotillion Ball at Empress

Today's schedule of Victorian Days events is expected to be highlighted by the Cotillion Ball at the Empress starting at 8:30 p.m.

A 15-piece orchestra and elaborate buffet dinner will await guests who are to wear Victorian costumes.

Today's schedule:

10 a.m. — Painting and crafts display and artists at work, 700 block Yates Street.

10 — Display of historical gowns by Costume Society of B.C., Emily Carr Art Gallery.

11—Start of four hours of community entertainment by schools, clubs, bands and senior citizens' groups, Centennial Square.

Noon—Secretaries luncheon, Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, the Empress.

8 p.m.—Mascot Productions' production of Broadway musical Gypsy, McPherson Playhouse.

8:30—Cotillion Ball, the Empress.

Brother new champ

DENMAN ISLAND — Three-time world champion oyster shucker Kenneth Barkley of Union Bay was dethroned Sunday by his younger brother, Leonard.

Leonard, 19, shucked 62 oysters in the five-minute time limit, highlight of the two-day Denman Island oyster festival, to capture the trophy.

He had 50 points (12 cuts) while his older brother shucked 48 oysters (no cuts) to finish in runner-up spot. Another member of the Barkley clan, Mrs. Barbara Barkley, shucked 47 oysters while daughter Patricia finished in fourth spot with 44 points.
